Charley Baumgartner and wife who have been visiting here with relatives, returned to their home in Rowan Thursday.

Mrs. Elder, Miss Jennie Elder and Mrs. H. M. Hoag started Monday evening for Los Angeles. Cal., where they will visit for some time.

A couple of our young men got into a dispute Monday evening and repaired to an alley to settle their differences. The result is that one of them now carries a huge chunk of beefsteak on his upper lip. We promised not to mention any names.

The writer had the pleasure Monday of being shown the gas plant recently put in his furniture store by G. F. Schuler. It is without a doubt the finest gas light we have seen for some time. It is called the "Doran Gas Light." Mr Schuler has in his store three lights, two of which are 1200 candle power and the other 600 candle power, these lamps lighting his large store to perfection.

Ell Center

Special Correspondent.

Happy New Year.

Good-bye 1901.

Joseph Stork has sold his 80 acre farm to Fred Haupt for $50 per acre.

Mrs. Dennison, of Minneapolis, visited her sister, Mrs. Rice. last week.

Sidney Patterson, who has been living near Ft. Dodge, has returned to his home here.

A pleasant party was held at Frank Patterson's Friday evening.

Wm. Badker, of Crystal Lake. while visiting friends here last week, attended the Literary Thursday evening and was given a hearty welcome as all visitors are.

Harry Rice and George Taylor wish to inform the people of Garner that they are not donating horse blankets this winter, especially this cold weather. Papers please copy.

Quite a delegation from here attended the reception at the commodious Yahnke home in Avery township last Thursday evening given in honor of the marriage of their son Henry to Miss Gertie Lewis.

The Braund family held a pleasant reunion at their home in east Ell Christmas. Those present were Joe Harr's family of Clear Lake, the Braund and Durr families of Garner, John Braund of Klemme and Ray Burman. of Ell Center. On Christmas eve a good program was rendered after which the tree was relieved of its beautiful presents. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. On Christmas day the guests gathered around the family board to do honor to the feast in store for them. This reunion will long be remembered by all present.

Don't Live Together.

Constipation and health never go together. DeWitt's Little Early Risers promote easy action of the bowels without distress. "I have been troubled with costiveness nine years," says J. O. Greene, Depauw, Ind. "I have tried many remedies but Little Early Risers give best results," J. L. Harr.

Goodell

From the Globe.

Mrs. M. Skow is reported seriously ill.

Howard Africa, accompanied by Miss Ellsworth, of Kanawha, visited in town Christmas day.

Henry Wilson departed Friday for Omaha where he will work in a packing house this winter.

Louis Henchen, of Garner, was here repairing a furnace for G. W. Butts last Thursday and Friday.

Rev. C. Nolte went to Rudd, Ia., Tuesday, where he performed the marriage ceremony of a nephew on Christmas day.

Roy Fuller went to Clear Lake, Monday, called there by the serious sickness of his father who is taking treatment there. Mr. Fuller had his thumb amputated and was getting along nicely so far as that was concerned, but he recently had a stroke of paralysis.

New Century Comfort.

Millions are daily finding a world of comfort in Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It kills pain from burns, scalds, cuts, bruises; conquers ulcers and fever sores; cures eruptions, salt rheum; boils and felons; removes corns and warts. Best pile cure on earth. Only 25c at Harr's drug store.

Children Especially Liable.

Burns, bruises and cuts are extremely painful and if neglected often result in blood poisoning. Children are especially liable to such mishaps because not so careful. As a remedy DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled. Draws out the fire, stops the pain, soon heals the wound. Beware of counterfeits. Sure cure for piles. "DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured my baby of eczema after two physicians gave her up," writes James Mock, N. Webster, Ind. "The sores were so bad she soiled two to five dresses a day." J. L. Harr.

Britt

From the News.

The Des Moines Leader says that T. A. Potter will be appointed as one of the members of Governor Cummins staff.

Quite a large crowd of Britt people went to Corwith Monday afternoon where they took the Illinois excursion train on the Iowa Central for Peoria.

Frank Nugent left Christmas night for Anamosa, where he has received an appointment as superintendent of one of the departments in the penitentiary.

Mrs. W. E. Bra ford was called suddenly to Marshalltown last Tuesday on account of the serious illness of her husband, who had been visiting at that place.

Willie Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Harris, residing in Crystal township, had the misfortune to lose a hand in a corn shredder one day last week. Last reports are to the effect that the injured member is doing nicely.

A Profitable Inuestment.

"I was troubled for about seven years with my stomach and in bed half my time," says E. Demick, Somerville, Ind. "I spent about $1,000 and never could get anything to help me until I tried Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. I have taken a few bottles and am entirely well." You don't live by what you eat, but by what you digest and assimilate. If your stomach doesn't digest your food you are really starving. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does the stomach's work by digesting your food. You don't have to diet. Eat all you want. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles. J.L.Harr.

Corwith

From the Hustler.

E. C. Benner's oldest child was taken ill after Mr. B had made all preparation to go on the Illinois excursion and he and his wife had to remain at home.

W. L. Monlux will go to Garner the first of the year to assume the charge of Alf Schneider's photograph gallery. Mr. M. has been with us for the past 3½ years. He is a good photographer, a young man of exemplary habits and has a host of Corwith friends who wish him well in his change.

Chas. Hursch, who worked for Jas. Delaney, has gone to Waverly to visit his parents. He will return in about two weeks to go into the cigar business with his brother at Britt.

This week Prof. Thompson and family remove from our midst to Cherokee. Our best wishes go with them and may the professor wax fat as the quill pusher of Cherokee's leading newspaper.

A. W. Williams school house caught fire Thursday morning last week from an overheated pipe. There was no serious damage, as a crew that was shelling corn at Mr. Williams' responded at once and soon had the fire under control.

Heads Should Never Ache

Never endure this trouble. Use at once the remedy that stopped it for Mrs. N. A. Webster, of Winnie, Va. She writes "Dr. King's New Life Pills wholly cured me of sick headaches I had suffered from for two years." Cure headache, constipation, billiousness. 25c at Harr's drug store.

REPORT IS DISAPPOINTING.

Major Turner Recommends Four Troop Post.

Des Moines, Dec. 30.—Major Turner, engineer in charge of the work of construction at Fort Des Moines, has forwarded his recommendations and reports to the war department at Washington, together with all his papers, in anticipation of being recalled and assigned to other duty as requested by him some time ago.

The substance of his recommendations have been given out and will prove a disappointment to the people of Des Moines. He recommends that the total cost of improvements, including grading, buildings, rifle ranges, sewerage, etc., be not to exceed $676,000, and that the post be equipped for four troops of cavalry of eighty-five men each instead of for a regiment of cavalry, which would necessitate providing for about 1,400 people.

It has been the understanding of the people of Des Moines from the outset that Fort Des Moines was to be a regimental post and that the buildings would be erected to provide for twelve troops instead of four. It was with this understanding that the citizens of Des Moines contributed forty thousand dollars to purchase the four hundred acres of land that have been deeded to the government as a site for a post, and it was with a regimental post in view that all negotiations with the water company have been carried on.

It is the opinion of members of the committee that the war department will not recede from its order of some months ago making this a regimental post, and that sufficient pressure will be brought to bear on the department to secure a full regimental post for Des Moines.

DES MOINES COURT HOUSE

River Fronters Begin Campaign Against Present Siters.

Des Moines, Dec. 28.—D. H. Kooker has filed an amendment to his original petition for an injunction to restrain the Polk county board of supervisors from going ahead with the work of constructing a new court house. The amendment practically constitutes a new action and it asked that the board be enjoined from continuing the work on the ground that the plaintiff believes it is a building to cost between $750,000 and $1,000,000 while the original proposition calls for the expenditure of about $400,000.

It is expected the petition will be presented immediately to the court and the issue heard. The river fronters are extremely anxious that there shall be no delay, as it is the intention of the board to begin the razing of the old building Jan. 1 This is believed to be only a beginning of the endless litigation the river fronters are planning as obstacles in the way of erecting a new court house. It is unnderstood that they will seek to prevent the laying of tracks from the Des Moines Union to the present site necessary for the purpose of carrying stone so that a delay will be occassioned. They will make application for restraining orders whenever there are grounds offered, expecting no permanent relief but rather to delay operations as much as possible. It has been given out that the cause is not a lost one and that it will be a long time before the new court house is finally located and completed.

AGAIN INDICTED.

Appanoose County Officials Once More in Trouble.

Centerville, Dec. 27.—Sheriff G. E. Climie, Deputy Sheriff Thomas Climie and Justice of the Peace James Zimmerman were each presented Christmas presents by the grand jury last evening in the way of indictments for acts of a criminal nature. Sheriff Climie was especially well remembered as there were three indictments found against him, one in conjunction with Justice Zimmerman for conspiracy, one for gaining money under false pretenses, and one for perjury. The indictment against Deputy Thomas Climie is also for perjury. Both perjury indictments are founded upon affidavits made in the application of the state to suspend Climie from the office which was heard at the last term of court. The Climie boys made affidavit of certain things which were alledged to have happened in the clerk's office the evening after the first indictments were found against Climie last fall. The conspiracy indictment and the indictment for obtaining money under false pretenses are founded upon the alleged unlawful transactions in committing tramps and collecting fees therefor.

NEARLY KILLED BY A BRUTE.

Clinton Woman Charged Drunken Husband With The Crime.

Clinton, Dec. 28.—As a result of a brawl and spree Mrs. Bernard McGovern of Lincoln township, this county, lies at the hospital in this city with three broken ribs and numerous bruises, which she says were inflicted by her husband, while in a drunken condition. On complaint of the woman, McGovern has been arrested and is now a prisoner in the county jail. He will be given a preliminary hearing as soon as his wife, who is now confined to her bed, is able to appear in court.

Big Loan Company Fails.

Ottumwa, Dec. 27.—Geo. F. Hall, president of the Otuumwa Loan and Building association, has made application for the appointment of a receiver for the company alleging that the company wants to wind up its affairs on account of the obstacles in the present laws. The company's assets are $26,000 and the liabilities $45,000.

SHAW TO ENTER CABINET

HIS APPOINTMENT ANNOUNCED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Further Announcement Made that Secretary Wilson Will Stay in Office.

Washington, Dec. 26.—It was announced authoritatively last evening that Gov. Leslie M. Shaw, of Iowa, would be appointed secretary of the treasury to succeed Secretary Lyman J. Gage. There will be no change in the office of secretary of agriculture, Secretary Wilson, also of Iowa, continuing to retain that portfolio. The date of transfer of the treasury department will depend upon the mutual convenience of the outgoing and incoming secretary, Mr. Gage having signified an entire willingness to remain at the head of this department until such time as it may be agreeable to his successor to take hold Governor Shaw will be inducted into his new office some time in January. It has been known for two or three days that Governor Shaw was slated for appointment to succeed Secretary Gage, but it was not until today that the Iowa executive accepted the tender made to him.

The definite announcement of Gov. Shaw's selection for the position of secretary of the treasury gave the greatest satisfaction to the Iowans resident here. They regard him as a man equipped for the place and feel confident the appointment will give genral satisfaction. Secretary Wilson voiced these sentiments when asked about Governor Shaw last night and he added that the governor was better known to the people east of the Mississippi river than any man west of the Mississippi on the question of finance.

To Senator Dolliver of Iowa, whose relations with Governor Shaw have been close, his selection for the treasury portfolio gave the greatest pleasure. "The governor," he said, "has demonstrated by speeches delivered before chambers of commerce and banking associations of the United States a profound knowledge of the theory and mechanism of our banking and currency system. He is not only a student of these question but has been for many years a successful banker. In selecting him the president undoubtedly acted in a great measure upon his personal familiarity with Governor Shaw's abilities in dealing with the special subjects that belong to the treasury department. His appointment will be especially gratifying to the people of Iowa, and indeed, the whole west, and I have no doubt satisfactory to the great business and commercial interests of the United States."

Dubuque, Dec. 26.—Senator Allison spoke as follows regarding the appointment of Governor Shaw to the treasury portfolio: "The appointment is a most excellent one. Governor Shaw has given close attention to financial questions, and has discussed these questions in many states with great ability. He has a wide knowledge of public affairs, has shown ability in administration as governor of Iowa, is able, alert and industrious in every respect and is well equipped for the position of secretary of the treasury. This appointment will be well received in Iowa and the country, and will justify the choice made by the president."

Roosevelt Wires to Shaw.

Des Moines, Dec. 27.—Governor Shaw received last evening his first direct communication from President Roosevelt on the secretaryship of the treasury. It came by wire and was as follows:

"White House, Washington, D. C., Dec. 26, 1901.—Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, Governor of Iowa, Des Moines: I am delighted to learn that you will accept the portfolio of secretary of the treasury. Have written.

"Tneodore Roosevelt,
"President."

SHAW MAY HELP GET IT.

Will Have Much to Say as to Iowa's Big War Claim.

Des Moines, Dec. 28.—As secretary of the treasury Governor Shaw will be in position to exercise a direct influence over the heavy war claim of the state for the payment of interest by the federal government on the civil war bonds and war warrants. The claim of the state with the evidence presented has been presented by Secretary Gage to the auditor of the treasury for the war department. This officer is a treasury official, not one of the war department, and the investigation of such claims as this is in his jurisdiction.

Attorney General Mullan and Capt. J. S. Lothrop of Sioux City forwarded to Washington the statement of the state's claim against the federal government several weeks ago. It was discovered there were a number of items omitted in the first statement. In consequence an amended statement has been prepared, signed by the governor and forwarded to the treasury department. The amendments were signed by the governor yesterday. He remarked as he did so, in a jocular way, that it was just as well for him to sign it before it was too late and before he was in the treasury department.

The omitted items in the first statement amounted to $1,060.68. The total sum of the state's claim, with these omissions added in, is $456,533.29. Attorney General Mullan said yesterday he did not believe this sum would be scaled down to any great extent. He thinks the state is in a fair way to recover nearly the entire amount.

Thiele Goes Up For Life.

Red Oak, Dec. 27.—S. G. Thiel, who stabbed his wife to death on the streets of Villisca a few months ago, must pay the penalty of his crime. The jury has found him juilty of murder in the first degree and recommnded life imprisonment.

EYES TURN TO VENEZUELA

GERMAN NAVAL DEMONSTRATION IS IMMINENT.

Warships of All the Powers Gather to Observe Developments — Venezuela Not Inclined to Yield.

Washington, Dec. 28.—The gathering of German warships in the vicinity of Venezuela, and the presence in the same locality of many American, British, French and other foreign warships, directs attention to the imminence of the naval demonstration Germany is about to make against Venezuela. Thus far the German government has not made known the exact details of her proposed move, the official communication to the United States being confined to an inquiry as to the attitude of this government on the question of a demonstration in view of the purpose on the part of Germany not to acquire any permanent foothold in Venezuela. The answer of this government was entirely satisfactory to the German authorities, who since have proceeded with the execution of their plans for coercing Venezuela.

It is said to be probable that the first move by Germany will be the establishment of a blockade of Venzuelan ports so as to prevent the introduction of food products into Venezuela, and thus starve the besieged into submission. Venezuela, it is said, is entirely dependent on the outside world for its supply of corn, which is a staple among the Venezuelans. The Germans are expected to occupy one or more of the main ports of Venezuela, probably La Guaira and Maracoibo. In this connection most positive assurance has been given to the United States government that the occupation is to be temporary and only for such length of time as will permit the collection of the debt due Germany, thus disposing of the question that there is any ulterior purpose to establish a German coaling station on Venezuelan soil.

On the part of Venezuela it is semi-officially understood that President Castro has made known that he has prepared for any eventuality. There is complete silence, however, as to the defensive measures Venezuela is adopting, but there is no indication that she is laying mines or preparing in any way to resist an occupation of La Guaira or Maracaibo, which are such open seaports that they are practically defenseless against such powerful armament as the Germans can bring to bear. The reliance of Venezuela appears to be on the practical difficulties Germany will encounter, and, while corn is much used, in an emergency there are many other cereals which can be put to use. Moreover, the natives are said to be meat eaters almost exclusively, and to have no need for corn or outside products. With reference to German occupation of one or more ports it is thought to be likely that Venezuela will rely on harrassing the invaders. The fresh water supply of La Guaira and Maracaibo is drawn from interior streams and lakes and these are not expected to be cut off. The interior of Venezuela is regarded safe as it is, as it would take at least 200,000 German soldiers to make headway through the wild and uneven country against guerilla tactics.

There appears also to be much reliance on the part of Venezuela in the sentiment and sympathy which can be aroused within the United States when the European invader is actually operating on American soil and Venezuela issues a declaration of war, largely on the fact that foreign capital is invested in the large Venezuelan ports and would be the heaviest sufferers from any destruction wrought by the Germans.

WILSON WILL STAY.

President at Cabinet Meeting Says He Wishes Him to Stay.

Washington, Dec. 28.—The cabinet met as usual yesterday, but no business was transacted. The session was occupied in the exchange of holiday reminiscences. The most positive denials are given to the story published that F. D. Coburn, secretary of the Kansas state board of agriculture, is to succeed Secretary Wilson. When the fact that Governor Shaw has been tendered the treasury portfolio was made known the announcement was made that Secretary Wilson would remain in the cabinet, and yesterday the same statement was reiterated at the white house in the most emphatic manner. The president is anxious that Secretary Wilson should remain, and the secretary himself has informed the president that he would be glad to do so.

FOUR HUNDRED DIE IN FIGHT.

General Marin, Colombian Revolutionary Leader, Turned Down.

Colon, Colombia, Dec. 28, via Galveston, Texas.—News has been received here that General Marin, the Colombian revolutionary leader, attacked Honda, on the Magdalena river, December 9, with 1,200 men. The garrison consisting of 430 men, fought from 6 a. m. until 12:30 p. m. At 8 a. m. the garrison received reinforcements numbering 200 men. The battle started on the outskirts of the city and ended at Caracalla, nine miles from Honda. Bayonets and machetes were used. The government forces were victorious. Four hundred men were killed during the battle.

Hon. J. E. Blythe a Candidate.

Mason City, Dec. 28.—James E. Blythe, who has figured quite prominently in the politics of the state, is an avowed candidate for congress, in the fourth district. The present incumbent, Gilbert N. Haugen, will also ask for the nomination again. It is quite likely that two more candidates will ask for the nomination. An interesting contest is promised.

CONTROVERSY IS REOPENED

Argentine's Minister Withdraws Agreement to the Protocol.

Washington, Dec. 30.—Official advices received in diplomatic quarters here indicate that the Chile-Argentine controversy is again opened. According to these advices the peace protocol referring the whole subject to arbitration was signed at Santiago three days ago. But the action of the Argentine minister in placing his signature to the document seems to have caused resentment at Buenos Ayres, both among the prominent officials and the people. Accordingly, the Argentine minister informed the Chilean foreign office that he was unable to concur in all of the terms which had been agreed upon heretofore and signed. In particular, he specified two points on which the Argentine government refused to subscribe: first, the withdrawal of police from the Ultima Esperanza province, and second, the submission to King Edward VII of England. The formal refusal of Argentine to sign has not yet been submitted, but the informal statement of the minister to the Chilean foreign office is regarded as a serious interruption, if not a termination of the proposed settlement.

VICTORY WAS CLEAR CUT

GENERAL DE WET OVERWHELMS BRITISH AT ZEEFONTEIN.

Six British Officers and Men Killed and the Force Obliged to Retreat.

London, Dec. 30.—The war office has issued a list of British casualties at Zeefontein December 24, when Colonel Firman's camp, consisting of three companies of Yeomanry and two guns, was successfully rushed by a Boer force under command of General De Wet. Six officers and fifty men were killed, eight officers were wounded and four are missing. It is presumed that the missing officers were taken along with the captured guns.

The number of the non-commissioned officers and men wounded and missing have not as yet been received, but the aggregate promises to make the Zeefontein affair a memorable disaster to the British. Simultaneously the war office gave out a dispatch from Lord Kitchener chronicling a minor success of the South African constabulary, who raided Bothaville and captured thirty-six Boers.

In a subsequent message Lord Kitchener sends a stirring account of the fighting at Zeefontein, showing that the wounded and prisoners number about 150. He says that in the absence of Colonel Firman, Major Williams, who was killed, was in command. The column was encamped on the slope of a kopje, the southern side of which was precipitous. Outposts held the edge of the precipice. The northern slope, on which the camp was pitched, was gentle. The outposts were well pushed out, and the position, naturally strong, had been entrenched.

It was a moonlight night. The Boers appear to have climbed the precipice, and, mustering near the top at 2 a. m., suddenly attacked the picket on the summit. Before the men could get clear of their tents the Boers swooped through them, shooting the soldiers down as they came out. Most of the British officers were shot while trying to stem the rush. Lieutenant Harwe himself opened fire with the "pompoms" and was shot through the heart while firing. Lieutenant Watney was killed while leading a charge. There was no panic and all engaged did their best. But once the picket was overwhelmed the superior force of the Boers had all the advantage.

Including the killed and wounded, about half the column is now at Elads river bridge. The remainder are prisoners. A fifteen pounder, after two rounds, became jammed. The men composing the detachment stood by the gun and were shot down around it. Lieutenant Scarlett, who was wounded, was overlooked by the Boers and left behind. He saw two wagon loads of dead and wounded Boers carried off. They were mostly hit during the first attack on the pickett.

The Boers, who apparently numbered about 1,200, under General De Witt, behaved well, leaving men to look after the wounded.

The imperial light horse were fourteen miles distant. They heard of the fight at 4:30 and arrived on the scene at 6:30. After breakfasting their horses they galloped after the Boers, who, however, succeeded in reaching the broken country, where the light horse were useless against superior numbers.

DEFINITE PRICE IS MADE.

Panama Canal Company Anxious to Sell Holdings.

Paris, Dec. 30.—M. Lampre, secretary general of the Panama Canal company, sailed for New York on the French line steamer L'Aquitaine, from Havre. He will confer on his arrival in the United States with a number of the Panama company's representatives, and overtures for the sale of the canal property to the United States will then be renewed.

In view of the doubt exisisting in the United States regarding the price the Panama Canal company's representatives intend to ask for the property, the correspondent of the Associated Press made inquiries from the best sources of information on that subject, and is enabled to say that the prices will be approximately $40,000,000. This figure cannot yet be given as the exact one, because the company has not yet come to a definite decision, but it will not be appreciably higher. The isthmian commission's full report is now in the possession of the Panama company and its valuations will be studied in detail.

MARY THE MAID OF THE INN....

A Story of English Life.

By JOSEPH HATTON.

The miller talked the affair over at the Hark-to-Rover, his inquiries as to what was "up" not having been satisfactorily answered at the Star and Garter.

"I dunno," he said, "as the young gentleman is a wasteer or nowt better nor he should be. I'd not do so much on fine 'osses and hangs about pretending they're fishermen, when they don't know how to throw a fly or bait a pool; but as the Bible says, they be various of the fisher tribe, and the party about whom I'm alludin' seems to know plenty about other kinds of fishing, to-wit, as the constable says, fishing for a pretty woman. And if he ain't 'ooked Mary Lockwood, I never seed a gal as was 'ooked in all my born days."

It was something on this strain of thought that the 'Squire's reflections had traveled as he trotted on his way to Harrogate. He found himself wondering who this young buck could be; this stranger who had cut out Jack Meadows so completely. He remembered the night of his arrival with another fellow, whose looks he thought villainous, whose appearance was that of a rogue, he thought. The younger of the two seemed a frank sort of chap, outspoken, and a decent air and manner; but what was he doing in company with a man whom any jury, he being charged with a capital offense, would hang on the evidence of his own face? "We shall doubtless meet again," the 'Squire had said, when leaving the inn and addressing Parker.

They did meet again, only too soon for the well-being of all concerned.

CHAPTER VIII.

It was a night of storm and tempest. There was a moon nevertheless; but it only appeared at fitful moments from behind the driving clouds. It would have rained, but the wind was too high.

There was a damp feeling in the air, as if the wind had come across the sea. 'Squire Bellingham rode merrily through the storm; the noise and bustle of it rejoiced him. The 'Squire carried about him a large sum of money, but it was well known by everybody that his pistols were heavy, and that he would not scruple to use them if he was attacked. Indeed, it was said that the fine old 'Squire-merchant rather courted than feared attack; though this was not quite correct.

He was content to be allowed to go on his way rejoicing; but he was a man without fear. There were many in the Yorkshire of those days, as there are now. He little thought, as he galloped along towards Kirkstall that his courage and his skill were about to be sorely tried.

Not far on the side of the Abbey nearest the high road two horsemen had tethered their steeds under a clump of trees, through which the wind moaned and laughed, now like some hysterical demon, now like some fiend in an agony.

They were well trained steeds that stood together like sentinels beneath the screaming trees.

Neither of them moved a muscle, except when one of the dismounted riders came from the outer darkness into the deeper gloom of the wooded cover, and, patting his gray mare, took a brace of pistols from her holsters.

He seemed to do this in a sly and secret manner. The truth was, he had engaged with his fellow-conspirators not to use firearms in the enterprise upon which they were engaged.

The two robbers had prepared a surprise and a trap for the 'Squire, which should have rendered him an easy victim without the aid of pistols.

Moreover, they had, by a clever strategy, and with the assistance of a nefarious hostler at the 'Squire's previous halting place, had his pistols emptied.

They had contrived a method of obstruction upon the road near the Abbey, an ingenious but cruel contrivance of rope and wire stretched across the road that could not fail to entangle the surest-footed animal.

The 'Squire was sailing along toward the trap, and two men lay in ambush awaiting the result, on this autumn night of our story, and about the same time Mr. William Taylor and Mr. John Wilson arrived at the Star and Garter inn.

Taylor was no stranger to the hospitality of the old coaching house; but Wilson was there for the first time.

They found several other customers in the bar, and Morley, the landlord, holding forth upon the prowess of his Mary.

Wilson was a young fellow, though an old friend of Taylor, who lived at Leeds.

Taylor had been telling Wilson how beautiful Mary was, and Wilson was anxious to see this paragon of loveliness and virtue. He had traveled and knew the world. His father and Taylor had been venturers in their time, and young Wilson was a native of Plymouth, and although accustomed to see men do brave things, it was who had, as Taylor [illegible] to meet a girl qualities of the masculine hero with the sweet and gentle virtue of a beautiful girl.

"You are talking of Mary," said Taylor to the landlord.

"Yes, Mr. Taylor," said Morley; "I fear I am allus a talking of her, bless the lass' heart."

"I have brought my friend, Mr. Wilson, to stay the night. This is Mr. Morley, our landlord," he said, introducing Morley and Wilson in an informal kind of way.

"Glad to see any friend of Mr. Taylor. You riding? Has Tom put your horse up?"

"Yes; and now we propose that you shall put up a bowl of punch; and if the company will join us in doing justice to the brew, we shall feel honored."

The company consented. Taylor and Wilson sat down, Morley called Mary, and presently the girl, with the aid of a servant, and Morley himself, had set upon the table a bowl of rum punch that filled the atmosphere with a delicious perfume.

Mary had never looked more beautiful than on this fatal night. There was a touch of sadness in the expression of her face that rather heightened than diminished the interest the young stranger felt in her. He did not attempt to disguise his admiration, which set old Morley off on her strength, her courage, her athletic feats.

Mary was more or less sad because she had parted with Richard Parker, not for many days, he had said; but she had a strange foreboding that this first parting might be their last. He had offered her marriage, but he proposed that their wedding should be secret. His father would not consent to his marrying out of the aristocratic families in which he had sought to make an alliance for him. If he disobeyed his father he would be disinherited; and Mary herself would not hear of that. Neither would she listen to the proposal that they should go to Leeds, be married privately, live secretly as man and wife in some remote cottage which he would provide, or travel into foreign lands, until such time as in the course of nature his father should make way for his accession to title and estate. His father was an old man, and although he loved him very much, he could only live a few years longer, and it might be that perhaps in the meantime he would forgive him and take his dear Mary, his beautiful wife, to his castle, and forget and forgive.

Mr. Richard Parker, under the influence of his consuming passion, had done his best and his worst to induce Mary to go away with him. But she was as firm in her refusal as she was in the confession that she loved him and would never marry if she did not marry him. He was obliged to be content with this declaration, and he was obliged to join his companion, Foster, as previously arranged.

"The knights of old," he said, "fastened their ladies' gloves in their helmets, their gages of battle, their love-tokens. Let your dear little fingers fasten this ribbon upon my chapeau, Mary, and it shall be my talisman of love and luck."

Unhappy boast! She stitched the ribbon upon his hatband in the shape of a rosette, half hiding it behind the silver buckle that already ornamented the young fellow's picturesque headgear.

When he rode away she had sat at her window, watching his retreating figure until it disappeared along the London road. She did not see the horseman change his course an hour later, and make for the distant towers of York.

But to return to the punch, the revellers, and the stormy wind at the Star and Garter. Mary and her uncle had retired to their little room behind the bar, leaving the guests to their own conversation, which had turned upon the state of the roads, the safety of the Yorkshire highways as compared with those in the south, and had drifted back to Mary, the maid of the inn.

"She certainly does not belie your report, Taylor," said Wilson. "I have seen many fine women in all parts of the world, but never so superb a creature as the landlord's niece."

"It is not her beauty only, it's her courage, her daring, that makes her so popular in these parts,' said Taylor.

"For my part," said Wilson, "I admire beauty more than pluck in a woman; but I shouldn't mind having some proof of the girl's daring."

"Well," said a man who had not previously spoken, "she ain't afeard of ghosts. I've knawed her to walk about the abbey at nightfaw' when I wouldn't a' done it for a wager. And I've seen her walk t' abbey on All E'en by hersen, when it's been as dark as it is now."

"Aye!" said the others.

"I wouldn't mind walking with her now," said Wilson, laughing, "I'm not afraid of ghosts."

"Mayhap you'n never seen one," said the previous speaker.

"No, I have not—at least not to my [illegible]," said Mr. Taylor.

"I shouldn't wonder you might like to keep her company," said a native, referring slowly to Wilson's remark, "but she be engaged a'ready as far as I meks out; but I'll lay a wager she would be willing to go t' abbey this minit, if old Joe Morley axed her, and you made a bet on it of a wager, the brass to go to poor folk as lives up to Hark-to-Rover."

"Aye," said several voices, "aye!"

"Then I'll wager she does not," said Wilson, who had drunk more of the second than the first bowl of punch, and was a little nettled at the remark that Mary's affections were engaged. "I'll wager she does not go alone to the abbey—that is, if it does not rain."

There was a loud laugh at the proviso.

"In the first place," said the native "there will be no rain wi' that wind, and in the next our lasses i' Yorkshire isna sugar, they doan't melt."

"I don't think it worth while making the wager," said Taylor to his friend, "if you bet you will lose."

"The object is charity," said Wilson, "the money goes to the poor, and if she is engaged, as you say, at least she may not object to wear the silken gown I'll send her from London."

Wilson was piqued in some way that he could hardly explain even to himself. His pride was hurt; and in his cups he actually began to feel a little resentful towards Mary, as weak people sometimes do towards persons they do not know, but whose praises they hear sung on all hands.

The wager was made. Old Morley was summoned. He would give his consent if the girl's could be gained. Had he no fear for her? Not he, it was nothing, he said. He was rather inclined to think the stranger had been taken in.

This raised a little discussion, almost a controversy, almost a row, for the noisiest of the natives insisted upon construing Morley's remark into a reflection upon the honesty of the men of Kirkstall.

This trouble over, Mary was called into the room.

Mr. Taylor, as being the most important guest among those whom he knew, was selected to explain the discussion that had arisen about her. He was cautioned to do it in such a way as not to let it be seen that they had been talking her over except with the greatest respect. Mr. Taylor acquitted himself of the difficult task with diplomatic skill, and when he came to the wager, the whole room hung on her words and looked at Mary for her reply.

"Oh, yes," she said, "if it will please you, gentlemen, and give something to the poor, I will win the wager for—"

"Me!" said the native, who had laid his money down against Wilson's.

"And in that case," said Wilson, looking at the girl, and wondering at her calm demeanor, "you will have to do me the honor of wearing a silken gown I shall send you from London, for that is part of the wager."

"Do you live in London, sir?" was Mary's odd reply, an interrogatory answer that was remembered and keenly discussed some time afterwards.

"Yes, my pretty one," he said.

"Is it a grand place?"

"Yes," he said. "It is; but there is no grander woman there than—" (he paused, as if he suddenly thought the compliment he had intended was too coarse for her) "than there are in Yorkshire."

"I should like to see it," she said, as if speaking to herself.

"And so you shall," said old Morley in his squeaking voice, "some day."

Fishes of Nile.

W. S. Loat, the superintendent of the survey of the fishes of the Nile, has returned to Egypt to continue his work. It is proposed during the ensuing season to explore the Blue Nile from its junction with the White Nile to Rosaires, and ever farther if the steamer can ascend the river. On completion of this river Mr. Loat's instructions are to ascend the White Nile from Fashoda to Gondokoro, in Uganda, establishing fishing stations on his way up.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, Dec. 30, 1901.

The Polk county board of supervisors has voted to alter its original proposition to purchase twenty Climax voting machines and will purchase but hree. This is done, it is understood, because the city refused to expend any money in that direction. The county agreed to buy twenty machines if the city would purchase half that number. The city has refused to do this and the county was compelled to cut the original order to three.

A. H. McVey of North Des Moines has been appointed district judge to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge W. F. Conrad, of Polk county, by Governor Shaw.

State Librarian Brigham has filed with the governor his completed report, the twenty-eighth biennial one for an appropriation. The feature complete the historical building, where place is required for the miscellaneous part of the state library. It is asked that the position of cataloguer for the library and historical department be created instead of renewing the appropriation of $2,000 for cataloguing the state library. Another change requested is the creation of the office of stenographer and bookkeeper at a liberal salary. It is asked that the traveling library be placed under the charge of the library commssion. The report shows that there are now 71,610 volumes in the state library, not counting 4,115 volumes which have been removed to the state historical building. The grand total of books in the law, miscellaneous, traveling and historical library is 89,547.

Judge Thomas M. Fee has resigned as judge of the Second juricial district, and C. W. Vermilion of Centerville has been appointed his successor by Governor Shaw.

The Iowa Academy of Sciences, which met in its sixteenth annual session in the geological rooms at the state house, is disposed to support pure food legislation. A pure food bill will be introduced the coming session. It will be in charge of a pure food committee of three members. Two years ago there was a pure food bill introduced in the legislature, and for some time the academy has had a committee on this subject, headed by Prof. J. B. Weems of Ames. National as well as state legislation is sought.

President H. H. Polk of the Interurban company says the survey of the proposed route to Colfax, upon which work has already been commenced, is now practically completed and that the profiles and estimates will be in shape in a couple of weeks for letting contracts for all the grading He expects to let all these contracts within the next month and to have grading camps established along the entire line by March 1, so work can be commenced at the earliest possible moment next spring. Mr. Polk said: "We will have our cars running into Colfax by September, and hope to have this portion of the line completed two months earlier if it is possible to get the track material in time. As soon as the work on the profiles, etc., of the line to Colfax is completed, we will commence the survey of a line from Colfax to Newton, and intend to let contracts for this portion of the work early in the spring. It is our expectation to complete the east line into Newton by December 1 next. By that time we will have lines in operation to Nevada, Newton and Indianola, and will in all probability have a considerable portion of the Winterset line under way, though we do not expect to complete it before the following year. Our plans for the following year have not been definitely fixed upon, but there will be additional building of interurbans. It is possible a line will be built west in Dallas county and possibly further west, and we are pretty certain that the Nevada line will be built to Eldora."

The state of Iowa was fifty-five years old on the 28th. The act of congress admitting the state into the union was passed December 28th, 1846. Governor Shaw ordered the flags displayed from the state house in honor of the anniversary.

A. L. Denio of Alta has written a letter to Secreary of State Martin in which he says he will accept the appointment as chief expert accountant to examine the state departments. C. C. Clements, of Marengo, called at the state house and indicated to Secretary Martin that he would consent to act as one of the experts.

At the meeting of the State Teachers association at Des Moines, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, C. E. Shelton of Indianola; first vice president, Adam Pickett of Mt. Ayr; second vice president, D. A. Thornburg of Grinnell; third vice president, Miss Anna Robertson of Cherokee; secretary, W. F. Barr of Des Moines; treasurer, G. W. Sampson of Cedar Falls; member of the executive committee, W. H. Bender of Cedar Falls; members of council, F. E. Willard of Marshalltown and O. J. McManus of Council Bluffs.

It is no crime to be poor—unless the word is applied to singers.

Fame is something that makes a lot of fools want to shake your hand.

Sales of public lands in the fiscal year of 1901 aggregated 15,562,796 acres.

If heaven is as bright as the good people say it is, it is bright enough there to freckle.

MACLAY HAS QUIT.

Formal Discharge by the Officer In Command.

New York, Dec. 27.—Edgar Stanton Maclay, who refused to resign as special laborer in the office of the general storekeeper of the navy yard, was summarily discharged yesterday. Maclay went to the navy yard as usual and prepared to resume his duties. Pay Director Putman went to Maclay's desk, read him the telegram of dismissal received from Washington and told him that he was dismissed. Maclay left the yard immediately.

Washington, Dec. 27.—The civil service commission has notified Edgar S. Maclay, the historian recently employed in the Brooklyn navy yard, that his removal from his position at that place was not in violation of the civil service act. This notification is contained in a letter written to Mr. Maclay by President Proctor, of the commission, and is in reply to an inquiry [illegible] York. Sir: The communication of your letter of December 24, 1901, asking its opinion upon the following questions:

"Has the president of the United States any authority under the laws governing civil service to demand the resignation of a civil service employe in the classified list?

"Has the president the authority or power to cause the dismissal of any civil employe without preferring charges in writing and giving said employe an opportunity in which to make a defense?

"In response you are informed that it is contrary to the practice of the commission to undertake to answer hypothetical questions. Your separation from the service, according to the facts in your case as they appeared in the public press, was made upon the order of the secretary of the navy, in whom the power of removal rests. The demand for your resignation, followed by your removal, upon the direction of the president, through the secretary of the navy, was not in violation of the civil service act, and rules, in view of the well known facts in your case.

"The object of the rule requiring notice and a hearing was to prevent political removals upon secret charges. No issue of this kind is involved in your case. Very respectfully,

"John R. Proctor, President."

NEW BID BY PANAMA.

Reduction in Sale Price May Affect the Canal Chances of Nicaragua.

"It may be Panama after all. As soon as the holidays are over and congress returns to town the battle of the canals is expected to rage with great fury. Nicaragua still has the advantage, but it is not to be permitted to carry off the honors without a struggle. Panama is developing unlooked-for strength.

"A private telegram from Paris indicates that the new Panama Canal company is prepared to submit to the United States a definite offer of sale at the value set by the Walker commission, namely, $40,000,000. If the Panama company does submit such an offer and includes in it all its property of whatever description, there is at least a chance that the strong tide now running in favor of Nicaragua may be stemmed. If the French company makes another blunder and asks any higher figure than $40,000,000 it will get nothing and the canal at Nicaragua will be authorized.

"In the house it is not believed Panama at any price would receive consideration. The house is set for Nicaragua, and apparently nothing can change its view at this late hour.

"But in the senate a strong Panama party is developing. Influential senators say privately to your correspondent that they are convinced that Panama is by long odds the better route, and if any offer to sell at the commission's valuation is received they declare it will recive favorable consideration at the hands of the senate.

"The most important development of the day is the discovery that the isthmian canal commission, of which Admiral Walker is president, may be induced to change its recommendation from the Nicaragua to the Panama route.

"I am able to say that if the French company submits an offer of sale at $40,000,000, and that offer is referred by the president to the commission, as it probably will be, the chances are in favor of a reversal of its attitude by the commission. This statement is made upon the highest authority."

TROOPS HOLD RAILROAD.

Venezuelan Government Offends a German Company.

Willemstad, Island of Curacao, Dec. 30.—(Via Haytien cable.)—Reports received here from Caracas say the relations between Germany and Venezuela become more strained every day. The Venezuelan government suspended traffic on the German railroad because, in view of the threats of the insurgents, the company refused to transport troops unless the government guaranteed it against losses which might be sustained by the destruction of its road and equipment The stations are occupied by the troops. The German legation at Caracas has entered an energetic protest against the government's action in this connection.

Marriage of Senator Depew.

Nice, Dec. 30.—The marriage of Senator Chauncey M. Depew to Miss May Palmer was celebrated at the American church here Saturday, following the ceremony of the Catholic marriage service at Notre Dame.

IS NOW SECRETARY SHAW.

Governor Leslie M. Shaw, of this state, has accepted the tender of the U. S. treasury portfolio made TIMES, by President Roosevelt, and was scheduled to leave Des Moines for a conference with the President and Secretary Gage last evening. He will of course return to deliver his closing message to the incoming legislature, and assist in inducting into office Gov. elect Cummins. It is not expected that Gov. Shaw will take his seat in the cabinet until about Mar. 1.

The high honor thus conferred upon Peerless Iowa comes with stunning force upon not only the recipient of the extraordinary preferment, but upon the state and nation at large, not in any sense because of the slightest question of his ability or worthiness, but because Gov. Shaw had in no sense been a candidate for the place, and for the further reason that his selection was such a radical departure from long custom, and at one stroke of the President's pen eliminated the ancient prestige assumed by Wall street as being the grand focus of everything financial in this country, and emphasizing as nothing else could the fact that this great trans-Mississippi region, with its limitless wealth and agricultural resources, is certain to hereafter be more and more in evidence amongst the mighty potentialities that control this, the World Power Republic of the strident Occident. With Senator Allison at the head and forefront of fiscal matters in the U. S. senate, with Senator Dolliver rapidly forging to the fore as a big factor in his new position, with Speaker Henderson the dominant spirit at the other end of the capitol, with "Tama Jim" Wilson earning the laurel wreath as the greatest Secretary of Agriculture the nation ever had, with M. D. O'Connell as Solicitor of the Treasury, with Geo. E. Roberts as Director of the Mint, who shall have the temerity to say that Iowa is not entitled to be proud, self satisfied and happy? No state in all this broad Union can compare with our loved commonwealth in all those great attributes that go to make a state respected, admired and puissant. Her brilliant galaxy of gifted sons in Washington are distinctively the concrete prodvcts of their own individual efforts. Collectively they control more of the future destinies of the various departments of government than any other equal number of intellectual Titans in Washington. Each is a purely self-made man. Each has won his spurs by the hardest study, deepest investigation and most laborious toil, and each is as much 'Of. From and By the People" as it is possible for mortal man to be. Surrounded by such a corterie of scintillating geniuses as have found their niches before, Governor Shaw will not fail nor falter in the exalted role thus so suddenly thrust upon him, but, the same as ever heretofore in other proud places, he will acquit himself nobly, irreproachably and patriotically. "In all things that are noble and good 'Peerless Iowa' possesses the best." 'Tis well!

Child Worth Millions.

"My child is worth millions to me," says Mrs. Mary Bird of Harrisburg, Pa., "yet I would have lost her by croup had I not purchased a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure." One Minute Cough Cure is a sure cure for coughs, croup and throat and lung troubles. An absolutely safe cough cure which acts immediately. The youngest child can take it with entire safety. The little ones like the taste and remember how often it helped them. Every family should have a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure handy. At this season especially it may be needed suddenly. J. L. ## A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter ofiered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmers' Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

THE BLESSINGS OF HUMILITY SHOWN IN THIS DISCOURSE.

In Eloquent Words Is Told How Throughout the Ages Arrogance Has Been Rebuked — Evening of Life Brightened by the Love of God.

rogance, it encourages humanity. While, this shows how the evening of life may be brightened. The text is I Kings xx, 11, "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off."

The text makes a comparison between a man enlisting for some war and a veteran returning, the one putting on the armor and the other putting it off.

Benhadad, the king of Syria, thought he could easily overcome the king of Israel. Indeed, the Syrian was so sure of the victory that he spread an antebellum banquet. There were in all thirty-three kings at the carousal, and their condition is described in the Bible not as convivial or stimulated exaltation, but drunk. Benhadad sends officers over to the king of Israel demanding the surrender of the city, saying, "Thou shalt deliver me thy silver and thy gold and thy wives and thy children," and afterward sends other officers, saying that the palace of the king will be searched and everything Benhadad wants he will take without asking. Then the king of Israel called a council of war, and word is sent back to Benhadad that his unreasonable demand will be resisted. Then Benhadad sends another message to the king of Israel, a message full of arrogance and bravado. Then the king of Israel replied to Benhadad, practically saying: "Let me see you do what you say. You huzza too soon. 'Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.'"

An avalanche of courage and righteousness, the Israelitish army came down on Benhadad and his host. It was a hand to hand fight, each Israelite hewing down a Syrian. Benhadad, on horseback, gets away with some of the cavalry, but is only saved for a worse defeat, in which 100,000 Syrian infantry were slaughtered in one day. Now we see the sarcasm and the epigrammatic power of the message of my text sent by the king of Israel to Benhadad, "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off."

First, I find encouragement in this subject for the aged who have got through the work and struggle of earthly life. With more or less fortitude you passed through the crises of pain and sadness and disappointment and fatigue and still live to recount the divine help that sustained you. At twenty or thirty years of your age at the tap of the drum you put on the harness. Now, at sixty or seventy or eighty, you are peacefully putting it off. You would not want to try the battle of life over again. So let all of the aged in peace with God, through the blessed Christ, cultivate contentment and thank the Lord their Sedan has been fought and the war is over. "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off."

There are old farmers who cannot do one more day's work. What harvests they raised in 1870! What droughts, what freshets, what insectile invasion, they remember! To clothe and feed and educate the household they went through toils and self sacrifices that the world knew but little about. Rest, aged man! Let the boys do the shoveling and thrashing and cutting and sweating. You have put the harness off, and do not try to put it on again.

There are old mechanics that can no more shove the plane or pound with the hammer or bore with the bit or run up the ladder to the scaffolding. You have a right to quit. You have finished your task. Be thankful that your work is done.

Then there are aged physicians. What tragedies of pain and accident they have witnessed! How much suffering they have assuaged! How many brave battles they have fought with lancet and cataclysm! How many fevers they cooled! How many broken bones they set. God comfort and bless the old doctors, allopathic, homeopathic, hydropathic and eclectic, and make them willing to be out of practice! Before long they will hear the benediction of him who said, "I was sick, and ye visited me."

And there are the old ministers. Once they were foremost in general assemblies and conferences and associations. Now they have stopped preaching, for their breath is short, or their nerves are a-jangle, or they lose their thread of discourse or suffer from confusion of ideas. Cheer up, aged dominies and doctors! The Bible says God forgets our sins when we repent of them, but he never forgets faithful services rendered. Be content to stop. "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off."

Again, I learn from Benhadad's behavior the unwisdom of boasting of what one is going to do. Better not tell boastingly what you are going to do. Wait until it is done. You do well to lay out your plans, but there are so many mistakes and disappointments in life that you may not be able to carry out your plans, and there is no need of invoking the world's derision and caricature. Napoleon was so sure of conquering England, Scotland and Ireland that he had a medal struck celebrating the conquest, which [illegible] that medal was

Wilberforce did not tell what he going to do with the slave trade, but how much he accomplished is suggested by Lord Brougham's remark concerning Wilberforce after his decease, "He went to heaven with 800,000 broken fetters in his hand." The only kind of boasting that prospers was that of Paul, who cried out, "I glory in the cross of Christ!" and that of John Newton, who declared, "I am not what I ought to be; I am not what I wish to be; I am not what I hope to be, but, by the grace of God, I am not what I was."

My subject is also a refutation of the famous sentiment that God is on the side of the heaviest artillery. God is not on the side of the most swords or the most war chariots or the most cannon if they be in the wrong, but on the side of the right. How such a preposterous sentiment as I have mentioned should have gained sway I know not when all history proclaims the opposite. How insignificant were the unarmed Israelites, half starved and unorganized, compared with Pharaoh's host on foot, on horseback and charioted! But the waves of the Red sea took part in the conflict, parting to let the pursued pass, but coming together to destroy the pursuers. The Midianites and Amalekites were like grasshoppers for multitudes, but 300 men under Gideon came down, their ownly weapons pitchers and lamps and trumpets, and as they held up the lamps and threw down the pitchers and blew the trumpets the flash of the lights and the blare of the instruments and the crash of the crockery made their enemy fall back in wild terror.

Notice also that my text takes it for granted that you must put on the harness, else how can you take it off? Life is a battle—a thirty years', a forty years' or a sixty years' war. Every possible effort will be made to make you think wrong. The young man who gets his head filled with wrong notions about God, about Christ, about the soul, about the great beyond, is already captured. Think right, and you will act right. Keep the heart pure, and the life will be pure. Have the heart corrupt, and your actions will be corrupt.

We hold our breath in horror as once in awhile we hear of someone, either by accident or suicide, going over Niagara Falls, but the tides, the depths, the awful surges of intemperance, are every hour of every day rushing scores of immortals down into unfathomed abysm. Suicides by the hundreds of thousands! Suicides by the million! Beware of the cup out of which Benhadad drank personal and national demolition.

Yes, you must have full armor. There are temptations to an impure life all the time multiplying and intensifying. Read in private and discussed afterward by the refined and elegant in parlors are books poisoned from lid to lid with impurities. Loose characters in the novel applauded by rhetorical pens and proprieties of life caricatured as prudery and infidelity of behavior put in a way to excite sympathy and half approval. My wonder is not that so many go astray, but my wonder is that ten times as many are not debauched. There are influences at work which, if unarrested, will turn our cities into Sodoms and Gomorrahs ready for the hail and fire and brimstone of God's indignation.

Yes, you must have full armor, for there are all the temptations to gaming practices, either in gambling halls or in the money markets, buying what they never paid for and selling what they can never deliver, first borrowing what they cannot return and stealing what they cannot borrow. All hours of the day and all hours of the night are vast sums of money passing fraudulently, for gambling in all cases is fraud, whether it be a twenty-five cent prize package or a crash in Northern Pacific, which made Lombard street and the bourse aghast and shook the nations with financial earthquake.

Oh, yes, you need the harness on until God tells you to take it off. In olden time it was leathern armor or chain armor or ribbed armor, fashioned in ancient foundry, but no one can give you the outfit you need except God, who is master of this world and the infernal world, from which ascend the mightiest hostilities. Lay hold of God. Nothing but the arm of Omnipotence is strong enough for the tempted.

Young man, put on the entire gospel outfit. If you have come from the country to live in the city, imitate the example of a young man who arrived in New York on Saturday night, intending the following Monday to enter his place of employment. On Sunday morning, carrying out the good advice before leaving his country home, he went to church. Standing at the door, he was abashed as the beauty and fashion and wealth swept through the doors of the sanctuary, and he dared not go in. As he was about turning to go away a gentleman said, "Have you a seat, young man?" "No, sir." "Do you belong to the city?" "No, sir." "Where is your home?" "In the country." "How long have you been in the city?" "I came in last night." "What are you going to do here?" "I hope to [illegible] into business to-morrow." "That is man. Never forsake the God of your fathers. Come, I will give you a seat in my pew." The next morning the young man presented his letter in business circles. "What do you want, young man?" said the Scotch merchant. "I want to get credit on some leather, upper and sole." "Have you references?" "I think I can get references. My father has friends here." "Young man, did I not see you yesterday in Mr. Lenox's pew?" "I do not know, sir. I was at church, and a kind gentleman asked me to sit in his pew." "Yes, young man, that was Robert Lenox. I will trust anyone that Mr. Lenox invites into his pew. You need not trouble yourself about references. When these goods are gone, come and get more." That young man became an eminent merchant and, more than that, a Christian merchant, and he attributed all his success to that first Sabbath in the city. Young man just arrived, put yourself under good influences your first day in town. There hangs your helmet. Take it down. There is your breastplate. Adjust it. There is all the harness for safety and triumph. Put it on.

Also see in my subject the folly of underestimating the enemy. That was Benhadad's fatal mistake. He wanted less than half a day to capture Samaria and make the king of Israel capitulate. But what he thought was so easy turned out to be the impossible. Better overestimate than underestimate the other side. We who are trying to make the world what it ought to be contend not with homunculi. We wrestle not with stripiings. We have a whole army of antagonists trying to halt the King of God and overthrow the cause of righteousness. If we secure the victory, it will be a struggle as fierce as when the Greeks and Persians met at Marathon, as when Darius and Alexander grappled each other at Arbela, as when Joan of Arc rode triumphant at Orleans, as when the Russians met the Swedes at Poltava, as when Marlborough commanded the allied armies at Blenheim. Those were fights for earthly crowns and dominions, but the fight that now goes on between all the allied armies of hell is to settle whether God or Satan is to have possession of this planet.

I congratulate all those who are now in the thickest of life's battle that the time is coming when the struggle will end and you will put the harness off, helmet and greaves and breastplate having fulfilled their mission. You cannot in one visit to London Tower see all. You must go again and again. You will see the crowns of kings and queens, the robe worn by the Black Prince, and silver baptismal fonts from which royal infants were christened, and the block on which Lord Lovat was beheaded. But no part of London Tower will more interest you than the armory, in which is skillfully and impressively arranged a collection of all styles of armor worn between the thirteenth and eighteenth centuries, suggesting 500 years of conflict—cuirass and neck guard and chin piece and lance rest and gauntlet and girdle and mailed apron. You see just how from head to heel those old time warriors were defended against sharp weapons that would cut or thrust or bruise and allowing them to come out of battle unhurt when otherwise they would have been slain.

O ye soldiers of Jesus Christ, when the war of life is over and the victors rest in the soldiers' home on the heavenly heights, perhaps there may be in the city of the sun a tower of spiritual armor such as incased the warriors for Christ in earthly combat. Some day we may be in that armory and hear the heroes talk of how they fought the good fight of faith and see them with the scars of wounds forever healed and look at the weapons of offense and defense with which they became more than conquerors. In that tower of heaven, as the weapons of the spiritual conflict are examined, St. Paul may point out to us the armor with which he advised the Ephesians to equip themselves and say: "That is the shield of faith. That is the helmet of salvation. That is the girdle of truth. That is the breastplate of righteousness. Those are the mailed shoes in which they were shod with the preparation of the gospel." There and then you may recount the contrast between the day when you enlisted in Christian conflict and the day when you closed it in earthly farewell and heavenly salutation, and the text, which has so much meaning for us now, will have more meaning for us then. "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off."

THE TEMPTING HAGGIS.

Englishman Eats of Scottish Dainty But Admits Prejudice.

I sat gazing wonderingly at something resting in what seemed to be so much hot water, which enveloped it in steam. It was piping hot—I might say Scotch piping hot, for, though the pipes were wanting, there was the bag. It was very wet, of a peculiar livid tint, tight, and—to be frank—about the most unappetizing-looking thing I ever saw in my life, says J. M. Fenn in Chambers' Journal. All this I saw at a glance while our host looked down at the haggis, and then I glanced at the door in expectancy that it would open again to admit a piper who would start drone and chanter, and ceremoniously march, playing, around the table, while the guests were served. But no; all was silence, for Mr. David Chambers had only exchanged the spoon for a knife, with which he seemed to slay the object in the dish. One thrust and there was a transformation scene. The hot water had disappeared, and a rich, steaming, dark compound was ready for the spoon which transferred it to the plates. I can recall the scene vividly, and the stern resolution with which the dainty was eaten, and I scornfully repudiate any attempt to ridicule the dish haggis; but, at the same time, perhaps from narrow-minded English prejudice, I will say that if I were going to entertain a royal stranger I would, rather than the Scotch dainty, put before him the national English roast beef. However, the guests of the haggis luncheon were unanimously of the opinion that the whisky was sublime.

INDIANS AS POLITICIANS.

Electioneering Among the Tribes on Rather Unique Plan.

The campaigns of the Indians are a story of sharp moves and deep laid plans, and, as among themselves they cannot all be bosses, the game of politics often becomes swift and exceedingly dangerous. Electioneering is carried on in a rather unique manner. They give big picnics in the back woods. Here the candidates meet and debate on certain subjects. If their temper gets the better of them, and it generally does, they fight it out. At a picnic given by the Cherokees some five years ago three men were killed because of the accusation by one that the other two were guilty of stealing horses. Big feasts are held at these gatherings, the expenses being borne by the candidate who is elected. The bills are never paid until after election; then the winner takes them all into his office and gives vouchers on the government. So it is generally understood that the expenses of the campaign are borne out of the public funds. There is no such thing as taxation among the Indians, all of their money coming from invested funds in the treasury at Washington. It is the aim of the whole Indian populace not to keep this money there, but to get hold of as much of it as possible. With that aim in view they are apt to elect men who lay stress on their ability as diplomats at Washington. An attorney in Tahlequah won a $100,000 fee for securing a big sum of money as an appropriation to the Indians.—Detroit Free Press.

Lighthouse and Fort.

One of the most interesting and curious lighthouses in the world has just been completed on the cape which forms the southern end of the island of Formosa. Standing in a region inhabited only by hostile savages, this structure is not only a lighthouse, but also a fort. The lantern is protected by revolving steel screens, and in the gallery around the top of the tower is mounted a machine gun. The tower is of steel, and around its base is built a wrought iron refuge, or fort, which communicates by bullet-proof covered passages with the keeper's house. The station is still further protected by a loopholed wall and a dry ditch, flanked by two towers in which are mounted 8-pound cannon. There is a large staff attached to the lighthouse and the station is well supplied with material for standing a siege. There are kept on hand constantly stores of food and ammunition and large water tanks in the basement of the tower always are kept full of drinking water.

Capturing John Bull's Trade.

While our own exports to Canada have in the ten-year period increased nearly 150 per cent, those of the United Kingdom to British North America show a slight decrease; while our exports to British Africa have increased over 400 per cent, those of the United Kingdom have increased but about 40 per cent; while our exports to Australia have increased more than 125 per cent, those of the United Kingdom have slightly decreased, and while our own exports to Japan have increased 475 per cent, those of the United Kingdom have increased but about 100 per cent.—O. P. Austin in December National.

THE BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY.

A most important article, giving Messrs. Oxnard's and Cutting's views on the Beet Sugar industry in this country, appeared on the editorial page of the New York Evening Post of December 12th, 1901, and as every household in the land is interested in sugar the article will be of universal interest.

"The Evening Post bids the heartiest welcome to every American industry that can stand on its own bottom and make its way without leaning on the poor rates. Among these self-supporting industries, we are glad to know, is the production of beet sugar. At all events, it was such two years ago. We publish elsewhere a letter written in [illegible] Oxnard and Mr. Cutting, the chiefs of this industry on the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains, showing that this was the happy condition of the trade at that time. If parties masquerading as beet sugar producers are besieging the President and Congress at this moment, and pretending that they will be ruined if Cuban sugar is admitted for six months at half the present rates of duty, their false pretences ought to be exposed.

"The letter of Messrs. Oxnard and Cutting was probably written for the purpose of inducing the farmers of the Mississippi valley to go more largely into the cultivation of beets for the sugar factories. This was a laudable motive for telling the truth and showing the large profits which awaited both the beet-grower and the manufacturer if the industry were perseveringly and intelligently prosecuted. To this end it was pointed out that farmers could clear $65 per acre by cultivating beets, and might even make $100. But in order to assure the cultivator that he would not be exposed to reverses by possible changes in the tariff, they proceeded to show that the industry stood in no need of protection.

"The beet sugar industry, these gentlemen say, "stands on as firm a basis as any business in the country." They point out the fact—a very important one—that their product comes out as a finished article, refined and granulated. It is not, like cane-sugar grown in the West India Islands, a black and offensive paste, which must be carried in wagons to the seaboard and thence by ships to the United States, where, after another handling, it is put through a costly refinery, and then shipped by rail to the consumer, who may possibly be in Nebraska alongside a beet sugar factory which turns out the refined and granulated article at one fell swoop. Indeed, the advantages of the producer of beet sugar for supplying the domestic consumption are very great. We have no doubt that Messrs. Oxnard and Cutting are within bounds when they say that 'sugar can be produced here cheaper than it can be in Europe.' The reasons for this are that—

"'The sugar industry is, after all, merely an agricultural one. We can undersell Europe in all other crops, and sugar is no exception.'

"It follows as naturally as the making of flour from wheat. If we can produce wheat cheaper than Europe, then naturally we can produce flour cheaper, as we do.

"But the writers of the letter do not depend upon a-priori reasoning to prove that they can make sugar at a profit without tariff protection. They point to the fact that under the McKinley tariff of 1890, when sugar was free of duty, the price of the article was 4 cents per pound. Yet a net profit of $3 per ton was made by the beet-sugar factories under those conditions, not counting any bounty on the home production of sugar. They boast that they made this profit while working under absolute free trade, and they have a right to be proud of this result of their skill and industry. Many beet-sugar factories had been started in bygone years, back in the sixties and seventies of the nineteenth century, and had failed because the projectors did not understand the business. Since then great progress has been made, both here and abroad, in the cultivation and manipulation of the beet. What was impossible thirty years ago is now entirely feasible. The industry is already on a solid and enduring basis. There are factories in the United States, these gentlemen tell us in their letter, capable of using 350,000 tons of beets per annum at a profit of $3 per ton, and this would make a profit of $1,050,000 as the income to be earned under absolute free trade.

"It must be plain to readers of this letter, signed by the captains of the beet-sugar industry, that the people in Washington who are declaiming against the temporary measure which the President of the United States urges for the relief of the Cuban people, are either grossly ignorant of the subject, or are practising gross deception. The tenable ground for them is to say: 'Other people are having protection that they do not need, and therefore we ought to have more than we need.' This would be consistent with the letter of Messrs. Oxnard and Cutting, but nothing else is so."

The total catch of whales this year is stated to be only 28, and the industry seems to have almost reached the limit of nothingness. Half a century ago the American whaling fleet consisted of over 700 vessels. The catch of 1846 was valued at $21,000,000.

PROSTRATE WITH RHEUMATIC FEVER SIX TIMES WITHIN TWENTY YEARS.

This was the case of Mr. Eli Wiltshire of Landsdown Terrace, Calne, Wis., who during this time suffered the most intense agony. He writes:

"I heartily indorse the testimonials which you publish of St. Jacob's Oil as a pain killer, for I have been a sufferer from rheumatism and kindred complaints at different times during the last twenty years. I have been laid prostrate with rheumatic fever six times during that period, therefore I consider I know something about rheumatism. During all of these twenty years I have tried various advertised rheumatic remedies, oils, ointments and embrocations. None of them gave me much relief, but when I tried St. Jacob's Oil I found quite different results. It eased the pain almost immediately and has done for me what all other remedies put together never began to do.

"I could give you several cases that have been cured, which have come under my notice, and through my recommendation; also one of toothache, one of faceache, and one of sore throat.

"I have recommended St. Jacob's Oil and shall continue to do so by every means in my power, as I consider you deserving of every support."

No man's destiny can be judged till destiny has ended him.

LARGER SCHOOL BUILDINGS REQUIRED.

Owing to the recent large influx of population into Western Canada it has become absolutely necessary in many parts of Manitoba, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan and Alberta to increase the school accommodation. In may places buildings have been erected that are only half-occupied. This is perhaps as good evidence as will be found not only of their satisfaction with their present school system and their confidence that it will remain as it is, but also of their firm belief in the future expansion of the country, in increased immigration, and it further indicates that they have little fear that the well established rate of births in civilized communities will not be maintained there.

The free homestead laws and the cheap railway lands offer great inducements, which are opening up the new settlements. Agents of the Government of Canada are actively at work in different portions of the States for the purpose of giving information to possible settlers, and advertisements are now appearing in a large number of papers, giving the names and locations of these agents.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Where Condensed Milk Travels.

That commonplace and indispensable article, condensed milk, is also a great traveler, and for 20 years the label on the tin has been the message sent by America to millions of uncouth people who never heard of the great Republic, and who, if the anti-climax may be allowed, never set eyes on a milch cow. The explorer and the missionary are the advance agents of condensed milk. It goes wherever they venture, and when the missionary has children it is the one thing his household cannot do without. There is no wilderness where a discarded milk tin does not glitter in the sun. It has blazed the way across Africa; it has been very near the pole, for Lieutenant Peary relates that 18 years after the Greeley expedition cached canned rations in the frozen north he found the condensed milk as sweet and wholesome as ever. In the fastnesses of northern Luzon, where an American face had never been seen, General Young's soldiers found tins of condensed milk with the brand of the eagle. It can be found all over Mongolia and Manchuria, and even in Thibet. The Chinese, who do not take milk in their tea, use the condensed kind as a food, chiefly for their children. In India also it has a large sale for that purpose, and it is not too much to say that the product of the American factory has been the pabulum of millions of Asiatics.—H. E. Armstrong, in Ainslee's.

The Stable.

Keep dairy cattle in a room or building by themselves. It is preferable to have no cellar below and no storage loft above.

Stables should be well ventilated, lighted and drained; should have tight floors and walls and be plainly constructed.

Never use musty or dirty litter.

Allow no strong smelling material in the stable for any length of time. Store the manure under cover outside the cow stable and remove it to a distance as often as practicable.

Whitewash the stable once or twice a year; use landplaster in the manure gutters daily.

Use no dry, dusty feed just previous to milking; if fodder is dusty, sprinkle it before it is fed.

Clean and thoroughly air the stable before milking; in hot weather sprinkle the floor.

Keep the stable and dairy room in good condition and then insist that the dairy, factory or place where the milk goes be kept equally well.

Every trial shows better returns when wheat is mixed with some other grain than when fed alone, although if prices permit it wheat may profitably form four-fifths of a grain ration. Mixing with other grains overcomes the tendency to form a pasty mass.

The Cattle Question.

At a convention of stockmen at Buffalo Dr. Sanford of Washington, D. C., made a speech that should be read by every farmer in the United States. He made a statement to the effect that the United States has the largest aggregate number of cattle, representing the largest investment of any country in the world. He then mentioned the work of the Bureau of Animal Industry in connection with the consular department in their efforts to increase this trade by sending cattle to Mexico, Central and South American countries, and gave the difficulties that had been met with in their endeavors in this direction; prejudice, quarantine regulations, lack of proper transportation and other causes had presented innumerable stumbling blocks. In addition to these troubles the scarcity of cattle in our own markets has added to the difficulty of extending trade in these directions. A point worthy of careful consideration is the fact that our own cattle are decreasing proportionately as the population increases. No statement in connection with the cattle business could possibly contain more material for study than this.

Increasing Egg Production.

From Farmers' Review: It has been my experience that by careful selection, the laying quality of a flock of hens can be improved 50 per cent. I have tried it and write from actual experience. My method is this: Several times a day during late fall and early winter I pass by the nests where the hens lay, noting what hens are there most. Those hens I mark with a legband or punch in the web of the foot with a poultry punch. If there are only three or four hens or even two, I take these from the flock, yard them by themselves, pick from the flock a nice male and mate him with them during the breeding season. I get the chicks hatched as early in the spring as circumstances will permit. I set by themselves the eggs from the selected pen. I set two hens at the same time, and if they do not hatch too many chicks I put them all with one hen and set the other one over again. If dusted all over with insect powder once a week, she will set just as well the last three weeks as the first three. Of the eggs from the selected pen I set all that are not too small or not too large. I find that where the eggs are of nearly one size, the chicks are most apt to be of about the same size. I do not keep any pullets that are hatched later than May 10 at latest. Earlier ones are better winter layers. I mark all chicks from the selected pen as soon as they are old enough. The best time to mark them is just before the hens wean them, as you are sure to get the right ones then. The night before I want to mark them I close the coops. In the morning I take my punch and mark them as I let them out. This work requires but a short time, and I find it pays. When I want to market any chicks I select those that are not marked. If I have raised enough that are marked or all I want to winter, I sell all of those that are not marked. I mark the chicks in the outside web of the right foot the first year. The next year I do the same way, but am careful to notice if I haven't a few more females to put in this yard the 2d year. I mark in inside web of right foot the second year. I am careful to notice which I have the most of to go into this pen marked in inside web or outside web. If I have most marked in inside web, I know I have made some improvement, and so on from year to year. By the time I have punched the webs in both feet, the fowls punched in the outside web of the right foot are sold, and I start right over again. I believe that anyone that will try this plan will agree with me that a flock of fowls, regardless of breed, can, by careful selection of the best fowls, be improved 50 per cent for egg production. I breed fancy poultry along these same lines, and have improved them each year, as my record for prizes won will show. Cull close and know just what you are at, is my motto.—David O. Bootz, Peoria County, Illinois.

Crops for Reclaimed Marshes.

From the Farmers' Review: In reference to the questions asked by one of your Wisconsin correspondents, I would say: Considerable work has been done in this state on these black, marsh soils and much remains to be done. It has been a rather general experience of those who have drained and broken these lands that while profitable crops were grown the first year, and in some cases for the first few years, the crops of succeeding years were constantly poorer and poorer. Experiments both in Europe and in this state have shown that very frequently, but not always these soils will give very good results when fertilized with potash, either in the form of commercial fertilizers or in the form of wood ashes. Farmyard manure has also been found to be very helpful. In some experiments conducted at Madison the application of potassium sulphate has given more than four times the yield of ear corn grown on unfertilized land. Your correspondent will find these experiments described in detail in the annual report of this station for 1900. In regard to crops which are best grown on this soil, I must say that no systematic work has as yet been done. When well fertilized with farm manure, rape, corn and timothy have given fair crops. In draining these peaty marshes it is desirable in many cases to put in open ditches which may be left for a few years until the peat has somewhat decomposed and then the clay tile may be placed. If this is not done, the settling of the peat on draining will give rise to two difficulties; first, the tiles will be distorted and in some cases pulled down so low that no drainage can take place, and, second, the settling down of the marsh will often leave the tiles so near the surface that they interfere with cultivation. After drainage, it is usually best to simply harrow the ground with a spring tooth harrow rather than to plow it owing to the loose nature of the ground itself.—A. R. Whitson, Wisconsin Agricultural College.

We believe that it will pay many of our readers to investigate what are called the "trap nests." These nests, as most of our readers know, are made so that a hen about to lay goes in and the entrance is automatically closed. After laying she goes out of another door into another yard. The layers are thus kept separate from those that do no laying. The idea is variously modified. The man that wants to improve the laying qualities of his fowls will find some form of this nest of assistance. There are some expensive patented trap nests and there are others used that are not patented and of small cost. Others can be made at home.

Two more trials recently at Sandy Hook with the Gathman shell proved it a complete failure. Mr. Gathman has failed to demonstrate his theory that a large mass of gun cotton exploded on the outside of a battleship would sink it.

A Boston school teacher had been reading to her pupils about the rain. Asking one of them to write a little story about the rain he, after declaring his inability to do so, upon the teacher's insistence, produced the following: "What does the rain say to the dust? A remarkable story, which is really true, is told of an affectionate son in Buda Pesth. His age was eighty-eight and, in a fit of despondency, he leaped from a bridge and committed suicide because of his inability to longer support his father and mother, aged, respectively, 115 and 110 years.

There are three nut-cracking plants in St. Louis. The machines are driven by electricity, each nut being fed individually into the crusher. After the shells are cracked the nuts are winnowed by an air blast and the meat is picked from the cracked shells by hand, women and girls being employed for this part of the work.

A Wonderful Cure.

Wright City, Mo., Dec. 30.—Medical men are still wondering over the Symes case, which has aroused such a widespread interest in this neighborhood.

Mr. Joseph G. Symes had suffered very severely from Inflammatory Rheumatism, enduring pains which were something terrible and which made it altogether impossible for him to work by day or rest or sleep at night. In spite of all treatments he grew worse and his case seemed to defy all the usual remedies.

He began a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills and very soon noticed a marked improvement, which increased as he kept on till six boxes were used when he found himself without a trace of pain or ache. He is now able to work all day and sleep all night, and his rapid and complete recovery is regarded by the doctors as little short of a miracle.

HAIR NATURALLY ABUNDANT.

When It is Free of Dandruff, It Grows Luxuriantly.

Hair preparations and dandruff cures, as a rule, are sticky or irritating affairs that do no earthly good. Hair, when not diseased, grows naturally luxuriantly. Dandruff is the cause of nine-tenths of all hair trouble, and dandruff is caused by a germ. The only way to cure dandruff is to kill the germ; and, so far, the only hair preparation that will positively destroy the germ is Newbro's Herpicide—absolutely harmless, free from grease, sediment, dye matter or dangerous drugs. It allays itching instantly; makes hair glossy and soft as silk. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect"—dandruff.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.

"Something New Under The Sun."

All doctors have tried to cure Catarrh by the use of powders, acid gases inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucuous membrane causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhales have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practioner who has for many years made close study and specialty of the treatment of Catarrh, has at last perfected a treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, ut permanently cures Catarrh, by removing the cause, stopping the disnarges and curing all inflamation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE" and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full months treatment and everything necessary to it's perfect use. "Snuffles" is the only perfect Catarrh Cure ever made as is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflamation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve Hay Fever or Cold in the head. Catarrh when neglected often leads to "Consumption—Snuffles will save you if you use it at once It is no ordinary remedy but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure Catarrh in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advive from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "Snuffles" the "Guaranteed Catarrh Cure," Sent prepaid to any address in the United States or Canaba on receipt of One Doller. THE NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE paints with loving touch the historic landmarks of New England; it recalls the customs and traditions of the "old red schoolhouse days" and tells of the achievements of New Englanders in all parts of the world. It has distinguished contributors and is artistically printed and illustrated. Monthly, $3.00 per annum.

THE NORTHWESTERN AGRICULTURIST is the leading farm, livestock and home paper in the West. It interests every member of the family, having departments devoted to the interests of women as well as of men, on the farms in the Northwest. It is filled with instructive and interesting reading matter from beginning to end. Its various departments are under the charge of practical men, who have made a success themselves on their particular line on which they are writing. Amongst the department editors who contribute regularly to The Agriculturist, are Prof. Thomas Shaw, Professor of Animal Husbandry at the Minnesota State Agricultural College. Professor Shaw edits the sheep, beef cattle and horse departments; A. X. Hyatt, a dairyman known all over America as a practical and experienced dairy writer; Forest Henry, editor of the swine department, a man who has paid off mortgages by raising swine in Minnesota, and who is himself making money in swine raising now, not as a breeder but as a feeder of swine for market; A. K. Bush, in charge of the horticultural department, State Lecturer on Horticulture at the Minnesota Farmers' Institutes. These are only a few of the more important departments of the paper. Sample Copies will be sent free to all who are interested. The Northwestern Agriculturist is published semi-monthly, and already reaches over 56,000 farm homes twice a month. Subscription price fifty cents a year.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

Fred Seikmeyer's sale Tuesday was well attended and everything sold well.

J. W. Allen and wife started Tuesday for a couple weeks' visit with friends in Franklin county.

Mr. Labore, of Forest City, and Mr. Chase and sister of Garner, visited their aunt, Mrs. T. Gauley last week.

Last Thursday at the literary the judges decided that there was more pleasure in posession than pursuit. This week they will wrestle with the question as to whether money leads to more crime than anger.

A Profitable Investment.

"I was troubled for about seven years with my stomach and in bed half my time," says E. Demick, Somerville, Ind. "I spent about $1,000 and never could get anything to help me until I tried Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. I have taken a few bottles and am entirely well." You don't live by what you eat, but by what you digest and assimilate. If your stomach doesn't digest your food you are really starving. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does the stomach's work by digesting your food. You don't have to diet. Eat all you want. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles. J.L.Harr.

Garner

From Special Correspondent.

Mrs. Reed, of Ruthven, is here visiting her son, Emery.

Rev. Hanscom and family left last week for their new home in Illinois.

The Northern Lumber Co. has promoted F. L. Bush from Kiester, Minn., to take charge of their yards at Forest City.

Last week Tuesday night at his home near Garner, occurred the death of B. F. Kramer, being caused by heart failure, due to some extent to the death of his daughter which occurred some two weeks before. Deceased was a member of the Garner G. A. R. Post, and a much respected citizen. The funeral was held Saturday.

Children Especially Liable.

Burns, bruises and cuts are extremely painful and if neglected often result in blood poisoning. Children are especially liable to such mishaps because not so careful. As a remedy DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled. Draws out the fire, stops the pain, soon heals the wound. Beware of counterfeits. Sure cure for piles. "DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured my baby of eczema after two physicians gave her up," writes James Mock, N. Webster, Ind. "The sores were so bad she soiled two to five dresses a day." J. L. Harr.

Corwith

From the Hustler.

J. T. Heaves delivered two fat hogs to A. Marr last Tuesday that weighed 1000 pounds.

Thos. Farrell returned from Victor with a bride the first of the week. He was married to Miss Mary Smith of the above named place on Dec. 18.

On Friday last Chris. Hinkey, while scuffling with Wilbur Latham, had his left arm broken by falling against the edge of the shelving in Crane's hardware store. Both bones of the forearm were broken.

W. L. Mitchell stored his household furniture and departed to the scene of his labors at the county seat for the next four year. It is surmised that his furniture will not remain long in storage, but will be used in furnishing a house for two.

M. G. Brown was the recipient of a purse of $150 on New Years day, presented by his Corwith friends. His old comrades, the boys of '61-65, were instrumental in raising the money. Mace has had a long siege of typhoid fever, from which he has not yet fully recovered. No doubt he will receive the gift in the same spirit in which it was given.

Joe Studer had a narrow escape from death at Britt Tuesday. He was returning from Dakota on the afternoon train on the M. & St. L., and stepped off at Britt to see a party and attempted to board the train again while in motion. The baggage truck on the platform caught in his pocket and threw him under the train across the rail. By a quick turn of the body he rolled to one side, the wheels just missing him, but the boxing slightly bruising him. The train stopped and picked him up. He was in a dazed condition when he reached Corwith but had received no serious injury.

Don't Live Together.

Kanawha

From the Record:

Monte Gordon is afflicted with a case of the mumps.

Oie Shurson's daughter has been very sick this week with brain fever.

Hampton has a case of smallpox and the Phoenix hotel is under quarantine.

Nels Lindahl is unable to attend to his customary duties on account of sickness.

While B. Borchers and family were away from home Wednesday, some hunters shot his dog.

F. E. Ballou, of Britt, has purchased the Anderson restaurant in that city and will consolidate it with the one he has been conducting there.

We much regret to learn that I. H. Benedict will leave in the spring for the south for the benefit of his health, his first point being the Hot Springs, of Arkansas.

Henry Wagner, of route No. 2, who has been in South Dakota where he was feeding several hundred head of cattle, recently sufferek the loss of his entire supply of hay, about $300 worth. It is supposed to have been maliciously set on fire by some person.

M. Greenfield, of Belmond, was in town yesterday. Menlo has bought the creamery in his town. has also a wife now, and is on the straight road to success.

Charlie Farrell and wife and his brother Homer, of Corwith, are staying at Hotel Baker for a couple of weeks. Mr. Farrell has charge of baleing some hay for Harry Martin.

H. J. Klemme made a business trip here the fore part of the week. Himself and wife will start soon for a trip through Te as, Old Mexico and California, returning home by way of one of the northern lines of road.

New Century Comfort.

Millions are daily finding a world of comfort in Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It kills pain from burns, scalds, cuts, bruises; conquers ulcers and fever sores; cures eruptions, salt rheum; boils and felons; removes corns and warts. Best pile cure on earth. Only 25c at Harr's drug store.

Goodell

From the Globe.

Guy Fuller arrived Tuesday from Arizona, called home by the serious illness of his father.

Mrs. Wilkins is numbered among the sick this week, suffering from an attack of pneumonia.

Roy Shaffer, who has been visiting with relatives at Eldora for the past month, returned home Monday.

Mrs. Ad Elder received a very pleasant visit from her sister of Garner the fore part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Brooks and Mrs. Clara Shaffer were at Meservey Sunday, calling on Mrs. W. H. Brooks who is taking medical treatment there.

E. J. Bauman was considerably surprised on last Saturday evening when a number of our citizens gathered at his commodious home in honor of his birthday. Refreshments were served and a general good time had by all present.

Heads Should Never Ache

Never endure this trouble. Use at once the remedy that stopped it for Mrs. N. A. Webster, of Winnie, Va. She writes "Dr. King's New Life Pills wholly cured me of sick headaches I had suffered from for two years." Cure headache, constipation, billiousness. 25c at Harr's drug store.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, Jan. 6, 1902.

W. L. Eaton, of Osage, speaker of the next house of representatives, has arrived in the city and opened his headquarters for the session of the Twenty-ninth general assembly. Mr. Eaton has parlors G and H at the Savery. In his opinion the session can be made less than a hundred days if the members will co-operate with the presiding officer and go to work from the very first. Mr. Eaton hopes to get a good start and to push matters through with all possible speed in order there may not be the usual haste in the last ten days of the session. Eaton has served [illegible] terms in the house and his legislative experience will be of much value in crushing out dilatory tactics on the part of the members and in utilizing to best advantage all of the time available.

Judge Kinne, of the board of control, has returned from making the regular monthly inspection of the institutions at Clarinda, Glenwood and Council Bluffs. At Clarinda it has been necessary to establish quarantine regulations so as to prevent the admittance of general visitors to the hospital. The smallpox in the town is quite serious, and on this account precautions are being taken. Relatives of inmates are not excluded under the regulations.

John H. Delaney of east Seventh street, has been arrested for alleged embezzelment of $1,000 from Mrs. Alice M. Slater. She charges that he took possession of the money, which she had left at his house for safe keeping several years ago, and which was all intact up to March 11 last. At that time she avers that her call for an inspection resulted in finding nothing at all. Mrs. Slater stated that she was afraid to put her money in care of the banks for fear they would suspend.

Representatives M. J. Sweeley and John T. Willett of Woodbury county, who have arrived in this city and taken up headquarters at the Savery hotel, state that they will favor equal suffrage during the general assembly. They state that the sentiment of Woodbury county is favorable to suffrage and their personal views are of little consequence.

Governor Shaw has planned to have 100 of the letters and messages of congratulation he received following his appointment as secretary of the treasury bound. Some of the letters are of unusual nature, their authors embracing prominent men in all parts of the country, including many leading financiers. Aside from their personal value to the governor, they will some day have a historical worth, and the governor has determined to select 100, taking a representative letter from each section of the country, and have them bound in one volume.

The Y. M. C. A., women and sutlers, according to the annual report of Colonel J. A. Olmsted, inspector general of the state, are three things not wanted or needed about the national guard encampments. The report is a caustic document and calls sharp attention to numerous reforms deemed needed in the Iowa National guard. Important recommendations for the betterment of the guard are offered, including one for the purchase of a permanent camp ground. Colonel Olmsted protests against the use of cavalry equipments belonging to the state by the Lincoln hussars of this city, and points out that it is in direct controvention of the code. The inspector general favors the erection of a state arsenal and adjutant general's building, the mustering in of two batteries of artillery in Des Moines and the establishment of a signal service company here, the enlistment of two troops of cavalry in some of the country towns of the state, and various changes in the military code of the state including one giving officers a tenure of office for life during good behavior. Colonel Olmsted does not beat about the bush in the least in handling the subject of reform needed in the encampments. "There are three things," he says, "our camps can dispense with to the good of the service, viz: suttlers, Y. M. C. A. and women. There is nothing the suttler sells the men would not be better without. The ration is sufficient for the authorized force in camp and does not need to be eked out with poor ices, ice cream and so-called 'soft drinks' that are worse than slops and ruinous to the stomach. The Y. M. C. A. is not required in camp to either handle mail or advertise themselves on elaborate letterheads erroneously printed. It should be a part of camp instruction for a command to care for its own mail. In the short week of camp life it is not really necessary to write many letters, and the men should be taught to look out for themselves in regard to writing material, stamps, etc. As to women living in camp, it is a difficult subject to properly treat. But if they do not know or care that they are a nuisance, underfoot and a detriment to the good work and benefit expected of camp, they have so far unsexed themselves as to be for once on an equality with men and should be plainly ordered to stay out of camp. They become a nuisance as soon as they leave home with a command, crowding the cars to the discomfort of the men, and in camp they not only crowd the grounds, but eat to the detriment of the company messes, and I have never heard of their 'chipping in' to help out the mess."

THE NEWS IN IOWA

HOGS RUSHED TO MARKET.

An Abnormal Condition is Already Developed.

Des Moines, Jan. 6.—The drouth of 1901 and the short corn crop is likely to be far reaching in its effect upon the hog supply in the middle west states and especially in Iowa. Experienced stock buyers say it is doubtful if the hog feeding business resumes its normal conditions for the next two years.

The prevailing high price of corn has alarmed the feeders and but few of them are making any effort to hold their hogs back to the usual time for feeding. Thousands upon thousands of hogs that in ordinary years would be held several weeks longer on corn feed are now being hurried to market to avoid expensive feeding, and at the present ratio the country will be denuded of porkers in a few weeks.

Already the run has been so large at several big market points that the average receipts as compared with those of previous months and previous years have fallen off at an alarming rate within the last few days. Hog buyers say that this is due to the fact that all the marketable hogs have been consigned and that feeders are now sending in light stuff and skipps and culls.

At one market the average weight of all hogs received last week was 196 pounds, against an average weight of 200 pounds for the preceding week and of 231 pounds for the corresponding week of 1901. The average was the lightest in the history of the yard and the quality the poorest. Similiar reports are received from all the market points.

Hog buyers have been scouring the country in an effort to secure good hogs for shipment to the packing centers, but report that the herds are nearly all cleaned up, that in many instances feeders have sacrificed portions of their brood herds to avoid the cost of carrying them over on expensive corn and that immature and thin hogs are about all that remain in the country and that they are being marketed with great rapidity.

They say that herds have been sold down so close that there is bound to be a shortage next season and that it will be 1903 before the herds regain their usual numbers.

SERIOUS CONFLICT AT EVANS.

Constable Ruggenberg Probably Fatally Injured.

Oskaloosa, Jan. 6.—Constable John Ruggenberg, of Evans, was shot and fatally injured while attempting to arrest Roy Leighton, colored at the Rock Island depot. Ruggenberg was hit in the groins, and there is little hope of recovery.

The tragedy is the outcome of a fight between some white and colored boys, originating during a charivari at a wedding New Year's night. A white boy by the name of Jule Laden was whipped and his clothes cut by colored boys. A second fight ensued Friday, and that night a crowd of twelve battered down the door of O'Brien's and proceeded with a rough house. O'Brien, bartender Paul Evans and Laden were all knocked senseless and left lying on the gory floor. The rest of the crowd fought until they were tired out and quit from sheer exhaustion.

In attempting to make arrests Ruggenberg was shot. The crowd then took the rest of the warrants away from the injured officer and skipped out. Sheriff Cricket, two constables and a posse of deputies started in pursuit. Eight of the leaders among the negroes who have been involved in the trouble were brought here for safe keeping. Special deputy sheriffs were placed on guard and the saloons closed by Sheriff Crickett.

ROBBERS MAKE BIG HAUL.

Dry Goods Store at De Soto Loses $2,000 Worth of Goods.

De Soto, Jan. 3.—With unparalleled audacity, a gang of burglars practically rifled the Brown dry goods store of its contents, hauling away in wagons nearly $2,000 worth of plunder, consisting of clothing, dry goods and jewelry. Manager D. J. Forbes says that the loss will more likely exceed this estimate than go below it.

Entrance was obtained by smashing the glass in a rear door, lifting the latch and then forcing open the double doors into the main room. They apparently worked at leisure for they thoroughly overhauled the entire stock selecting the best goods.

Absolutely no clue was left. Bolts of dry goods were found scattered along the road for a short distance, having evidently fallen from the wagon in the hurried flight of the robbers, but the trail can only be followed a half mile or so, when all trace is lost. It is apprehended that the robbers will have difficulty in disposing of so much plunder and that they will be caught soon.

WESTON HAS A FIRE.

Four Business Houses and Three Dwellings Burned.

Weston, Jan. 3.—A fire which started in the general store of Petrus Peterson early yesterday did $45,000 damaged and destroyed four of the principal places of business and three dwellings. A strong wind carried the flames rapidly and it was feared at one time that the whole town would be destroyed. The principal losers are Klopping & Williams, general store and implement house, and two buildings, valued at $20,000; Petrus Peterson, general store, $9,000; H. A. Quinn, lumber, $8,000; R. T. Williams, resilence, $2,000. The remainder of the losses were small ones. All were insured.

DID NOT KNOW GOVERNOR

TREASURY EMPLOYES CHILLY UNTIL THEY SAW HIS CARD.

Shaw Will Succeed Gage at Head of Department on January 25—No Changes Announced.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Governor Shaw of Iowa, will succeed to the secretaryship of the treasury January 25. He made this announcement Saturday after an extended conference with Secretary Gage.

Mr. Shaw arrived in Washington Friday evening. Bright and early Saturday morning he appeared at the secretary of the treasury's office. The messengers and doorkeepers were on the lookout for him, but as he had not spruced up any for his first visit to the department they did not think the man with the crumpled slouch hat and the short spring overcoat which failed to hide his baggy trousers was their future superior, and Mr. Shaw was shown into the public reception room.

Things were different as soon as he gave one of the ushers his card. The doors opened as if by magic and when once he was in Mr. Gage's private room the entrance was sealed up and a messenger took a position outside.

When his visit with Mr. Gage ended the employes of the office bowed low and addressed Governor Shaw as "Mr. Secretary."

After their talk Secretary Gage said: "Mr. Shaw and I have agreed that I will turn the office over to him January 25. I have no plans for the future to announce just at present. I will remain here for awhile and assist Mr. Shaw in every way possible in getting the run of his new office. After he becomes familiar with the working of the department I will begin to make plans for myself. I will probably go to Chicago shortly after Mr. Shaw takes hold."

Governor Shaw said that his conference with Mr. Gage had been taken up in the main with the discussion of the personnel of the office force. The secretary had told him about each man who is in an important position.

"I can say," said Governor Shaw, "that I do not contemplate any immediate changes in the assistant secretaries or the office force. There will be no startling innovations in the conduct of the department, although, of course, every man who has been and who will be the head of the treasury department has some ideas which he hopes to put into effect."

Mr. Gage and Governor Shaw then called at the White house, where Mr. Shaw had a second conference with President Roosevelt. He also was the president's guest at luncheon.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury H. A. Taylor will retain his position under Governor Shaw, the new secretary of the treasury. The retention of Mr. Taylor was agreed upon at a consultation between the president and members of the Wisconsin delegation.

STOLEN GOODS FOUND.

Des Moines Police Find Goods Stolen at De Soto.

Des Moines, Jan. 4.—A wagon load of clothing, dress goods, valises, jewelry and furnishing goods belonging to the Brown Dry Goods company of De Soto have been recovered by the police department. The goods were found secreted in a coal shed and hidden in various portions of the house at 212 Tenth street, and occupied by Martin Jones.

Chief Mathis was given a "tip" that an extensive "plant" of stolen goods could be found at the house mentioned. Officers McKircher, Barnes and the chief repaired to the house and proceeded to serve notice of a search warrant on Mr. Jones. Bolts of flannels, dress goods, and pieces of jewelry were found hidden between the springs and the mattress in two beds. More of the goods were found in the attic, others in the cellar and some in closets. Nearly a wagon load of ready made clothing was unearthed in a coal shed in the rear of the house.

When Jones was asked to explain the presence of the stolen plunder in his house and on the premises, he refused to talk further than to declare that he did not know. However, his wife, who is afflicted with sciatic rheumatism, from which she suffers torture, confided to the officers, after extended persuasion, that the goods had been brought to the house Wednesday morning before daylight. Later the police arrested Jones, Louis Brown and Charles McAfee.

A PERRY-ADEL INTERURBAN.

Promoter of Enterprise Goes East to Secure Machinery.

Des Moines, Jan. 2.—Mr. L. W. Klinker, the promoter of the proposed interurban railway between Perry and Adel, was in Des Moines and announced his intention of starting east in a few days to inspect some of the systems there for the purpose of getting the best ideas for the new road in which he is interested. He will be gone some weeks, but it is the intention of those interested in the project to push the work as fast as possible, and they hope to have part of the road completed by fall. Lafe Higgins of Des Moines has been engaged to make the survey and he will commence early in the spring. The road is to extend from Adel to Perry, and at Panther postoffice a branch will be run west to Panora and later to Guthrie Center. It may be extended west to Harlan and Council Bluffs some time in the future. A branch will probably be run from Adel to Van Meter.

Practically all the preliminaries of organization are completed and the articles of incorporation will be filed in a week or two. The capital of the company will be $250,000.

OBSTACLES REMOVED.

Carnegie's Gift to Nation to be Accepted.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Secretary Hay and a number of gentlemen interested in the Carnegie project of a national university, met at the state department and formed a corporation known as the "Carnegie Institution."

It is understood that Mr. Carnegie has removed the obstacles that existed to the acceptance of his $10,000,000 donation to the cause of education, and today's action was the first step toward giving legal form and substance to the proposition. Beside Secretary Hay the incorporators, all of whom were present at today's meeting, are Edwin D. White, justice of the supreme court; D. C. Gillman, late president of Johns Hopkins university; Charles D. Walcott, superintendent of the geological survey; John S. Billings, ex-surgeon general of the navy, and Carrol D. Wright, commissioner of labor. Marcus Baker of the coast survey was also present, not as an incorporator, but charged with the preparation of the articles of incorporation.

The meeting consumed about an hour. There was an indisposition on the part of those present to enter into details of the project, based on a desire to allow Mr. Carnegie himself to make the public announcement.

PANAMA CANAL PROPERTY.

Offered for Sale to United States for $40,000,000.

Paris, Jan.6.—The directors of the Panama Canal company, with President Bo in the chair, met at the company's office Saturday, and after a brief session came to a definite decision to offer to sell the canal property to the United States for $40,000,000. This price includes the excavations, canal railroad, machinery, and all other items specified in the isthmian report. The company's representative at Washington, M. Bouefve, was instructed to formally submit this offer to the president.

Washington, Jan. 6.—A formal proposition to sell the Panama canal properties to the United States government for $40,000,000 was submitted to the authorities here Saturday. It was made by M. Bouefve, representing the company, to Admiral Walker, as chairman of the isthmian commission. M. Bouefve acted under cable instructions received from the Panama canal officials at Paris. Admiral Walker brought the proposition to the knowledge of the secretary of state and the president, going directly to the state department for that purpose.

BOERS URGED TO FIGHT.

General Botha Sends a Note to All Commandoes Spurring Them On.

Pretoria, Jan. 4.—General De Wet has ordered the Boer commandants to retard the work of extending the British block houses at any cost. Further fighting may consequently be expected.

Gen. Bruce Hamilton has captured another Boer laager and twenty-two prisoners on the Swaziland border.

Johannesburg, Jan. 4.—Gen. Botha has sent a note to all Boer commandoes requesting them to keep on fighting, for the British parliament is to be asked for another war vote, which will induce the British nation to demand that the war in South Africa be stopped.

Paris, Jan. 4.—The Courior du Soir publishes another report to the effect that the United States is preparing the way for intervention by the powers in South Africa.

London, Jan. 4.—Lord Roberts has issued an official contradiction of the stories circulated on the continent of the violation of Boer women by the British troops in South Africa and the employment of Boer female refugees for immoral purposes.

OHIO SITUATION IS MIXED.

Hanna wins in House and Foraker in Senate.

Columbus, O., Jan. 6.—In the republican caucuses for the organization of the general assembly the Hanna men secured control of the house and the Foraker men will control the senate. Some of the nominations for the latter were made without opposition, but there was "a fight to a finish" for the offices of the house, and especially for the speakership.

There was no compromise in either case. In the senate the senators make up the standing committees themselves. In the house the speaker appoints all the committees and the contest was primarily for the speakership, with everything else as secondary. The republican senate caucus was short and featureless, but the the house caucus was animated and lasted several hours. Representative Cole in presenting the name of W. S. McKinnon, of Ashtabula, for speaker, denied that McKinnon's election could be construed as a humiliation of Senator Foraker, whose re-election they all desired.

Made Her Own Scaffold.

Cedar Rapids, Jan. 3.—Mrs. James Everett, residing at a point five miles north of Paris, suicided, by hanging. She adjusted a noose about her neck one end of which was attached to a rafter, and kicked a chair from under her. Despondency is the motive ascribed.

Lost Arm in Corn Shredder

Belmond, Jan. 6.—Frank McNamara, a single man 25 years old, had his right arm torn off in a corn shredder three miles north of this place. He was brought to town and received medical attention and is doing well.

Fame is something that makes a lot of fools want to shake your hand.

A man who is out for the rocks isn't necessarily a geologist.

PROCLAMATION BY MATOS.

Venezuelans Called Upon to Rise Against Castro.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, Jan. 3.—Via Haytien cable.—The British steamship Ban Righ, recently renamed the Libertador, has left this port for the Venezuelan coast. She carries among her passengers Senor Matos, who is now referred to as General Matos, and several other important personages of Venezuela, who joined General Matos here. Among these notables are: Nicolas Rolando, Domingo Monagas, Penaloza Ducharne, Eduardo Ortega Cordova, Corlos Azugary Egeamier, Tomas Garcia, Mervez Marro, Christiani Antoiles Bartazal, Antoine Espinoza and Morendi Sambrano Rendon. Besides the leaders of the expedition the Libertador has on board 300 volunteers while on her way to the coast of Venezuela.

The behavior of General Matos and his adherents while they were at this port was most correct, and when they left here they had the sympathy of the whole population. General Matos is known at Fort de France, where he has many friends. The local newspapers have published articles expressing hopes for the prompt success of the revolution and the downfall of Castro, whose attitude, the papers add, has earned for him the enmity of the whole world.

Previous to his departure from Fort de France, General Matos issued a manifesto calling on all his fellow countrymen to take up arms.

While the Libertador was at this port her sides were strengthened by light armor and her gun positions were protected. Her armament is of the modern type.

CHINESE OUTLOOK DARK

EMPRESS DOWAGER HAS NOT LEARNED BY EXPERIENCE.

Foreigners Disposed to Take a Pessimistic View of the Situation in the Orient.

Peking, Jan. 3.—Several recent occurrences tend to discourage the hope that the dowager empress had learned a lesson of reform from the events of the past year. Foreigners are disposed to take a pessimistic view of the outlook. General Yung Lu's determination to organize two anti-foreign army corps to offset the commands of the pro-foreign Chinese leaders is particularly disquieting and is evidence of the continued domination of his influence, which is bitterly anti-foreign.

Other incidents which are considered significant are the suppression of the only independent newspaper in this city by the order of the governor of Peking and the closing of the industrial school here, recently organized by philanthropic Chinese, also by the governor's order.

This school was intended for the training of destitute youths. Other liberal Chinese will hesitate now to give practical vent to their theories, fearing the displeasure of official domination.

A third edict regarding the recent murder of a Belgian priest (near Ningh Sha Foo in Kan Soo province) has appeared. It appoints a special official to punish those who are guilty of the crime and reaffirms the dowager.

The dowager expresses good-will toward Christians. This unusual activity upon the part of the court in the punishment of those guilty of an anti-Christian outrage is taken as evidence of the dowager empress' desire to conciliate the powers upon the eve of the return of the court to Peking.

Proofs accumulate that Prince Ching's arguments persuaded the dowager empress to trust herself within range of the legation forts. Officials arriving here describe the dowager empress and General Yung Lu as being extremely nervous and suspicious lest the foreigners are preparing to entrap them after their arrival and punish them for encouraging boxerism.

The foreigners will probably view the court's re-entry into Peking from the wall near the legations.

The Chinese officials have been sounded by the ministers as to whether they will enforce the old custom of restraining foreigners from witnessing the imperial processions. The replies are not encouraging. The treaty gives the legation a strip of wall commanding a view of the gates of the imperial city, and the members of the foreign community are planning to assemble thereon. It will be a great innovation.

BARGAINED WITH BOXERS.

Sensational Revelations Appear Concerning Russia.

London, Jan. 3.—The Times this morning publishes the three alleged secret documents communicated by Dr. Ular, a prominent student of Chinese affairs, who recently returned to Europe from Manchuria and Mongolia, which go to prove the existence of a bargain negotiated between the late Li Hung Chang and Russia, through the medium of the Russian prince Ukhtomsky. Under the terms of this bargain the Boxer movement, which it is hinted was fomented by Russia, was to be turned against the foreigners, Russia engaging to protect the dowager empress against the western powers in return for permission to occupy Manchuria and a very free hand in Mongolia.

Commenting editorially on this matter, the Times says it ses nothing in the recent history of Russian action in the far east inconsistent with the story contained in the documents supplied by Dr. Ular.

MARY THE MAID OF THE INN....

A Story of English Life.

By JOSEPH HATTON.

She smiled in a melancholy way that was unusual with her, and looking round the room, said: "I will go and put my shawl on and win the wager for Mr. Barnsley. But how will you know that I have been to the abbey? Will you take my word for it?"

"Yes," said Wilson, with prompt courtesy, "asuredly we will. It is not a wager to be proud of after all, I'm thinking; but we will not make it more unworthy by conditions, unless you will let one of us go along with take care of you."

"That would be a pretty how-do-you-do," said the native whom Mary called Mr. Barnsley. "No, lass, thee bring a bough from t'old elder tree in t'aisle, can't be no mistake them."

And Mary started on her enterprise nothing loth, for her mind was weighted with melancholy thoughts, and she felt that a run over the windy footpath to the abbey would be good for her.

Moreover, the abbey had become sacred not only to the monks and nuns whom she had dreamed of in the past, but to her lover, Richard Parker, with whom she had explored every corner of it. She remembered every spot they had sat—and full of these thoughts she went joyfully on her way, determined to stand by the seat under the old elder tree; and, while she plucked the branch which the company at the inn required, breathe Dick's name, and give the wind as it blew down the aisle a fresh message of love for the dear fellow who had ridden along the London road with her ribbon in his hat.

CHAPTER IX.

As 'Squire Bellingham turned the bend of the road where it narrowed beneath the trees, his horse stumbled, recovered itself with an effort, and then went headlong upon the road, throwing its rider heavily.

Almost at the same moment Foster sprung forward from his hiding place on the right, while Parker stepped into the road from the left. Before Foster had seized the fallen horseman, the 'Squire was on his legs. The first stumble of his horse had prepared him for a fall, which he had managed with much dexterity, though he was by no means unhurt.

As he scrambled to his feet the horse tried to rise, but in vain.

"Stand!" exclaimed Foster, seizing the 'Squire who now faced him.

"The very thing I am trying to do, by your leave," the 'Squire replied, clutching his pistol.

"Hand over the bag that is fastened to your belt," said Foster, snatching at the leather wallet.

"Never, you ruffian!" exclaimed the 'Squire, "take that first!" He snapped his empty pistol and closed with his assailant.

Parker looked on, the fitful moonlight falling upon the combatants.

"Dick, he's knifing me!' suddenly exclaimed Foster, "close with him, curse you, close with him."

The 'Squire was too busy to say anything except to gasp "ruffian!" "beast!" "murderer!" and other expletives which seemed to give him strength.

He had seized Foster round the waist with his left hand, and was trying to strangle him with his right. Suddenly, by a great effort, Foster dragged himself and his adversary to their feet, but only to be thrown in the most scientific fashion.

Before the 'Squire could follow up his advantage Dick Parker had him in his vise-like clutch.

"Hello!" gasped Bellingham, "what's this? Another?"

"Resistance is useless,' said Parker, deftly cutting belt and wallet with his knife and allowing them to drop to the ground.

"You cursed ruffian!" exclaimed the 'Squire, "I know you, and I'll bring you to the gallows."

"Don't be rash," exclaimed Dick, releasing his hold upon him in order to pick up the money.

"And you, too!" exclaimed the brave but rash Yorkshire 'Squire, "you are Foster, who supped in the same room with me at York. I'll hang you both!" With marvelous dexterity the 'Squire leaped upon his horse, which started off at a gallop; but he was hardly in his seat than bang, bang, went Foster's pistols, and he fell in a heap upon the road, the horse bounding off at a furious rate homewards, the clank of its hoofs through the darkness sounding the death-knell of its master.

"By heavens, you've killed him!" exclaimed Parker, leaning over the prostrate body, and then starting back as he felt the hot blood of the murdered man upon his hands.

"Damn him," I'm glad of it!" exclaimed Foster in a thick hoarse voice. "He has half killed me—another minute of this infernal grip and I should have been choked."

"This is the worst night's work we have ever done," said Parker.

"The best if you have the money," Foster replied.

"Curse the money," Dick answered, "it will be no good to us; we shall never get free of this foul business."

"Where's the bag?" was all Foster said in reply.

"Here!" said Parker.

"Foster clutched it, felt it, opened it, uttered an exclamation of delight, followed up with a quick series of jubilant remarks.

"Not get free?" he said, "there is enough here to free us forever. Not get free—we'll be on the sea tomorrow night unless you have other engagements. Everything is settled. Once at Whitby, we can put the sea between us and Yorkshire, and, what is more, between us and London. Are you game?"

"When we have disposed of this," said Dick, with a shudder, "we will talk of the next proceeding."

"Dispose of it," said Foster. "What do you mean?"

"There is an ancient opening in the ground, a drain, or conduit, just outside the abbey, north of the aisle, we can bury it there."

"Why bury it?" asked Foster.

"That we may have the chance of escape you dream of."

"Yes, you are right," said Foster, "the horse will give the alarm. If the body is not found for a day or two our retreat will be covered by the doubt and delay."

"Come, then," said Parker, and the two men proceeded to lift the body.

The moon came out from behind a scudding bank of clouds as if to bear witness against the deed of blood; but at the same moment it shone upon the graceful figure of Mary Lockwood as the heroine of the Star and Garter hurried through the meadows to the abbey—hurried not from fear, but in order that she might pause in the familiar ruin to think of Dick, and more particularly to think of him upon the very spot where last they had sat together, and he had urged her to accept his proposals of a secret marriage.

As Mary entered the wide aisle, a shaft of moonlight pierced the gloom and disappeared as a flash of lightning might have done. It startled her for a moment; but hardly had she reached the stone seat beneath the old elder tree than the moonlight came streaming in upon her with a calm and steady radiance. She took this for a good omen, which may be noted as evidence of the utter unreliability of superstitious interpretations of natural phenomena; for at that moment the awful shadow of the murderers and their victim had been struck by that same moonlight right across the abbey footpath.

The next moment Mary was holding her breath and creeping into the furthest shadows of the elder tree. A muttered curse had held her spellbound, so strange, so unexpected, so ferocious was it. She turned to look in the direction from which it had come.

Two dark figures carrying a helpless burden met her startled gaze. She wondered if this were some rude test of her courage, but this idea was quickly dispelled by the tremendous earnestness of the actors.

No two men could have played the part of bogies as these played.

As they approached her she saw that they labored with the weight of their ghastly load.

She saw the dead man's arms swing to and fro, and the poor head move helplessly from side to side.

As the first ruffian bore his share of the body, with his back towards her, the other stooped low and muttered curses not loud but deep.

The moon disappeared while the awful procession passed her hiding place, and it seemed to her a procession of magnitude, so long did it appear to be passing.

Mary had never felt fear until then. Her heart stood still. And yet it seemed to her as if her breath came and went with the noise of 20 people. She clutched the elder tree with a silent prayer of gratitude for the sound of the rustling ivy overhead, which seemed to assist in shielding her from observation.

The wind had stopped, as if to listen to the tale of blood; stopped dead, as if it had never rustled an ivy leaf, much less uprooted an oak. But the next moment it stormed through the open spaces on the towers, moaned in the hollows of the crypt. When the moon once more emerged from the stormy clouds the ruffians paused with their load, and the foremost of the two muttered: "Curse the wind," as his hat was blown along the aisle, stopping almost at Mary's feet.

"Would he follow it?" was the thought that once more terrified her.

She shrank to the furthermost corner of her shallow retreat, and clung to the trunk of the rugged elder in an agony of despair. But the second man said with an oath: "Come on; you can get the cursed hat when the job is ended," and they took up their load afresh and disappeared beyond the abbey walls.

The moment she could no longer see the ruffians, the awful fascination in which they held her abated.

She crept from her hiding place, siezed the hat, and with the speed of a hunted fawn bounded into the open and fled irrespective of dead or living.

She had recovered all her sense of freedom now that she was in the meadows. She knew that she could outstrip pursuit, even if she were followed; and, spite of the possibility of having to pass the murderers, she made straight for the path to the mill pond and flew over the welcome bridge.

They were too busy with their horrible work—Richard Parker and his vile companion—to note the flying shadow that fell upon them for a moment as Mary rushed past, like Fate, with the evidence of their identity in her hand, and with which token she staggered at last, pale and breathless, into the inn, standing in the midst of the startled company unable to utter a word.

The firelight fell tenderly upon her, as she leaned upon the arm of the ingle-nook settle for support.

Both Taylor and Wilson rushed toward her, but her uncle waved them back, and, stretching his bony arm about her, said:

"What is it, lass? Have you seen a ghost, you look so scared!"

Her lips moved as if she would answer, but her voice was silent.

"Give her water," said Taylor.

"A nip of brandy," said Tom, the man-of-all-work, who had gone straight to the bottle the moment he saw her come in, and handed it to Mr. Taylor, who pressed a little to her lips.

Then she sank upon a chair, and, waving her hand as if for air or silence, she said in a voice that had only been hushed for sheer want of breath (never perhaps before or since had the space between the inn and abbey been covered by human feet so quickly):

"There has been murder done. There are two of them, and this is one of their hats."

As she called attention to the hat she looked at it for the first time, and lo! the firelight was gleaming on the bright cockade which she had worked for her lover, Richard Parker.

CHAPTER X.

"It's Gentleman Parker's hat!" exclaimed old Morley, taking it from Mary's yielding hand; for at sight of her lover's guilt she had sunk down unconscious upon the settle.

"And who is Gentleman Parker?" asked Wilson.

"The fine young chap I towd you of!" remarked the native who had angered Wilson by telling him that Mary was already engaged.

"What's wrong?" asked Jack Meadows, striding to the bar, somewhat distraught in appearance, as he well might be, for he had just said goodby to his mother and to Kirkstall forever, and had looked in at the Star and Garter on his way to meet the London coach, "what's wrong?"

As he spoke he saw Mary and raised her from her seat and looked around at the people about him with amazement.

They were no less astonished than he; they had not recovered from the awful revelation of the hat—Mary's consternation, her faint and the general feeling that she had unconsciously betrayed her lover.

"What is it?" Mary asked as she sighed and looked at her friend. "Jack have you come?"

"Yes. What can I do for you? What is there to be done?"

She stretched out her hand and appeared to be looking for something.

"What is it?" Jack asked, and glanced around him as if he not only questioned Mary, but the whole room.

"Yes, yes," she exclaimed, snatching at the hat which Morley now held toward her. "Good night," she said, "good-night, kind friends; I won the wager for you, Mr. Barnsley."

"I am to blame, I fear," said Mr. Wilson, 'in that matter; but what has happened, I wonder."

"Something awful, I reckon," said Morley. "She said it was murder, and nothing short of that would have frightened our Mary."

She had leaned upon Jack Meadows and left the room, and Jack was happy in his misery—happy that she would have rested her hand upon his arm; happy that in her trouble, whatever it was, she should have distinguished him before all others, as if he were her natural protector.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Fair Dealing to Customer.

The subject of sanitary milk is one that should command a great deal of attention, for milk and milk products are an important part of the dietary of civilized people. Yet the subject is never thought of from a scientific standpoint by the majority of the people. However, a few of the more thoughtful ones are becoming interested along this line. The Department of Agriculture of the Ohio State University has put into practice the scientific methods of handling milk to produce what is known as sanitary milk. It is thus described by T. S. Wheeler in a recent issue of the Agricultural Student:

"The herd consists of about forty cows, mostly Shorthorns, Holsteins and Jerseys. Much could be said about the feed and methods of feeding, but space will not permit. The cows are placed in the barn in whitewashed stalls, where they are daily brushed and cleaned. The milkers wear white suits and have damp cloths to wipe the cows' udders, which removes any loose dirt that might fall into the pail. The first two or three squirts from each teat are milked on the ground as germs get into the end of the teat and would otherwise be milked into the bucket. As each cow is milked the milk is taken to a room apart from the stable in which is fitted up a Star Cooler. Cold water runs through this cooler and after the milk is weighed and recorded, it is poured into a tank through a strainer and runs over the cooler into another strainer, and into the can. While the cows are being milked the atmosphere in the stable is kept as free from dust and odor as possible. The cows are never fed until after milking, and this is not done by the milkers. After the milk is placed in cans it is hauled to Townshend Hall in a hand cart, where it goes through the process of separating, standardizing and bottling. It is first weighed and then emptied into a vat and a sample taken, which is tested to find the per cent of butter fat. From the vat it goes into the separator, which not only separates but purifies it taking out all the dirt so that there is no sediment left in a bottle of milk after standing for hours. By a simple method of figuring the proportion is found by which to mix the milk to five per cent. The mixed milk is placed into a tank which is arranged to fill four bottles at a time, the bottles being placed in a tray which runs on a track under the tank. In this manner the milk can be bottled very rapidly. It is put in quart and pint bottles which are capped and placed on a corrugated iron table and washed with clean water. They are then dried with a towel and placed in cases and the milk is ready for the customer. The bottles and utensils in the laboratory are washed and placed in a steam chest and live steam turned on which thoroughly sterilizes them. The floor is made of white tile and is scrubbed twice a day. In fact everything is kept as clean as possible. In this way the O. S. U. dairy has gained a reputation which other dairymen envy. Those who wish to see how clean, healthful milk is produced are invited to inspect its methods. No one after seeing the way the milk is cared for would hesitate about using it. Several persons after passing through the bottling laboratory have said they did not blame the people for wanting O. S. U. milk, and that it was well worth the price. When dairymen come to recognize that the secret of good milk is cleanliness, then will the dairy industry be of far greater importance than it is to-day."

Raising Pheasants and Game Birds.

From Farmers' Review: In regard to the difficulties of raising pheasants I wish to say I have found that the greatest trouble is to find such food as they will eat and remain healthy until they are 10 or 12 days old, and the only food I have as yet been able to find is about such as a mother bird would find for her young while at liberty in the woods. Pheasants are strictly a wood bird; yet they are frequently found in open fields in quest of food. They are quite fond of almost all kinds of worms, insects, and so forth. It is not a big job to find ants and their eggs to feed a brood of pheasants, quail or prairie chickens for ten days, or, should you not want to feed them that, liberate the foster mother and her flock in 4 or 5 days (after the young are familiar with her call); then she will take the best of care of her brood and bring them home every night to roost. Bantams are the only hens for quail, as others are too heavy. Next summer get a sitting of Bob White quail or prairie chicken eggs, and try your hand raising them. I am quite sure you will be greatly surprised at your success, especially if you will find ants and their larvae, or eggs, worms, bugs, etc. Gather up dirt, ants' eggs, etc., and throw it into the enclosure. The hen will scratch and find everything it contains in the way of food and call her flock to get it. It's a treat for me to see the young feeding.—F. J. Wilson, Preble County, Ohio.

Poultry Briefs.

Sanitation is one of the most important factors to be considered in relation to poultry culture. The men who are inventing sanitary exhibition coops and putting them on the market are stirring up interest in the subject. We do not care for exhibition purposes that are sanitary in particular. When we get to the point where we have sanitary poultry houses and yards we will have done much to decrease the losses from diseases, both contagious and non-contagious.

Are high scoring show birds good layers? At least one poultry raiser thinks not. In a letter to the Farmers' Review John Culbert, an Illinois breeder of Plymouth Rocks, says: "Last November (1900) I exhibited a White Rock pullet. She won first with a score of 95½. As soon as she came home she started to lay. One month later I took her to the poultry show at Joliet, where she scored only 92½ points. She got the extra cuts on "shape." Laying spoils the shape of pullets, so far as scoring for premiums is concerned. I have pullets that started in to lay at 4½ months, and they are not fit to show. Birds that score high do not make good layers as a rule." Coming from a poultry fancier this is doubly important. We have heard it asserted before that high scoring birds were likely to prove poor egg producers, but there has generally been little beside assertion to back it. We hope to hear from others on the same point.

Poultry House Floors.

From Farmers' Review: I prefer a ground floor every time, as a board floor has many disadvantages that a ground floor has not. First, a board floor is harder to clean when the excrements are dried on same than a ground floor. Also rats and other vermin find a place to harbor under a board floor which they cannot do on a ground floor. In addition, the birds flying from their perches hurt themselves oftener by alighting on board floors. This is especially so with the larger breeds. In building a poultry house the walls should be of stone or brick and let into the ground sufficiently deep to prevent rats and the like from working through under them. The poultry house should be filled in with earth at least six or eight inches above the outside ground, so that no water will soak into it in the spring and when it rains. Such a ground floor is dry and easy to clean and is nature's floor for the fowls. Just imagine a hungry lot of fowls scratching for their breakfast on a board floor, even if it is well littered with straw; it seems they would almost tear off their talons. I have discarded board floors altogether, and do not see a single reason why I should go back to them. My three poultry houses have ground floors, as has also my brooder house, which is 20x80 feet, and I would not take a board floor in any of them as a gift.—Lewis Schmertman, Stephenson County, Illinois.

Buying of Cattle Feeds.

The prices for grain and feeding stuffs which are now ruling are so high that it behooves the buyer more than ever to study the fitness of the sundry materials offered for cattle feeding purposes, says a communication from the Vermont Experiment Station. Mixed and feeds of all sorts are offered, some good and some bad. Their market prices often show no relation whatever to fitness; hence the need of looking beyond the mere matter of cost.

The state feeding stuffs inspection of the past two years has served to point out more clearly to the retail dealer as well as to the consumer the distinction between good and bad feeds. The Vermont Experiment Station is now about to issue a bulletin showing the character of the goods on sale last spring. The standard by-products were found to run about as usual. The guaranties made by the manufacturers as to their quality were commonly upheld; but there were a few cases of serious adulteration, intentional or accidental.

The Mayflower linseed meal contained but little more than one-half of the protein which this class of goods should contain; a few samples of mixed wheat feed were found to be adulterated; and there were several oat feeds (one of which was boldly called "ground oats") which were of extremely low grade. One brand of oat feed analyzed at the station this fall contained even less protein than does oat hulls. It would appear that in this case the great feed adulterant itself had been adulterated.

Nicaragua will admit duty free, flour, wines under 14 degrees, fresh and dried fruits and preserved products from the United States.

LETTER CONCERNING FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

EDITOR TIMES:

There will be a Farmers' Institute held at some town in the county that the executive committee may agree on, Feb. 25 and 26, 1902. We have two of the most practical, up to date men engaged. viz: Joe Trigg and E. C. Bennet, and wishing to be fair and just to all in selecting a place to hold the Institute, have agreed on the following plan to settle the matter of the place.

There will be held in Britt, Jan. 18, 1902, at 1 o'clock p. m., at F. B. Glidden's office, a meeting of the executive committee, who will be glad to meet committees from any place in the county, or offers by mail to get the Institute. If we get the necessary help from towns we may hold three days, two days in one town and one in another. We have plenty of program pertaining to successful farming to keep us busy. We had the best Institute last year we ever had, and are bound to have a better one this year. These Institutes are worth a good deal to all who attend. All who can, should attend.

It is said that a Chicago firm advertised that they would pay 20 cents for all the eggs shipped to them. A farmer shipped 50 dozen to them and received as pay 20 one cent stamps. The firm kept their word and paid 20 cents for all the eggs, and the farmer was loser. The moral is easy to see. Patronize home institutions.

We wish you would make it a point to tell us all the news you know. You can't make us mad by telling us too much. Stop us on the street, come to the office, or send it; any old way just so we get it. But if you send it through the mail don't forget to sign your name to it. We don't want the name for publication, but we do want to know where the items come from. Please do not forget this.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Bracher left Tuesday for their new home in Bancroft, where Charley will have charge of the Queal lumber yards. This estimable couple have made many friends during their stay here and all are sorry to see them go, but wish them happiness and prosperity in their new home. The TIMES will keep them posted each week about Klemme folks.

James Pringle writing to the Emmetsburg Democrat says: "The voters of district No. 9 have the boss way of getting their young bachelors married off. They elect them school directors and about the third term the school ma'am takes a school of one pupil. Other districts will please take notice and all lady teachers are invited to study this lesson."

The county printing has been given this year, as usual, to the four papers in Garner and Britt, which means for the rest of the county papers to go way back and sit down as far as printing for the county is concerned. Of course the boord could not do otherwise than award the printing of the board proceedings to the papers having the largest circulation, however it is not necessary for the proceedings to be published in four papers, which leads one to believe that we have a newspaper combination in the county. But aside from the publishing of the proceedings there is a lot of printing that might go to some of the papers outside of Garner and Britt if the officers so desired, but which nearly all goes to these same Garner and Britt papers. There are several other papers in the county and they should be recognized. The Garner and Britt people do not pay all the taxes by any means, and there are some of the tax payers in other localities who would like to see the right thing done in regard to the newspapers that are not in the "ring"

Children and Iowa Home of New Secretary of the Treasury

Governor Shaw and family have added much to the social life of Des Moines since his inauguration four years ago, and they will be quite at home in the larger social sphere at Washington. The public functions of the Shaw administration have not been equaled in magnificence by those of any other administration of late years. At the beginning of Governor Shaw's first term Mrs. Shaw inaugurated a series of legislative receptions which were highly appreciated by the wives and daughters of the members of the General Assembly. These receptions were held every two weeks in the governor's parlors at the Capitol.

Mrs. Shaw is not a club woman, but she takes delight in meeting as far as possible all the social demands which are made upon the first lady of the state. She inclines toward practical charity and does much in aid of societies of this character. Personally, she is a gracious, lovable character, and the wife of no governor has ever been more popular with the people of Des Moines than she. It has been the practice of Governor Shaw to submit to her political questions personal to himself and to be guided by her advice. She appears to be a purely domestic woman, and yet, according to the public admissions of Governor Shaw, she has much to do with the advancing of his political fortunes.

The Shaw family consists of two daughters—Enid, aged 21; Erma, aged 16—and a son, Earl, aged 18. Enid entered society toward the end of her father's first term as governor. She has one more year in Cornell college, when she will either go abroad or enter Vassar. Erma entered the schools of Denison in September, when arrangements were made for the return of the family to their home on the expiration of the gubernatorial term; and Earl is attending a military academy in Indiana.

Not a True Ruby.

I see it stated that the King's coronation crown is to be adorned with what is termed "the Brack Prince ruby." It is not generally known that this stone, which now forms the center of the Maltese cross on the late Queen Victoria's crown, is not a ruby at all, but simply a red spinel. It is of large size, and if it were a true ruby would far surpass in value the Koh-i-Noor itself, for rubies never run to the same size as diamonds, and being also far rarer are considerably more valuable in price per carat. A four-carat ruby, for instance, would be worth about £2,000, probably even more if it were a flawless stone; a four-carat diamond would not be worth the half of that sum.

The so-called "Black Prince ruby" derived its name from the fact that it was given to Edward the Black Prince, by Don Pedro of Castile in gratitude for the victory of Logrono in April, 1367, which restored the throne of Spain to Don Pedro. Henry V. wore it in his helmet at the battle of Agincourt, and it has ever since formed part of the crown jewels of England. In spite of its having been proved to be nothing but a spinel it still figures in the description of the regalia as a "ruby," and as such was shown at the famous exhibition of 1862, when the royal jewels were one of the most interesting exhibits.—London Tatler.

Chinese Conservatism.

In the type of trading vessel built to-day in China there is little or no departure from the practice of thousands of years; the junk still remains in use for general trade and is likely to for some ages to come. It has, however, some disadvantages in sailing qualities which detract from its value; it sails very fast with the wind on either quarters, but cannot run before the wind or sail close to it. It has bulkheads and many of them come into harbors after gales with the bows completely destroyed by heavy seas, but with their cargoes intact. They are usually handled by one man and his family, the wife steering with the aid of a small boy to help run the tiller over.

Question for Scholars.

What is the origin of "odium theologicum"? The letter, of course, not the spirit. Dr. Murray is trying to run it to earth in the interests of his big dictionary, but fails to trace it further back than 1758, when it appears in a note to an edition of Hume's "Essays and Treatises." Here it is said that "odium theologicum" is "noted even to a proverb, and means that degree of rancor which is most furious and implacable." If any one can find the first begetter of the phrase he is requested to give information to Dr. Murray, at the Scriptorium, Oxford, England.

Building Rules in Stockholm.

Only two-thirds of the area of the lot can be covered in Stockholm, except on street corners, here three-fourths is allowed. The remainder of the lot must be reserved for courts, for light and ventilation. All chimney flues must be twelve or fifteen inches and must be swept once a month from October to April by official chimney sweepers.

Germany's First Ironclad.

Germany's oldest sea-going ironclad, the Kron, has been struck from the list of the strength of the fleet. She was launched in England in 1867, and was then considered the embodiment of all that was new and effective in armored war ships.

QUEER FISH FOUND IN QUEENSLAND

The baramunda, a strange fish with two sets of respiratory organs, is interesting scientists of Paris, France, where a specimen has been received for the Museum of Natural History.

The baramunda has both the gills of a fish and the lungs of a batrachian, and it may use either in breathing as it is disposed. It has been supposed that all such creatures were extinct, but the baramunda has been found alive in the Mary, Dawson and Burnett rivers of Queensland, where its flesh is highly prized as food.

The Queensland natives call the baramunda a salmon. This is natural, for its flesh looks and tastes like the flesh of a salmon. The fish is not known to exist in any other rivers than those of Queensland. It reaches there a length of six feet in the larger specimens, though the specimen sent to Paris is less than three feet in length.

A French naturalist who has studied the peculiar fish says the natives of Queensland tell many interesting stories of it. Among other things, the natives aver that the baramunda frequently throws its body out of the water for the purpose of securing a fresh supply of oxygen, and that at night it makes a peculiar snarling noise.

The baramunda lives mainly on fresh water shell fish, and it apparently adapts itself readily to confinement. The Paris museum authorities are very proud of their specimen, not because the fish has so long been considered extinct, but also because it is regarded by ichthyologists as being one of the very first fishes created.

STORIETTES.

It is said that at certain seasons in Scotland, when the fishing is not very brisk, the fishermen act as caddies, and are easily recognized by their costume, a woolen jersey and trousers braced up to the armpits. One of these was asked his name by the gentleman for whom he was carrying, and the reply was: "Weel, s.r, hereabouts they maistley ca' me 'Breeks' but ma 'maiden' name is 'Broon.'"

After preaching a sermon on the fate of the wicked, an English clergyman met an old woman well known for her gossiping propensities, and he said: "I hope my sermon has borne fruit. You heard what I said about the place wnere there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth?" "Well, as to that," answered the dame, "if I 'as anythink to say, it be this: Let them gnash their teeth as has 'em—I ain't!"

An English treasury official was once sent over to Dublin to inquire into the expenditure of fuel in the courts. He was received politely by the late Lord Morris, the famous Irish law lord and wit, who said he would put him in communication with tne proper person, and rang the bell. When the elderly female, who acted as court-keeper appeared, he remarked as he left the room: "Mary, this is the young man that's come about the coals."

Lord Coleridge was driving toward his court one morning in his brougham, when an accident happened to it in Grosvenor Square. Fearing he would be belated, he called a cab from the street rank and bade the Jehu drive him as rapidly as possible to the courts of justice. "And where be they?" "What! A London cabby and don't know where the law courts are at old Temple Bar?" "Oh! the law courts, is it? But you said courts of justice."

Sir Adam Ferguson describes a shooting ramble he had one day on the high grounds near Galashiels with Sir Walter Scott. It was an extremely windy day, and coming to a lonely farmhouse in an exposed situation they went up to it, but could get no admission. At length a female voice was heard within, and Ferguson called out: "What's become of the men?" "Oh, they're awa' over to Windydoors'" (a real place so named). "I think they might have been content wi their ain doors," said Scott, in his droll, dry way, as he turned his pony's head.

A new volume of reminiscences by Dean Hole quotes the following extraordinary prayer as offered by a loyal but certainly ridiculous English clergyman on behalf of Queen Adelaide, the wife of William the Fourth: "Oh Lord, save Thy servant, our sovereign lady, the queen; grant that as she grows an old woman she may become a new man; strengthen her with Thy blessing that she may live a pure virgin, bringing forth sons and daughters to the glory of God, and give her grace that she may go forth before her people like a he goat on the mountains."

How Clothes Are Blistered.

Many of the starches now being used in washable fabrics contain ingredients that break and blister the goods so that after a few washings they are of little service. Defiance starch (made in Nebraska) is manufactured with a special view to obviating the difficulty. It contains a solution that can in no way injure the linen—but instead gives it a smooth, glossy finish that makes goods look new after each ironing. Sold by leading grocers. Made by Magnetic Starch Co., Omaha, Neb.

Money may not buy happiness, but it will alleviate misery.

The Santa Fe at Charleston.

The series of special photographs contibuted by the Santa Fe railway to the exhibit of the Postal Department at the Pan-American Exposition is one of the few which are to be transferred with the exhibit to the Interstate and West Indian Exposition at Charleston, S. C.

The series is illustrative of the transcontinental mail service on the Santa Fe between Chicago and San Francisco, and aside from the very interesting railroad features shows many novel portions of Uncle Sam's postal service between remote mountain districts, Indian trading posts, etc. The pony express and the Indian runner, lithe and long limbed, are still necessary to the government in some sections of the West.

The postal department has asked and received permission from the Santa Fe, to place the photographs permanently in the Postal Museum at Washington after the close of the Charleston exposition.

WIDE SCOPE OF NEW BANK.

The Entire Orient and South America are Included.

New York, Jan. 3.—The plans of the international Banking corporation, which has been named by the president as repositor for the receiving of the Chinese indemnity due the United States, have been explained by General Thomas H. Hubbard, the president of the board of directors of the new corporation. He says that after the Philippine agency is established other branches will be instituted in the cities of the insular possessions. The feature is that the entire Orient and south central America shall be comprehended by the operations of the bank.

"All of this is but the natural outgrowth of the commercial and territoral expansion of the United States," continued General Hubbard. Heretofore there has been no particular need in the United States of a banking institution doing an international business, but since the Spansih war and the tremendous trade of recent years with South America and the promise of a constantly increasing trade with Cuba and the Orient, the necessity for just such an institution as this has been developed.

"Heretofore all the exchange with foreign countries has been handled by the banks of Berlin and London There are a number of international banks in these cities. It will be the purpose of the International Banking corporation to secure as much as possible of the exchange business heretofore handled by these foreign banks with which this country is concerned."

So far comparatively little has been done by the new bank, its charter by special enactment of the Connecticut legislature having only been obtained last June. General Hubbard said that a branch would be established in New York city, although the bank here would not be for the purposes of deposit, exchange alone being handled. The New York bank it to be sort of a clearing house for the various branches controlled by the main institution. The reason why the charter was obtained in Connecticut, according to General Hubbard, is found in the fact that the laws of that state are usually liberal to banking institutions.

FORTY PERSONS ARE DROWNED.

Collision Between Two Pacific Coast Steamers.

Eureka, Cal., Jan. 3.—The steamer Walla Walla, bound from San Francisco for Victoria, B. C., was wrecked Thursday morning at 4:10 a. m. by a French four-masted bark. The Walla Walla had 165 passengers aboard and forty-five are reported drowned.

The information concerning the disaster was brought to Trinidad, about thirty miles north of this place, by a boat from the unfortunate steamer, which, when it left the place of the disaster, contained thirteen persons, but when it arrived at Trinidad contained but seven persons. Later the steamer Dispatch arrived with sixty of the passengers and crew on board, including Capt. Hall. Particulars of the disaster are hard to obtain at this time. Thecras h occurred early in the morning while most of the passengers were asleep. Boats and life rafts were launched immediately and under the instruction of Capt. Hall and his crew most of the passengers were placed safely on the raft and in the boats, but it is believed that the loss will be considerable. Tugs have been sent from here to the scene of the wreck. The Walla Walla carried thirty-six first class passengers, eight second class and a crew of sixty men.

The collision occurredtwenty miles south of Mendocino bouy. The French bark struck the Walla Walla in the bow. At the time of the collision the second officer was on the bridge. No definite information can be learned as to the cause of the accident, as all on board were sleeping.

WILL INVESTIGATE.

Interstate Commerce Commission Will Look Into Hill Combine.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—At its meeting here next Wednesday the Inter-state commerce commission will move against the Northern Securities company and investigate the combine of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, and Burlington railways.

The commission will probe the entire matter of "community of interests" between great railway systems, but specific investigation will be aimed at the northwestern railways.

Hundreds of witnesses, among them many of the leading railway promoters and owners in the country have been summoned to appear in Chicago next Wednesday to testify before the commission. All the western railway magnates have been summoned to appear, and, after the investigation in Chicago, which may last weeks, has been concluded, the commission will resume its hearing in New York and call before it the great promoters and financiers of Wall street.

It is understood that there is to be a general and determined fight all along the line. The commission has announced its intention of examining every phase of railway combination, including the purchase of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific, the Union Pacific's control over the Burlington, and every specific instance of what they regard as violations of the interstate commerce law.

Admiral Sampson Sinking.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Admiral Sampson's malady progresses slowly but very steadily toward the end. Medical science cannot check it. Symptoms of arterial degeneration have appeared, such as are incident to his malady, injecting great uncertainty into the case. Moreover, the patient is becoming less tractable and responsive to treatment.

Some men can bear the stern realities of life better than they can the fancy frills.

KILL THE DANDRUFF GERM.

Or Your Hair Will Fall Out Till You Become Bald.

Modern science has discovered that dandruff is caused by a germ that digs up the scalp in scales, as it burrows down to the roots of the hair, where it destroys the hair's vitality, causing falling hair, and, ultimately, baldness. After Prof. Unna, of Hamburg, Germany, discovered the dandruff germ, all efforts to find a remedy failed until the great laboratory discovery was made which resulted in Newbro's Herpicide. It alone of all other hair preparations kills the dandruff germ. Without dandruff, hair grows luxuriantly. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect."

One of the children of Woodycrest, the home for the poor children maintained by Miss Helen Gould, asked in his letter to Santa Claus that a nice present be brought to Miss Gould.

In 1273 Friar Bacon predicted that flying would "shortly" become a general practice, and Bishop Wilkins in 1652 said: "It will yet be as usual to hear a man call for his wings when he is going on a journey as it is now to hear him call for his boots."

An attack of hysteria simulating unconsciousness in a woman may be stopped, says Modern Medicine, by the surgeon taking a pair of scissors and regretfully announcing that he will have to cut all the patient's hair off in order to make application to her head. It is doubtful whether this bluff has ever been known to fail.

A French scientist claims to have discovered that laziness in mankind is caused by bacteria. Now he is experimenting with drugs which he hopes will kill the microbes of laziness and permit the man to become industrious and energetic, and eager to earn a good living. We fear there are many people who are so fond of indolence that they will never willingly let the innocent little microbes be harmed.

A Grateful Man.

Cox, Wis., Jan. 6.—With Kidney disease so bad that he could hardly walk across the room for pain, Frank M. Russell of this place was a man greatly to be pitied.

He tired out with the slightest exertion and in spite of all the doctors could do for him he was growing gradually worse. He had tried many medicines and treatments without benefit, but recently he read in a newspaper about Dodd's Kidney Pills, and these helped him from the very first dose.

He took several boxes before he was completely cured, but now he is well and strong as ever he was, and feels very grateful to Dodd's Kidney Pills for his restoration to good health.

If heaven is as bright as the good people say it is, it is bright enough there to freckle.

Be what you wish others to become. Let yourself and your words, preach.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 6th.—A very timely and practical suggestion comes from a physician of this city. He says, "Take Garfield Tea, the Herb Medicine. It is especially needed at this season when the system is apt to be out of order from eating rich food. This wonderful remedy cleanses the system and regulates the liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels. It is simple, pure and effective, and is good for young and old."

The Distinctive Value

of Syrup of Figs is due to its pleasant form and perfect freedom from every objectionable quality or substance and to the fact that it acts gently and truly as a laxative, without in any way disturbing the natural functions. The requisite knowledge of what a laxative should be and of the best means for its production enable the California Fig Syrup Co. to supply the general demand for a laxative, simple and wholesome in its nature and truly beneficial in its effects; a laxative which acts pleasantly and leaves the internal organs in a naturally healthy condition and which does not weaken them.

To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the medicinal agents used should be of the best quality and of known value and Syrup of Figs possesses this great advantage over all other remedies, that it does not weaken the organs on which it acts and therefore it promotes a healthful condition of the bowels and assists one in forming regular habits. Among its many excellent qualities may be mentioned its perfect safety, in all cases requiring a laxative, even for the babe, or its mother, the maiden, or the wife, the invalid, or the robust man.

Syrup of Figs is well known to be a combination of the laxative principles of plants, which act most beneficially, with pleasant aromatic liquids and the juice of figs, agreeable and refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system, when its gentle cleansing is desired. The quality of Syrup of Figs is due not only to the excellence of the combination, but also to the original method of manufacture which ensures perfect purity and uniformity of product and it is therefore all important, in buying, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

LESLIE'S MONTHLY, now in its fifty-second volume, is another of the great modern monthlies. Its program for the coming year embraces features second in interest to no other periodical, while its illustrations will continue to be the highest expressions of magazine art. Monthly, $1.00 per annum.

THE NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE paints with loving touch the historic landmarks of New England; it recalls the customs and traditions of the "old red schoolhouse days" and tells of the achievements of New Englanders in all parts of the world. It has distinguished contributors and is artistically printed and illustrated. Monthly, $3.00 per annum.

THE NORTHWESTERN AGRICULTURIST is the leading farm, stock and home paper in the West. It interests every member of the family, having departments devoted to the interests of women as well as of men, on the farms in the Northwest. It is filled with instructive and interesting reading matter from beginning to end. Its various departments are under the charge of practical men, who have made a success themselves on their particular line on which they are writing. Amongst the department editors who contribute regularly to The Agriculturist, are Prof. Thomas Shaw, Professor of Animal Husbandry at the Minnesota State Agricultural College. Professor Shaw edits the sheep, beef cattle and horse departments; A. X. Hyatt, a dairyman known all over America as a practical and experienced dairy writer; Forest Henry, editor of the swine department, a man who has paid off mortgages by raising swine in Minnesota, and who is himself making money in swine raising now, not as a breeder but as a feeder of swine for market; A. M. Bush, in charge of the horticultural department, State Lecturer on Horticulture at the Minnesota Farmers' Institutes. These are only a few of the more important departments of the paper. Sample Copies will be sent free to all who are interested. The Northwestern Agriculturist is published semi-monthly, and already reaches over 56,000 farm homes twice a month. Subscription price fifty cents a year.

P. V. COLLINS, Prest. and Gen. Mgr.,

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper; and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

News of our Neighbors

Ell Center

Special Correspondent.

A goodly number of our young folks enjoyed the dance at Schoper's Monday night.

Ira Derr's family were callers here Sunday, as also were Mrs. Guy Braund and children.

Jos. Lawhorn returned from his Illinois visit last week and looks as though the trip did him good.

Charley Gilbert and his best girl witnessed the play "Romeo and Juliet" in the Garner opera house last week.

Fred Greiman bought the old school house in the Greiman district for $46 and will move it onto his farm. One by one the old land marks are being removed.

Several of our young folks drove over to the beautiful home of Wm. Greiman in Germantown Tuesday evening. There was no lack of amusement and all pronounced Mr. and Mrs. Greiman as ideal bands at entertaining.

All married folks or those thinking of being should attend the Literary this week and hear the following question discussed: Resolved, that there is more pleasure in married life than in single life. Affirmative, Ally Jones, Charley Gilbert and H. H. Burman. Negative, T. Gauley and Joe Lawhorn. Everyone is kindly requested to come out and hear this important subject discussed.

A very pleasant surprise party was held at Fred Seikmeyer's last Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Seikmeyer gave the young folks such a hearty welcome that they will never forget it. Before returning home, Allyn Jones, in a neat and appropriate speech, presented this worthy couple with a beautiful rocking chair as a token of the high esteem in which they are held by the people, and we hope they may live long and enjoy many such evenings.

A Profitable Inuestment.

"I was troubled for about seven years with my stomach and in bed half my time," says E. Demick, Somerville, Ind. "I spent about $1,000 and never could get anything to help me until I tried Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. I have taken a few bottles and am entirely well." You don't live by what you eat, but by what you digest and assimilate. If your stomach doesn't digest your food you are really starving. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does the stomach's work by digesting your food. You don't have to diet. Eat all you want. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles. J.L. Harr.

Children Especially Liable.

Burns, bruises and cuts are extremely painful and if neglected often result in blood poisoning. Children are especially liable to such mishaps because not so careful. As a remedy DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled. Draws out the fire, stops the pain, soon heals the wound. Beware of counterfeits. Sure cure for piles. "DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured my baby of eczema after two physicians gave her up," writes James Mock, N. Webster, Ind. "The sores were so bad she soiled two to five dresses a day." J. L. Harr.

Garner

From Special Correspondent.

Harry Byers is in Des Moines this week.

There is a caso of diphtheria in Garner.

Father Nagle went to Crystal Lake Tuesday on business.

C. W. Zieger has a sister visiting him from Buffalo Center.

Ed. Baumgartner, of Lake Mills, is here visiting relatives.

R. A. Finette has moved into his new store in the bank building.

Otto Frei and two sisters, of Klemme, were in this city last Saturday.

"The Battleship Maine" will be played at the opera house, January 19.

A. S. Duesenberg left Saturday for Rockford, Ia., to stay about a month.

Mrs. Brooks and children, of near Marshalltown, are visiting Fred Stork and family.

Quite a crowd of young folks enjoyed a skating party on the Iowa river (?) Monday evening.

"Si Perkins" played to a very large audience here Friday evening. Old "Si" can get a crowd any place he goes.

We understand that Fred Bush is to be a candidate for Clerk of Courts. Fred would make a good officer and he is popular enough to get it, too.

Don't Live Together.

Constipation and health never go together. DeWitt's Little Early Risers promote easy action of the bowels without distress. "I have been troubled with costiveness nine years," says J. O. Greene, Depauw, Ind. "I have tried many remedies but Little Early Risers give best results." J. L. Harr.

Kanawha

From the Record:

A young people's party was held at the Thos. Fox home Monday evening.

Mrs. John Johnson living four miles south and four miles west, died Saturday.

Clint Patrick was taken suddenly sick a few days ago, but is now somewhat improved.

Ole Severson, of Wright county, was here Tuesday and closed the business connected with the purchase of the Madden farm. He gets possession in the spring.

ORIGINAL NOTICE.

Jennie W. White, Plaintiff, vs. W. H. White, Defendant.

In the District Court of the State of Iowa, in and for Hancock County, February Term, A. D. 1902

To W. H. WHITE:

You are hereby notified that on or before the First day of February, A. D. 1902, the petition of Plaintiff in the above entitled cause will be filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the State of Iowa, in and for Hancock County, claiming of you a divorce from the bonds of matrimony and alleging as grounds therefor your desertion of the Plaintiff in the month of September, A. D. 1898, without any reasonable or just cause, and for such other relief as may seem just and equitable.

For further particulars see said petition when filed.

And that unless you appear thereto and defend before noon of the second day of the next term, being the February term of said Court, which will commence at the Court House in Concord, Iowa, on the 17th day of February, 1902, default will be entered against you and judgment and decree rendered thereon as provided by law.

Child Worth Millions.

"My child is worth millions to me," says Mrs. Mary Bird of Harrisburg, Pa., "yet I would have lost her by croup had I not purchased a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure." One Minute Cough Cure is a sure cure for coughs, croup and throat and lung troubles. An absolutely safe cough cure which acts immediately. The youngest child can take it with entire safety. The little ones like the taste and remember how often it helped them. Every family should have a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure handy. At this season especially it may be needed suddenly. J. L. Louisville Courier-Journal: The legislation that is needed to suppress anarchy must be directed at anarchists irrespective of their origin. It is all bosh to say that the difficulty is to know who is anarchist. No law can reach the man who believes in anarchy, yet it is cowardly enough to keep his belief to himself, just as no law can reach the man who would steal or murder, if he had the courage. But the man who openly advocates the principles of anarchy is as easily distinguishable as is the pirate who hoists the black flag, and he should be treated as summarily as the pirate.

Chief doorkeeper—J. H. Serene of Lansing.

Postmistress—Edith Leffingwell of Glidden.

SMITH AND SHEA HELD.

Accused of the Murder of Charles Johnson at Des Moines.

Des Moines, Jan. 11.—William Smith and Morris Shea were bound over to the grand jury by Justice Duncan to answer for the murder of Charles Johnson of East Des Moines, who was killed in a saloon brawl on Christmas eve. John Coyle and Jim Lally were acquitted by the magistrate of any participation in the affair which ended in murder and they were dismissed, their bonds being released and they exonerated from any complicity in the case. The evidence in the case against Smith and Shea, as taken down in shorthand by F. C. Walrath at the preliminary examination before Justice Duncan, will be transcribed and presented to the grand jury, which will investigate and then either indict or ignore the charges against the pair.

AN IOWA MAJOR GENERAL DIES.

General Francis J. Herron was Distinguished in the Civil War.

Dubuque, Jan. 11.—One of the four major generals from Iowa during the rebellion was General Francis J. Herron, who died recently in New York, who was also captain of the original Governor's Gray that went out from Dubuque. General Herron was one of the most honored officers of the war. He commanded at Wilson's Creek, was elected colonel of the Ninth Iowa and commanded at Pea Ridge, he also commanaded at Prairie Grove, after marching his command 114 miles in three days. He served with Grant at Vicksburg and commanded the Thirteenth Army Corps. He received the surrender of the Trans-Mississippi army of 60,000 men. After the war he became a resident of New York.

THOMAS IS IN CUSTODY

CHARGED WITH THE MURDER OF MABEL SCHOFIELD.

Thomas Purchased Poison on the Day Before She Died—Other Incriminating Evidence.

Des Moines, Jan. 13.—Charles Thomas of 1016 Woodland avenue, has been arrested on the charge of murder, on a warrant sworn out by C. A. Crawford in the court of Justice Tris. He is accused of having murdered Mable Schofield on or about October 21, 1899, by the use of poisonous drugs, towit: chloroform, chloral and knockout drops. Judge W. A. Spurrier has been retained to prosecute and it was he who drew the information and upon whose advice the warrant was issued. Thomas was arraigned and asked for time to prepare for preliminary hearing. The case was set down for preliminary hearing February 17. Justice Tris told the defendant he would be admitted to bail in the sum of $6,000, but in default Thomas was locked up in the county jail to await the hearing.

The evidence upon which the warrant was issued, as recited by Judge Spurrier, strongly supports the theory of murder which was advanced at the time of the finding of the body of Mabel Schofield in the Des Moines river east of the public bath house. In short, Judge Spurrier's is the only tangible recital of facts and circumstances that has been given since October 21, 1899, in support of the theory of murder.

Thomas, who is accused of the murder, is the son of Jasper N. and Margaret E. Thomas of 1016 Woodland avenue, with whom Mabel Schofield made her home while in Des Moines. It was from this house that she started with her mother to go to the Chicago Great Western depot the day she disappeared, and it was at the depot that she was last seen alive. On that day Mr. Thomas was absent from the house working at his trade and Mrs. Thomas, who is a nurse, was not at home.

SHAW IS GUEST OF HONOR

IOWA REPUBLICANS PAY HIM UNSTINTED TRIBUTE.

Farewell Banquet Tendered the Governor by the Grant Club at Des Moines.

Des Moines, Jan. 11.—The republicans of Iowa paid unstinted tribute to Governor L. M. Shaw, the newly appointed secretary of the treasury, last night. Probably never in the history of the state has there been gathered at any similar function an assemblage of the distinguished men of the republican party of the state that could compare with that which came together at the Savery last night to attend the banquet given in honor of the governor by the Grant club. Factionalism was laid aside, and Governor Shaw's fellow-citizens, without reference to past differences, attested their high regard for him and their high appreciation of the exalted position in which Iowa has been placed by the gift of two portfolios in President Roosevelt's cabinet.

Four hundred guests sat down to the tables in the Savery dining rooms. They were gathered from every corner of Iowa, and included men that rank with the first in the fields of law and politics and business. Governor-elect Cummins was toast-master, and addresses were made by Editor Charles A. Clark, Judge Smith McPherson, Lafayette Young, Governor Shaw, Edward Rosewater, George E. MacLean, George D. Perkins and others.

Saloon Men Win a Victory.

Des Moines, Jan. 10.—Judge Bishop rendered an opinon in the appeal from the board of supervisors in the matter of mulct assessments, remitting to sixty-two saloons an amount representing $8,700. When the saloons closed as a result of the sureme court decision February 14, 1899, the mulct taxes for that quarter were remitted, but when the saloons opened a few days prior to the beginning of a new quarter the county treasurer assessed the full three months' tax. The saloons objected to this and the matter was carried to the board of supervisors. The action of the treasurer was sustained and it went to the district court on appeal.

Osborn Deignan is Recovered.

Vallejo, Cal., Jan. 11.—Osborn Deignan, who was one of the participants in the sinking of the Merrimac at Santiago, has been discharged from the Ukiah Hospital for the Insane and ordered to duty on the steamship Independence at Mare Island navy yard.

Deignan's case is of interest to Iowa people because he was raised at Stuart. About two months ago he was sent to the asylum at Vallejo. It was announced, however, that he was not insane, but was suffering from a nervous breakdown.

HEPBURN BILL IS PASSED

ONLY TWO VOTES AGAINST MEASURE IN THE HOUSE.

Advocates of an Alternative Route Muster 102 Votes as the Maximum of Their Strength.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Senate.—The open session of the senate was devoted to routine business. After an executive session the senate, at 1:50, adjourned until Monday. The senate in executive session confirmed the nomination of Leslie M. Shaw, to be secretary of the treasury, and of Hon. C. Payne, to be postmaster general.

House.—The Hepburn Nicaragua canal bill passed the house by practically an unanimous vote. Only two members out of 310 voted against it. Messrs. Fletcher (rep.) of Minnesota and Lassiter (dem.) of Virginia were the two voting in the negative. The opposition to committing the government to the Nicaragua route attempted to secure amendments to lodge with the president the discretionary power to purchase and complete the Panama canal, if it could be purchased for $40,000,000. The test came on the first vote, when the advocates of an alternative route polled 102 votes against 170. At each succeeding vote their strength dwindled until Mr. Cannon of Illinois, under whose leadership the fight was made, was unable to get the ayes and noes on a motion to recommit. All other amendments failed and the bill passed exactly as it came from the committee. None of the votes except that on the final passage of the bill was a record vote. The debate which preceded the taking of the final vote was made memorable by a clash between Hepburn, author of the bill, and Cannon, chairman of the appropriation committee. On several previous occasions they have measured swords over canal legislation. Two years ago a similar bill was passed by a vote of 224 to 36.

Washington, Jan. 10.—House—The house spent the day considering the bill to create a permanent census bureau. While the general sentiment was in favor of a permanent bureau, there was a strong opposition to the bill as drawn, on the ground that it was not well matured. There also was an overwhelming demand for a provision to place the present employes of the census bureau under the protection of the civil service law, and the bill finally was recommitted with instructions to report back a bill containing a plan for a detailed organization of a permanent census bureau and including also a provision to place the present employes of the census bureau under the protection of the civil service. The fight to recommit was made under the leadership of Burkett of Nebraska, the new member of the appropriation committee. A bill was passed unanimously to give Mrs. McKinley the free mailing privilege during the remainder of her life. The house then adjourned until Monday.

COMPLIMENTS EXCHANGED.

Messages Between Roosevelt And Emperor William.

Berlin, Jan. 13.—In connection with the proposed trip of the Hohenzollern to New York, Emperor William telegraphed as follows, in English, to President Roosevelt:

"I am most gratified by your permission for Miss Roosevelt's performing the christening ceremony of my yacht It gives me great pleasure to announce to you that I have ordered my yacht Hohenzollern to cross over and be present at the ceromony. My brother, Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia, will appear as my representative and will be able to express to you once more my sincere feelings and friendship for the United States and their illustrious head.

(Signed) "William I. R."

President Roosevelt replied as follows, in German:

"Yours majesty's intention to send over your yacht, Hohenzollern to attend the christening by my daughter of your new yacht is a source of great pleasure and satisfaction to me. I can assure you a hearty welcome for your brother, Admiral Prince Henry, to whom I shall personally express my sincere feeling of esteem for your majesty, as well as my best wishes for the welfare of the German people.

(Signed) "Theodore Roosevelt."

BOER PEACE PROPOSALS.

Rumored That Boer Delegates Have Submitted Proposals.

Amsterdam, Jan. 11.—The Boer delegates in Holland evidently anticipate that some kind of peace overtures will shortly be made though they are reticent as to their reasons for this belief. They maintain, however, that the demand for an unconditional surrender must be abandoned.

It is privately admitted that the delegates will not reject what they call "any fair offer of terms.' If the negotiations are started by a neutral power the delegates will earnestly seek to obtain a modus vivendi which will reconcile Mr. Kruger's desire for complete independence with the terms offered by Great Britain.

REVOLUTION IN PARAGUAY.

Bloody Fight in the Chamber of Deputies at Ascunsion.

Buenos Ayres, Jan. 11.—The rumors circulated here of a revolution in the republic of Paraguay turned out to be well founded. The revolt which broke out at Ascunsion, the capital, was caused by the question of the presidential succession, the term of President Aceval expiring in November of this year.

The revolutionary junta was composed of General Caballero, General Escobar, Col. J. A. Escurra, the minister of war; Senor Marro, a cabinet minister, and Senator Freitas.

President Aceval resigned the presidency and congress accepted his resignation.

A collision occurred in the chamber of deputies during which Senator Facando Insfran, president of the Hygenic council, was killed, and General Caballero, Senators Miguel and Corbalan and Deputy Fernando Carreras were severely wounded.

The congress of Paraguay has placed the reins of government in the hands of the vice president, Senor Hector Carvallo.

Great excitement prevails at Ascunsion.

ANOTHER AMERICAN GRAB

CONTROL OF EUROPEAN WATER WAYS ARE SECURED.

Cargos May Now Be Billed Through From American Inland Ports to Inland Cities.

London, Jan. 13.—One of the most important of American commercial enterprises in Europe has just culminated here. It consists in the securing of all water routes for American cargoes of grain and other commodities from inland ports of the United States to inland ports of Europe, and embraces the purchase by American capital of several British and other canals.

Frank W. Hawley, vice president of the Erie Canal Traction company, has been on this side several months quietly securing concessions for the operation of European canals by electricity. The Erie concern today secured control of about 5,000 miles of canals in England and on the continent. As a result cargoes will shortly be shipped on the same lading from Duluth, Minn., to Brussels, Bruges, Ghent and Cologne, and later to many points in the United Kingdom, France Germany and Italy.

At the forthcoming session of parliament the British legislators will be asked to grant permission for the erection of central power stations for the propulsion of traffic in at least two British canals. These will be operated with American capital, although their control will nominally remain in British hands.

CHAMBERLAIN IS DEFIANT.

What He Has Said, He Insists Stands And Will Not Be Qualified.

London, Jan. 13.—Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, colonial secretary, in speaking at Birmingham, took occasion without entering into a controversal rejoinder, to notice the criticisms showered upon him in the reichstag during the past week, especially the Count von Buelow's castigation. In referring to the animosity of foreign nations, he said that he was aware that in some quarters it was attributed to the "indiscreet oratory of the colonial secretary."

"What I have said,' continued the secretary, "I have said. I withdraw nothing. I qualify nothing and defend nothing. As I read history, no British minister has ever served his country faithfully and been popular abroad. I, therefore, make allowance for foreign criticism. I will not follow the example that has been set me. I do not want to give lessons to a foreign minister, and I will not accept any at his hands. I am responsible only to my sovereign and my countrymen.

"I do not deprecate the importance of the good will of foreign nations, but there is something more important. It is the affection and the confidence of our kinsfolk across the sea. Even our great losses in the war that has been forced upon us have brought in their train one blessing of infinite and lasting importance. That war has enabled the British empire to find itself and has shown to all whom it may concern that if ever again we have, as in the past to fight for our very existence against the world in arms, we will be supported by the sons of Britain in every quarter of the globe." every quarter of the Globe.'

MAJOR WALLER'S BRAVERY.

Takes Small Command Across Island of Samar.

Washington, Jan. 11.—The navy department today received the following cablegram from Rear Admiral Rodgers at Cavite: "Waller reports having completed ten days' march across Samar from Lanaug to Bahey. Column endured great hardships. Killed thirteen insurgents, captured captain, lieutenant and four men."

Major Littleton W. T. Waller of the marine corps rendered gallant service with the marines in China during the march of the allied forces from the sea to Peking. The island of Samar is one of the several islands which is still making a strenuous though desultory opposition to American sovereignty. It was at Balanagiga, on Samar island, that the massacre of Company C, Ninth infantry, occurred. In view of the belligerent spirit manifested by the natives on this and other occasions and the physical character of the country traversed, the march of Major Waller and his command was a feat of more than ordinary daring.

MARY THE MAID OF THE INN....

A Story of English Life.

By JOSEPH HATTON.

"Better ask the girl what she has really seen," suggested Mr. Taylor.

"Or what she thinks we ought to do. I propose we go the abbey and find out what has frightened her."

"'It wor murder,' she said," remarked one of the slowest and most deliberate of the natives, "and that was one of the murderer's hat."

"Aye!" said the others.

"And Joseph Morley, he says straight out, says he, that is Gentleman Parker's hat, and we know who he be. If he's up and killed the black-looking chap as he come wi' first to the Star and Garter, why, I for one shan't profess to be sorry."

"Nor me if it weren't a felony," said Morley. "But mayhap that would clear the road for Jack; and I'd prefer him to follow me at the Star and Garter, with Mary for his missus, than see her married to the starchiest nobleman that ever wore a coronet and a robe of ermine."

"Morley is a trifle flowery," said Taylor to Wilson; and as he delivered himself of this declaration, he went into the inner room and left the company with their surmises and their varied suggestions of what it should be their duty to do under the circumstances.

While they were discussing the subject over the last of the second bowl of punch the storm rose in fury. For a moment it seemed as if the wind had driven in the door; but it was not the wind only that came banging into the hall and then into the room, but 'Squire Bellingham's groom.

Before any one could question him, he said in a slow, lumbering fashion: "I was takin' a sup at Hark-to-Rover on the way hum, for I expected 'Squire in hauf an hour, and I was a-ridin' owd mare in from farm, when we hearn such a hammerin' on t'road as you'd a' thowt devil hissen was ridin' a race, and we goes to door, and there in t'moonleet I seed 'Squire's own nag come tearin' o weet its main a'most on end, its mouth oppen, its eyes like coals o' fire! And I out into road, and I says, 'So ho! So ho, William!' as its naame he knows hissen by; and he pulls up straight, and stands a-tremblin' as if he'd seen a ghost! And I says as if he could answer me, says I: 'Where's the 'Squire?' and then owd man at Hark-to-Rover, he brings out a lantern, and there was blood on t' saddle, and I thowt mayhap t' constable might be here and may be he'd like to go wi' me down t'Harrogate Road to see what's up—for summat's up, that's sartin, and summat awful if I knows owt of William."

"The constable is not here," said Taylor, "but we will go with you, some of us, and see what can be done."

"Thank you kindly," said the groom tapping on the counter.

Tom answered the summons with the remark: "I reckon missus is a bit out o' sorts, and guvner, too. What might it be, James?"

"A glass o' rum, hot,' said James. "I reckon mayhap a bit o' Dutch courage mebbe useful, if we're to seek 'Squire down by t' abbey; for I mek out o' William that he hadna' come far at that paace, seein' as weren't in no sweat; and I allus towd 'Squire as I hated that bend i' the road, by plantation, where they said murder was done doant knaw how many years agone; and they do say as that's where they gibbeted t' malefactor, though it mun been long afore my time. Here's looking towards you, gentlemen."

Both Tom and the company watched the gnarled, sturdy, slow old groom as he told his story, drank his rum and then invited "them as 'ud loike the job" to come and see what was up.

Wilson and the rest followed the 'Squire's man; all except Tom and Mr. Taylor.

Tom stood silently behind the bar.

Jack Meadows was on his feet, watching the girl and listening to old Morley with acute interest.

Taylor paused as he closed the door. "I am an old friend," he said, "can I be of any service to you, neighbor Morley, or to Miss Lockwood?"

"I was just telling her," said Morley in his piping tones; "I was saying it will be of no avail to try and hide anything from justice. If murder has been done, and she holds the clue, it is her bounden duty, even if I was the culprit, or whoever the culprit might be, to give him up."

"You don't know what you say," Mary answered. "Ask me no more questions tonight."

Morley stepped aside to speak confidentially to Taylor.

As he did so Mary whispered to Jack, "I will go to my room. When all is quiet, and uncle is a-bed, meet me under the balcony on the bowling green. You can do me a great service." Then turning toward her uncle and his friend, she bade them good-night, said she was tired, and whatever more she might have to say she would say in the morning.

The storm was over. A few of the last clouds of the night were rushing away to the north. A bright diamond-like star shone in sweet companionship with the moon.

Jack Meadows stationed himself beneath the balcony, but he could not prevent his shadow from falling athwart the footpath, where Tom Sheffield saw it, and watched it as in duty bound. Presently he saw another shadow upon the white path, and heard Mary speak to her companion. Tom lay prone upon the balcony above them.

"Jack you love me?"

"God knows it, and to my sorrow."

"I had betrothed myself to another; I never can be his now. Let that bring me back to your confidence."

"Mary, when I came into the inn tonight, it was to see you for the last time. I am leaving Kirkstall."

"Leaving Kirkstall! Where is your mother, then?"

"I have given her the farm and the money; my Uncle Luke will see to the business and her brother is an honest man. She can take no harm."

"And why art thou going?" she asked, some of her old native tenderness of speech coming back to her.

"Because I cannot live in the land where another is to wed thee."

"My poor Jack! Then do not go on that account. I'll never wed another; never wed at all. But in memory of our dear old days of friendship, do this thing I ask of thee. Tonight a foul deed has been done, and I have lived to bear home with me the evidence that one I love better than all the world is concerned in it. Hush, Jack! for the love you bear me, listen and fulfill your promise that whatever I could ask you to do for me you would do it."

"I am listening, Mary, and I will not break my word."

"You know the young no—the young gentleman, Mr. Parker—nay, do not shrink from me—find him, warn him, save him. Tell him all is known, he must put the seas between him and England—between him and me. Tell him 'twas I who found the hat with its blue ribbon in the band, and took it home, and they recognized it at the moment I did. Go now; follow the men who are gone to the abbey; hear what they say at the Hark-to-Rover; use your own keen wits, and hunt down Richard Parker; but only for his good—to warn him, to save him! I'll to thy mother, and comfort her, and tell her that thou hast bethought thyself of thy decision, and that there is no need thou shouldst go."

"God bless, thee, my poor betrayed love. I'll see thee no more until he is safe beyond the sea. Good-by!"

He kissed her upon the cheek and was gone.

"Well, I'm dommed!" exclaimed Tom Sheffield under his breath, as he slipped from his hiding place and sought his curious old-fashioned bunk somewhere beneath the great staircase. "Well, I'm dommed! I often 'eard parson say as devil can put on a pleasin' shape for his own ends, and I dunno as I ivver reightly understood it afore toneet. Ther's that sandy-mugged villin Foster, as cum wi' Gentleman Dick, biggest fool i' Kirkstall could see as he wor no better nor a waster, a want-rope, a cut-throat scour-o'-th-neet; but as for t'other'n, why, weren't seemingly a better chap goin'. 'Andsome is as 'andsome does, that's reet; but 'andsome and doin' everything 'andsome to boot, that was Gentleman Parker, a 'earty, pleasant-spoken gent as you'd wish to see, and just the sort, if I'd been a woman—which I thanks Providence I ain't—as I'd ha' gone for straight; just as our poor lovely Mary have ben and done. And then, all being said, lo and behold if it don't turn out that he's the very Old Nick hissen, and hav' been and done a murder! Which fulfills what is written, as parson says that the devil he can put it on for his purpose, whether it be a fine handsome young gentleman, a fisherman, or a roarin' lion; but there's one thing, Tom, you can bet on, as no judge and jury, if so be it should go as far, is ever a-goin' to get out o' you what you'n 'eard this night."

With which earnest comment and reflection, with which touch of foresight, and warning bond of secrecy, Tom turned in, and slept the sleep of the fearless and just.

CHAPTER XI.

The next day Mary had been induced by her uncle, a magistrate, and the parson, to tell her story. The wager; her walk to the abbey; how she had been startled by voices while she stood by the elder tree; how she had hidden; then men bearing a body between them; the hat of one of them being blown by the wind to her feet; her return home; and her belief that she had seen the hat before. At this point she was obdurate, she would not say whose hat she thought it was; she made no remark whatever about the ribbon fastened near the buckle.

Old Morley supplied this link in the chain of evidence. He was weak, but honest.

Meanwhile the constable, inefficient as were the constables of those days, had investigated the apparent scene of the murder; the broken rope and wire across the road; the evidences of a severe struggle; the traces of blood; the marks on the road where the poor horse had made frantic efforts to free himself from the entanglement which had thrown him to the ground; but the investigation was at fault in regard to the direction of the footsteps of the murderers and their load.

It transpired later that the men had made a detour with their burden in order to mislead the searchers for the body.

Two days after the deed, the body was found; and almost at the same time Jack Meadows came upon Parker and Foster at the Heather-Bell, a roadside tavern not far from Scarborough.

The meeting was more or less accidental. The horses of the two men were in the stable when Jack went to put up his own mare for the night. He thought he recognized one of them, for Parker had ridden a superb animal into Kirkstall, which Jack had seen him mount more than once at the Star and Garter. He went into the common room of the small inn, and there sat the two highwaymen at supper. Parker in an evidently gloomy and discontented frame of mind.

"Good evening, gentlemen," said Jack.

"The same to you, friend," said Foster, cheerfully.

Parker looked up and could not disguise his surprise, not to say fear, at sight of his rival, the man whose hopes in life he had blasted.

"I was seeking you," said Jack.

"Seeking us!" exclaimed Foster, starting to his feet.

"Not you," said Jack, "this gentleman!"

"Oh," said Foster, with a sigh of relief, for at the moment it occurred to him that Jack might be the spokesman of others stationed without and bent on their capture.

"Your time will come, no doubt," said Jack; "but I am not the man that will bring you to the gallows."

Foster stood in an attitude of self-defense. Dick calmly awaited Jack's further disclosures.

"What do you mean?" asked Foster, his hand upon his pistol. "We are at home here, the landlord is in our service. You are one of us, is that what you wish to say?"

"No, I am not one of you; if I had not sworn to help you—not you!" turning to Foster, "I would hand you over to justice now, in spite of your landlord and your pistols, you damnable ruffians! There, make the most of that, and take you hand from your pistol, or I'll scatter your brains on the wall."

Jack as he spoke leveled a formidable weapon at Foster, leaving Parker to do what he pleased.

Foster showed his hands straight, and turned deadly pale.

"That is well, you coward," said Jack; "I am not here to arrest you. I am the messenger of a heart-broken girl, to save you, Richard Parker, the nobleman (with a sneer), and, out of my love for her, I extend the reprieve to your companion."

Foster eyed Jack suspiciously.

"I am that fool, a doting lover," went on Jack, "who thought kindness and devotion would count something to a woman—good conduct, and an honest name. It was for you to come to Kirkstall and show me what a fool I was; you, a highwayman, a thief, a murderer!"

Parker sat like a statue staring at his rival, while Jack flung these denunciatory sentences at him.

Foster moved uneasily, seeking an opportunity to attack the passionate countryman, who turned toward him to say, "if you make a move, so much as a handstir, I'll shoot you! Why lay another deed of blood on your soul? I tell you I am not here to harm you, but to warn you, because I have sworn to save the ruffian who has stolen my place and robbed me of my life, and because I am a fool."

"Swear you do not mean to molest us, or to obstruct our escape," said Foster in a whisper, "and don't speak so loud."

"I will swear nothing to such as you; if you doubt me, leave the room and take your chance; this man, your friend, knows I speak the truth; his black heart has white enough in it to tell him so."

"You have said it," Parker replied.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Senate.—The senate met yesterday after a recess of more than two weeks, but owing to the recent death of Senator William J. Sewell of New Jersey, no business was transacted.

House.—Another Schley resolution was introduced in the house today by Representative Schrim of Maryland. It provides an appropriation of $12,900 for bronze tablets commemorating six great naval victories, beginning with those of John Paul Jones in 1797 and closing with the battle of Santiago bay, "Commodore Winfield Scott Schley commanding," in 1898. A bill restricting immigration was introduced by Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania. It materially increases the disabilities of alien immigrants. Among those it excludes are "persons who have been engaged in any plot against any government or any of its officers, or who are authorized polygamists, nihilists, or members of any secret society whose constitution or compact is contrary to the constitution of the United States." Representative Grosvenor of Ohio introduced an anti anarchist bill. It is similar to other measures on this subject, except that the death penalty is provided for criminal assaults on officers of the government, without specifically designating the president as the one assaulted. A bill to re-establish the army canteen was introduced by Representative Kern of Illinois. Congressman Hull introduced a bill to provide for a $1,000,000 postoffice building at Des Moines.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Senate.—The first notes of the contest between the Nicaragua and Panama routes for the isthmian canal were heard in the senate today. Morgan offered and secured the adoption of a resolution which indicates his purpose to have the committee on interoceanic canals inquire into the relations alleged to exist between the transcontinental railroad companies of the United States and Canada and the Panama Canal company. In explanation of the resolution Morgan declared that the alleged relations were a "wicked monopoly" which already had cost the people of the Pacific coast millions of dollars. The relations involve the control by the Panama Canal company of the Panama Railroad company and the agreement existing between certain railroads of the United States and the Pacific Mail Steamship company.

House.—The debate on the Nicaragua canal bill in the house was opened in lively fashion today by Hepburn, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce commission, which reported the bill. For two hours he held the floor, replying to a volley of questions concerning the recent offer of the Panama Canal company to sell its property and franchises to the United States for $40,000,000. The interest in the debate centered most entirely in the new phase of the subject. Hepburn maintained that the alleged new offer of the Panama company was a part of the plan of delay. All his utterances along that line were liberally applauded. He pointed out what he claimed was the suspicious circumstances that the Panama company held out for $109,000,000 until it was decided before the holiday recess to consider the Nicaragua bill, and then suddenly dropped the price to $40,000,000. Morris of Minnesota gave notice that at the proper time he would offer an amendment to authorize the president, if he could secure the property and rights of the Panama company for $40,000,000, if concessions could be procured from Colombia, and if the Walker commission so recommended, to purchase and proceed to complete the Panama canal. The other speakers today were Davis of Florida, Richardson of Alabama, Mann of Illinois and Adams of Pennsylvania.

Washington, Jan. 8.—Senate.—During consideration by the senate today of private pension legislation some important statements were made by Gallinger, chairman of the committee on pensions, in respect to regulations adopted by the committee to govern it in consideration of private pension bills. He announced that none but absolutely meritorious cases would be presented to the senate for its consideration, and that the closest scrutiny would be given by the committee to every bill introduced. He said that no pension exceeding $50 a month would be recommended by the committee for the widow of a general officer, and that pensions for the widows of other officers would be scaled down proportionately.

House.—The debate on the Nicaraguan canal bill in the house today developed sentiment in favor of giving consideration to the recent offer of the Panama company to sell its franchise and property for $40,000,000, this sentiment taking the form of advocating the Morris amendment to empower the president to select the latter route if the canal commission upon considering the company's offer recommends it, and the required concessions can be obtained from Colombia. Of sixteen members who spoke today nine favored the Morris amendment. It was agreed that general debate should close tomorrow at 2 o'clock, after which the bill will be open to amendment under the five-minute rule. The final vote probably will be taken tomorrow. The speakers today were Shackleford of Missouri, Parker of New Jersey, Lovering of Massachusetts, Morris of Minnesota, Burton of Ohio, Hill of Connecticut, Bromwell of Ohio, Gillett of Masachusetts and Littlefield of Maine, in favor of the Morris amendment; and Messrs. Burgess of Texas, Bell of Colorado, Cooney of Missouri, Cummings of New York, Wilson of Tennessee and Lacey of Iowa, for the bill in its present form.

Des Moines, Jan 13, 1902.

It is said the slack water canal scheme will be allowed to rest for a time. Owing to the opposition of the railroads that do business in Iowa the scheme to make the Des Moines river a slack water canal has not been pushed as rapidly as first intended, though the projectors have not lost hope. It is said that the railroads were preparing to send a strong lobby to Washington to fight any bill that proposed making the river into a water way for the transportation of freight. The Commercial Exchange through committees had endorsed the scheme, but it is understood that outside parties have advised letting the subject drop for a few months at least.

Superintendent Barrett has just sent out a circular to the county superintendents in which he considered a number of important educational matters. He asks the co-operation of the county superintendents in the work of the department superintendents. He notes the fact that his recent biennial report shows a decrease in school attendance and urges that this falling off and the remedies therfore be considered. The library work is commended. County superintendents are asked to promote this work so far as is in their power. Advice is given on examinations, and, it is said, lists of the examination questions for February, March, April, July, August, September and October will be sent to superintendents for the purpose of harmonizing the conduct of examinations throughout the state. Visitations of schools is urged and many other matters are touched upon.

A decisions rendered in Judge Holmes' court is of much interest to tax collectors and tax payers. It is in regard to the constitutionality of chapter 50, of the acts of the Twenty-eigth General Assembly, relative to the manner of collecting taxes on property not previously listed or assessed, as, for instance, where through oversight no record had been made of a certain property, by reason of such oversight, taxes had not been collected upon the property. Under the decision, the assessor may, upon finding that such an error has been made, go back as far as five years and levy such assessment as is equitable for each year of that time.

Attorney General Mullan has received a letter from F. E. Rittman, auditor for the war department in the federal treasury department, in which it was stated that the claims filed by the state of Iowa for interest on its war bonds and war warrants would be disposed of by the court of claims. It has been expected by Mr. Mullan for some time that these claims would not be settled in the treasury department directly, but that they would be referred to the court of claims for adjudication. More especially has this been the case since the appointment of Governor Shaw as secretary of the treasury, as it was anticipated that the governor would not deem it best to permit the department of which he is to be the head to pass on claims from his own state. It seems, however, the course to be followed is indicated plainly in the statutes and that the law supposes that these claims shall be adjusted by the court of claims.

The Continental Biscuit company, whose officers decided several weeks ago to establish a mammoth factory in Des Moines from which to handle its Iowa trade, has closed a deal with F. M. Hubbell, Son & Co. for a site and will commence work of construction at once.

The city of Des Moines, according to the present plans of the local committee on arrangements, will be strewn with natural corp badges when the State G. A. R. encampment is held here May 21, 22 and 23, the dates fixed on yesterday. It is the intention to grow badges of the different army corps of the rebellion with foliage plants set out in the parks, on the river front, in the yards of private homes and wherever opportunity offers.

The statement of the conditions of the state and savings banks of Iowa at the close of business December 10, has been isseud from the office of Auditor of State Merriman. It shows a steady increase in the business transacted by the banks. The statement preceding the last one issued showed the condition at the close of business September 30 of last year. At that time there were 495 state and savings banks in Iowa. At the close of business December 10 there were 501 banks transacting business, 281 savings banks and 220 state banks. The amount of money on deposit in the state and savings banks September 30, 1901, was $120,466,645.42. At the close of business December 10 the amount on deposit was $121,852,942.76, an increase of nearly a million and a half of dollars.

Speaker Eaton has announced house chairmanships as follows: Ways and means, Temple of Clarke; judiciary, Clarke of Dallas; appropriatio[n] Hughes of Iowa; railroads and c[om]merce, Wise of Black Hawk; mu[ni]corporations, Carter of Sioux; [im]gressional districts, Furry of H[a]

It is not the site of a town, but its character that makes it a desirable place to live in, says an exchange. A live and prosperous town is a desirable one and a town may live and prosper and yet be small. Every citizen in town should be interested in its prosperity. One of the ways to help a town is to speak well of it. It is true patriotism to stand by your own town and self interest as well. A man who speaks ill of his own family lowers himself and family too in the estimation of others, so does a man who cares little for his own town and community. The man who is respected by others respects himself and his neighbors, and patriotism begins at home. Another way to help your town is to do all you can to beautify it. Beautify your own property all you can and then do all you can to help beautify the streets. Be friendly to everybody and courteous to strangers. Your civility will help make good impressions and will be carried away and cherished. Never forget that you are part of the town and that your deportment helps to make up the stranger's estimate of the place. Sell all you can and buy all you can at home. Every dollar that is sent or carried away from town makes it that much poorer.

GREAT OPPURTUNITIES.

The Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Norther Railway Company is nearing the completion of it's 140 miles of new extensions in the very richest portion of Southwestern Minnesota. The six new towns, Reading, Wilmont, Lismore, Kenneth, Waters and Conger are rapidly becoming commercial centers for the rich and allready thickly settled country surrounding. There has been no "Auction sale of lots" or any attempt to "Boom" these towns; their growth being the result of a demand for convenient markets.

It is the purpose of the railway company to encourage the continuous substantial growth of the towns on their lines. In order that each town may receive the attention of "ownership," it has been decided to sell each town entire, including all unplatted land to private parties. For terms of such purchases, address the undersigned. For busine-s opeings or purchase of lots address the Town Lot Agent of the respective town.

Chas. Steihl, Sr., was a business visitor to Garner last Friday. He has recently sold his fine farm west of Klemme and expects to hold an auction sale of his machinery and stock in the near future. We understand that Mr. Steihl has bought property in Garner and contemplates moving there.

We have in mind a county in this state, known as the banner republican county; but the supervisors and some of the other officials became "punky," careless of their duties. showed extreme partiality, and were further led astray; yet continued to err. The party is now divided, the auditor resigned in disgrace, the board is part democratic, but there is a refreshing lot of fairness within that courthouse now. What is done in that county is possible in others.—Kanawha Record.

Only a short time more are we able to offer the Northwestern Agriculturalist free to our subscribers. All our farmer readers should take advantage of this opportunity while it lasts. The paper is a good one, one that every progressive farmer should have and we would like to furnish it to many more of our readers. ☞If you pay a year's subscription to the TIMES, we will give you one year's subscription to the Northwestern Agriculturalist absolutely free. Did anyone ever see nicer winter weather in Iowa?

The Epworth League will hold a social in the M. W. A. hall in Klemme Friday evening, Jan. 17. A good program has been prepared, light refreshments will be served and a pleasant social time is anticipated. All are cordially invited to attend.

It is said that in one of our nearby towns recently, a minister at the beginning of his discourse, said he had forgotten his notes and excused himself as follows: "I will have to depend entirely upon the Lord for what I say this morning; this evening I will come better prepared."

No Transfer at Chicago—All trains of the Baltimore & Ohio, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern and Nickle Plate railways use the Grand Central station at Chicago. Patrons of the Chicago Great Western Railway desiring to go east via any of these roads will avoid transferring.

Fred Ax, Wm. Stratman and Henry Theiman, three of our popular progressive farmers, were callers at this den last Saturday, and each added the price of a year's subscription to help make our resources average up somewhere near our liabilities. We appreciate such calls. Let others come.

Artell Haskins is down from Garner this week hauling cream for his brother, Myron, who is packing ice for the creamery. Myron informs us that he will be employed as butter maker in the Klemme creamery after the first of March. We have not heard where Mr. Cousins, the present butter maker, intends to go.

A couple of traveling doctors were through here last week, looking for patients who would give their notes for treatment. We did not learn of any patients. This country was worked that way a couple of years ago and the memory is still bitter. A home doctor is the one to go to and if he can't treat you successfully, he will tell you who can. —Anthony Republican.

"How dear to our heart is the steady subscriber, who pays in advance at the birth of each year; who lays down his dollar and lays it down gently, and casts 'round the office a halo of cheer. He never says 'stop it, I can't afford it,' nor 'I'm getting more papers than I can read,' but always says 'send it—the family like it—in fact we all think it a household need.' How welcome he is when he steps in the sanctum, how he makes our heart throb, how he makes our feet dance; we outwardly thank him we inwardly bless him—the steady subscriber who pays in advance."—Exchange.

School Notes.

Floy Shafer and Esther Lau were absent Wednesday morning.

Miss Emma Krunkelfeld has returned to take up her school work.

The A class has almost finished their economics.

Examinations were held Thursday and Friday of last week. A final in physiology was taken.

Ross Phelps was absent Tuesday.

A few scholars from room 3 visited room 2 Friday afternoon.

ANOTHER REMARKABLE CASE

Which the Doctors Failed to Cure or Understand.

A Medical man as a rule dislikes to acknowledge the value of a proprietary medicine—in fact, professional etiquette debars him from doing so. Yet there are many eminent physicians, those most advanced in their professions, who give full credit to the great curative properties of Vogeler's Curative Compound, from the fact that it is manufactured by an old and reliable company, proprietors of St. Jacob's Oil, from the formula of a brother physician, who to-day stands in the front ranks of the most eminent medical men in London, and on account of its intrinsic merit, it is largely prescribed by the medical profession; but, in the case which we are about to relate, the attending physician called it "rubbish," but, as it turned out, Mrs. Nettleton tells the doctor that "rubbish or not, it saved her life."

Mrs. Nettleton graphically relates the particulars of her own case, which will doubtless be of interest to many of our lady readers:

"I had been an intense sufferer for many years from dyspepsia, liver and kidney troubles, when a little pamphlet was placed in my hands, and, although at that time I had been bedridden for more than six months, I determined, after reading some of the wonderful testimonials therein of cases similar to mine, which had been completely cured by the timely use of Vogeler's Curative Compound, to try some, especially as my doctors failed to even benefit me, and I had almost given up all hope of ever being well again. It is most interesting, and, in fact, marvelous to relate, that the very first dose of fifteen drops relieved me. It was not long before I was able to get up and about; three months from taking the first dose I was enjoying better health than I had been for fourteen years. I continued well until a few months back, when I was taken ill again, my troubles being dyspepsia and constipation. I had a doctor attending me for a month, but continued to grow worse, until I again found myself bedridden, when I bethought myself of my old medicine, Vogeler's Curative Compound, which I immediately sent for and took in place of the doctor's medicine; at that time I had not had a movement of the bowels for five days, but Vogeler's Curative Compound soon put me on my feet again—in fact, completely cured me a second time, but, of course, this attack was not as bad as the first, yet I fully believe I should not have been alive today had it not been for Vogeler's Curative Compound. If I had only thought to have taken it when my last illness took place, I should not only have been saved much suffering, but a $75 doctor's bill."

Mrs. Nettleton said: "I have recommended Vogeler's Curative Compound for indigestion and eczema, and in every case it has proved a cure beyond a doubt. Mr. Swinbank, our chemist, has sent me the names of no end of people who have been cured by Vogeler's Curative Compound. By the way, the proprietors have so much confidence in this great London physician's discovery, that they will send a sample free to any person sending name and address and naming this paper." St. Jacob's Oil Co, 205 Clay Street Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. Nettleton is a confectioner, in the Brighton Road, where she has been established many years, and is honored and respected by all classes. Her statements as regards Vogeler's Curative Compound may, therefore, be regarded as reliable evidence of its great value. The public, however, may look upon this remarkable statement as one of the many which we are constantly receiving from grateful people all over the world, who have been cured of various maladies by the use of this wonderful remedy, which is the result of an eminent physician's life-long experience. These people are nearly always representative and well-known citizens.

A Pueblo Indian Book.

The Santa Fe has in preparation a book on the Indians along its lines. The material is being gathered and arranged by an expert ethnologist, and although the primary object of the publication is to advertise the wonders and interesting features of the Southwest the book is expected to have a definite scientific value and great care is being given to the accuracy of the subject-matter and illustrations.

Manager—"Be careful not to make the plot of your novel to complicated." Author—"Why not?" Manager—"Well, you know before it is dramatized the plot will all have to be taken out."

"You don't know how to make love!" sneered the Gentleman of the Old School. "No," laughed the Gentleman of the new school; "I leave all that to the women! I have need only to make money!"—Life.

"Where there any pretty dresses in the play?" "Oh, yes. The poor deserted wife, who had to take in sewing for a living, suffered agonies in a lovely white silk gown with chiffon ruffles, and a dream of a pearl-colored plush opera cloak lined with white fur."

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Suggestions by Gaylord.

From Farmers' Review: I am past 76 years of age and have been up since before daylight shredding fodder all day. I have finished milking seven cows, and am now seated at my desk looking over my many farm papers. As usual, I catch up the Farmers' Review among the first, for the reason that I always find something practical, interesting and instructive, especially in its horticultural columns. The article in a recent issue headed "Leaf Crumpler" is worth its weight in gold. The leaf crumpler has done me hundreds of dollars' worth of injury, and till now I have never known how to destroy it. I have seen the crumpled leaves and have examined them, but did not know that they had been rolled up by the insects that have eaten out and ruined so many grafts before the buds had little more than started. I shall go over my orchard and gather every crumpled leaf and burn it.

In your issue of November 27 I find two very interesting articles; one headed "Distance Apart to Plant Apple Trees." So far as the article goes, where the writer of it lives, it is probably all right. However, in all the great Northwest the theory there advocated is inapplicable. The writer, in speaking of an orchard set 25 by 25 feet, says the man does not know what to do with it, it is set so closely. I would say to our friend Doerr, "Just move that orchard over here, for it is just the thing for us. We would, however, recommend a slight change. We would set the trees thirty feet apart east and west and only 20 feet apart north and south. He advises cutting off the long branches. We accept this advice, as in very many cases here we need to thicken up the top, especially on the sunny side, so as to shut out the sun and avoid one of the worst difficulties that faces us—sun-killing, which kills more bearing trees than any other thing.

All experienced orchardists in this part of the Northwest head their apple trees very low, so as to shade the ground on the sun-side as much as possible. We strive to close up all openings on the sun-side, and shade the ground on the sun-side to keep the roots as cool and deep as possible. We always "head in" here, if at all, on the sun-side, so as not to let in the sun, but to thicken the branches and close up open spaces in the top. If we thin at all it is on the northeast side, for two important reasons. First, to open the top so as to give the picker a chance to get up into the tree to pick apples or destroy insects. Second, to force the sap into the branches on the sun side, so as to increase the branches on that side. In many instances here this is an imperative necessity.—Edson Gaylord, Floyd County, Iowa.

Difficulties of Cranberry Growers.

Reports concerning cranberry yields from various parts of the country indicate that the crop of 1901 in Wisconsin and other Western states is below that of last year. The Western cranberry crop has been pretty well cleaned up, but a considerable portion of the Eastern crop, which was large, is being held by growers in expectation of higher prices. The marketing of the fruit has given occasion for complaint over the uncertain standards of quality. Judge Gaynor of Grand Rapids, Wisconsin, it is said, will endeavor to have the National Cranberry Growers' Association at its next annual meeting in January, pass resolutions defining:

1st. "Pie Berries" as berries that will go through a ⅜ inch screen or as berries whose longest diameter is ⅜ of an inch or less.

2d. "Standard Berries" as "crop run," with the "pie berries" out. All the pie berries can not be taken out by screening, but not more than five in a hundred should be left in.

3d. "Crop run" berries as being all the berries in a given crop, just as they come from the field, with the dirt and chaff removed, without being run through a sizing screen.

4th. "Fancy Berries" as berries well colored and of a diameter of ⅝ inch and upwards.

5th. "Sound Berries" as berries in which there appears not more than 2 per cent discolored and decayed and not more than 5 per cent soft berries, not discolored or but slightly discolored, and not more than 10 per cent defective or blemished berries.

Rape.

The rape plant has come into a good deal of prominence during the last ten years. Rape is known botanically as Brassica campestris, variety napus. Brassica is the family name for the cabbage, turnip and mustards. The rape plant is so closely allied to the cabbage and turnip that in the early stages of their growth the similarity in appearance is very striking. There are many varieties of rape, just as there are many varieties of cabbages and turnips. These varieties have been largely created by European cultivators.

While the rape plant has been known in America for little more than ten years it has been known and appreciated in Europe for a long time. Some varieties are grown in Europe for their oily seeds, from which is made an oil of commerce. European stock-raisers have long been developing some varieties of rape for a stock feed. One of the best varieties is that developed in England in the vicinity of Essex, and hence known as dwarf Essex rape. This variety has a decided advantage over all others, at least over all others known on this side of the water. It has a heavy, thick, succulent leaf. The plant itself is a biennial, while there are many varieties of rape that are annuals. For forage uses the biennial is far superior to the annual for this reason: The biennial makes only a succulent growth the first year, making a woody growth and forming seed the second year. The period of wood and seed formation is a stage at which it is of very little use for forage. But this can be avoided by pasturing it only the first year, making a new seeding each year. The annuals, on the other hand, make all of their growth during a single season. They give material for pasturage while they are in the succulent stage, but soon become woody and begin to form seed, when they are of very little value for live stock.

The Dwarf Essex rape is very succulent, both as to its leaves and stems. On ordinary soil it will produce ten tons of green fodder, and on very rich land has been known to produce twenty tons. Great care is needed in securing seed. For some years it was almost impossible to get the true Dwarf Essex when it was ordered. To illustrate the difficulty of getting good seed, we cite the fact of one of our American experiment stations that sent to Canada and obtained seed from the same importing firm that had been supplying the station at Guelph. They purchased 300 pounds; but the rape that came up proved to be an annual variety of rape known as Hybrid Bird Rape.

Rape may be sown from early spring till late summer, even as late as August. The best results as to crop are obtained by seeding about July first. Sowing broadcast is practiced, but drill sowing is preferred, for the reason that less seed is required; the plants can be readily cultivated; and the animals in pasturing do not trample it down so readily.

We are certain that the rape plant should be given a larger place in our American agriculture than it now occupies. It is a plant well adapted to varied conditions and especially serviceable in emergencies.

Varied rations give best results in feeding for eggs. This is a truth quite generally proven. We cannot reason the matter out because we know little of the action on each other of the different kinds of foods. It is not enough to say that one kind of food contains so much nitrogen and another kind so much. That does not indicate the real value of any food. There are unknown actions produced by food combinations. Of cats it has been said, "They contain a stimulant not shown by the analysis." Some have even tried to name this stimulant "avoin." We do not know much about it. We do not see it. We only see its effects. This may not be a condition confined to oats. It may be possessed in some form by other foods. When we feed a variety we are very likely to be building better than we know. Make the poultry ration as varied as possible.

Pasturing Wheat.

While it is not possible to accurately forecast the outcome of the wheat crop, reasonable prudence would suggest that for the present, wheat should not be pastured to any great extent. The conditions have been such during the summer and fall just past that much wheat was sown in soil that had been poorly prepared, and even with the best of preparation, there has not been sufficient moisture for vigorous growth. There were heavy rains during the fall of 1900 and the soil was filled with moisture and thoroughly saturated. With these conditions and favorable winter weather, wheat furnished an unusual amount of pasture last winter and was in some cases, actually benefited by pasturing. The conditions are entirely different at present. In general, the fall rains have been sufficient only to moisten the soil to a depth of about six inches while the subsoil has scarcely been reached by the water. The wheat is thus dependent upon the rains that come during the winter and while it is possible that there may be plenty of rain for the purpose, the average rainfall of past seasons has been insufficient. It is true that feed is scarce and high in price and the wheat pasture sells for good prices. Some prefer to take what is to be had in the way of pasture from the wheat crop and to plant some other crop if the wheat is harmed by pasturing, fearing that possibly wheat may not yield well next harvest even if not pastured. Looked at in this light, pasturing wheat is profitable, even though it kills the wheat. But it will not do to follow the practice of last winter when it was scarcely possible to pasture wheat too heavily in Oklahoma.—Oklahoma Station Bulletin.

Cold as a Stimulant.

One rule cannot be established that will apply to all farm animals. The dairy cow is at one end of the line and the sheep at the other. A certain amount of cold is a stimulant to farm animals, especially to those with warm coverings. The natural covering of the sheep is a much better protection from the cold of winter than that possessed by most other domestic animals. It is evident that with a covering that permits little escape of heat, the food required to supply heat is greatly lessened. Among the keepers of sheep there is a wide divergence of opinion concerning the extent to which they should be housed in winter. There are cases extant where sheep have been fattened in open pens and compared with sheep fattened in closed pens. The ones the most exposed made the largest gains. Also, where sheep have been fattened under natural conditions as to temperature, a close record of the gains and of the daily temperature have shown the greatest gains during the coldest periods. In such cases it is evident that the cold was a stimulant. If so, then cold has as certain a value in feeding operations as have the various feeds. The problem is to find just where cold ceases to be a virtue, and becomes a menace. This field of inquiry is as yet practically untouched.

Growing Demand for Foresters.

The interest in forestry is rapidly increasng in this country. New forestry schools are constantly being opened. The attendance of students at these schools this fall is greater than ever before, though as yet the total number of students in the whole country is not large. This is due to the fact that the forestry school is a thing of the last few years. The number can only increase as the popular interest in forestry grows, as there will be no place for these young men to occupy, or in which to put their knowledge to use unless the opportunities for service are increased. Nearly every state in the Union should be doing much in forestry, and the work is so immense that its proper control should make room for the employment of thousands of educated foresters. Every state that has a large forest area can make no better investment than to spend money freely in paying the salaries of such men. Take the value of the timber wiped out by any one of our recent great forest fires and consider it in relation to the salaries of foresters. Then take the value of all the timber destroyed annually in this country and set it against the salaries of the foresters that should be the employed, and what is the result? The inevitable answer is that we must employ skilled labor to prevent waste.

Late information from Miss Ellen M. Stone, the missionary, and Mme. Tsilka indicates that their condition has been so far ameliorated that they are able to obtain rude comforts. The brigands complain that Miss Stone is trying to convert them to Christianity.

FOUND AMERICANS BUYING LAND AT SASKATCHEWAN, WESTERN CANADA.

A Michigan Farmer Visits Saskatoon and Is Well Pleased.

Mr. S. K. Lent was a delegate sent from the farmers of Allegan County, Michigan, to Western Canada, to report on the prospects for successful settlement. His report is as follows: I went from Winnipeg to Edmonton, thence east one hundred miles by wagon. I found the country in that vicinity a rich, black loam, varying from 12 inches to 3 feet deep; the crops are simply something enormous; wheat and oats by actual measurement often standing five feet in height. I have been a farmer for forty years, and consider myself a fair judge of the yield of grain, and I saw wheat that would yield 50 bushels per acre, and oats that would yield 100 bushels per acre; not one alone, but a good many. As for root crops and garden truck, in no country have I ever seen their equal for all kinds except corn and tomatoes; the nights being too cool for these to ripen well. As a stock country it has no equal. East of Edmonton, on the head waters of the Vermillion River, I saw hay meadows containing from 10 to 100 acres, the grass standing 4 feet high, and would often cut 3 to 4 tons to the acre. From Edmonton I passed through some fine locations, namely, Wetaskiwin, Lacombe and other points.

From McLeod I went to Regina, thence to Prince Albert, 247 miles north of the main line. For the first fifty miles is fine farming country, but the next hundred miles is more of a stock country. Then at Saskatoon, Rosthern and Duck Lake I found some very fine farming country, so good that I found a party of Americans from Minnesota buying land for themselves—one party buying 12 sections, and the other 20 sections of land for themselves, which they proposed to improve at once.

I have traveled over twenty-three different States and Territories in our Union, and never in my life time have I ever seen such magnificent crops and especially as fine a stock country.

Old gentleman—"Why do you shed such bitter tears my boy?" Boston Child (pausing in his grief)—"Really, I cannot conceive that my tears differ as to their brackish quality from other lachrymose emissions. I have never heard of saccharine tears."

Mrs. Goodsole—"Why, Johnny, are you just going home now? Your mother's been looking for you all afternoon." Johnny—"Yes'm, I know." Mrs. Goodsole—"Just think how worried she must be." Johnny—"Oh, she's near the end of her worryin.' I'm just beginnin' mine."

The visitor—"Horrors! The lightning express wrecked and totally destroyed by fire!" Young artist—"Hurrah! Good!" The visitor—"Are you crazy?" Artist—"No, but I expressed a drawing on that train, and I valued it at fifty dollars. Now the express company will have to pay for it."

"H'm!" exclaimed Mr. Goldie, after reading his morning post, "that boy's college education is making him too smart." "What's the matter?" asked Mrs. Goldie. "I wrote him the other day that I thought it would be kinder for me not to remit the check he asked for. Now he writes: 'Dear Father—I shall never forget your unremitting kindness.'"

An Important Discovery.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 13.—A sensational statement is made by Mr. Benjamin Major, whose home is at the corner of Jane and Hurlbut Ave., this city.

Mr. Major says that he has found a remedy which will positively cure all Kidney and Bladder troubles. He suffered himself for a long time with these diseases in the most painful form, and during his illness experimented with a great many medicines without getting any relief. Finally he tried Dodd's Kidney Pills, and to his great joy was cured completely.

The statement he makes seems to have ample confirmation in reports being published every day of wonderful cures by this remedy.

Ancient Art Treasures

(Special Letter.)

A VALUABLE find of ancient treasure is reported from Montalto, in Liguria. During the demolition of one of the most ancient churches in Italy a small underground chamber was discovered filled with objects of art dating back to the era of the Roman empire. They consisted chiefly of silver amphorae and vases finely chiseled and filled with gold and silver coins of the Roman empire.

Mgr. Scalabrini, who has been practically selected by the Pope to succeed Mgr. Martinelli at Washington, has begged the holy father to be excused from such promotion on the double ground of age and disinclination for a diplomatic career, for which he feels that he has no qualification.

The Roman police have arrested a notorious anarchist of the name of Calcagno, who has just arrived from the United States. He has been sentenced several times for anarchist crimes. The only document found upon him was a list of addresses, which was apparently a copy of one he had left in New York to enable his friends to communicate with him. The disquieting point was that Calcagno managed to enter Italy unchallenged. He was comfortably lodged in Rome, when he was recognized by a detective in whose hands he had been on several occasions.

Many papers in Europe recently announced that Italy had adopted a new national emblem, basing their report on the appearance of new postage stamps. It is true that both the new Italian postage stamps and coin have assumed some heraldic modifications, but they are very insignificant and were introduced during the reign of King Humbert.

Der savoyische Adler.

of a shield with a silver cross, surmounted by a crown and a pentagon star, dating from the seal of Peter II. count of Savoy. The royal coat of arms shows this same shield, with the royal helmet and the historic golden cross held by two lions and surrounded by the great chain of the Annunciata order and other high orders of the monarchy.

But the house of Savoy has from time immemorial possessed the emblem of the two-headed eagle, so that the action of King Victor Emanuel III. simply revives an old dynastic symbol.

The papal policy concerning the Philippine islands has been determined, and will be definitely announced at the approaching consistory. The archbishop of Manila has resigned and will not return to the Philippine islands. He has gone to his home in Spain. Archbishop Chapelle, who was sent to Manila as apostolic legate, has been recalled. His administration is disapproved by the authorities of the vatican. He has left Rome, but will make a visit of several weeks to his parents in France, and make a pilgrimage to the shrine of Lourdes before he sails.

M. Hugues Le Roux, a distinguished Frenchman, who is said to have discovered the sources of the Blue Nile, has just returned to Europe after a tour in Abyssinia, where he was a welcome guest of Emperor Menelik. He is now at Rome, where he will be received, in a day or two, by King Victor Emanuel. He has been interviewed by an Italian journalist who publishes a long report of the conference in the Tribuna.

The Italians, M. Le Roux says, are popular in Abyssinia. The Italian war prisoners who resided for years in the country after the battle of Abba Karima, have paved the way to a thorough reconciliation of the two races, and the negus is now convinced that Italy has given up every idea of colonial expansion to the prejudice of Ethiopia.

The only object of Italy is to establish on a firm basis commercial relations between Massowah and Abbyssinia with the full and hearty concurrence of the negus.

Some details of the pope's will are matters of gossip. The pope's nephews, it is said, expected to claim the accumulated millions which the Italian government allows annually to the pope—that is to say, the $600,000 a year which is placed at his disposal, but which is withdrawn at the end of every five years under prescription.

The pope has decided that nothing of his allowance shall be touched. His small personal fortune goes in equal distribution to his five nephews of the Pecci family. The fortune he leaves as pontiff is placed under the trusteeship of three cardinals, of whom Cardinal Rampolla is chief.

Taxes in European Cities.

People in the United States who are grumbling about high taxes should find much consolation in the knowledge that their property is not situated in any of the European capitals. In Berlin, for example, the great American life insurance companies are required to invest a certain portion of their assets in city property, and their taxes, which are no higher than those of other real estate owners, amount annually to more than one-third of their receipts from rentals. In Vienna taxes are even higher. The man who owns the building in which the American legation is located divides the rent with the government in equal shares. The same rates prevail in other large European cities.

Fox Farm in Newfoundland.

A company is being formed at North Sydney, Cape Breton, to establish a fox farm on the west coast of Newfoundland. Incorporation will be foundland legislature.

A number of business men of North Sydney and other parts of the province have volunteered to take stock, and a suitable location in Newfoundland—the natural home of the valuable fox—has been obtained, as well as a number of fine breeding animals. The price of skins range from $2 to $3 for the ordinary fox up to $50 or more for the silver-gray or black fox.

"Infantry."

The term "infantry" was first used by the Spaniards in the wars with the Moors to designate the bodyguard of a royal prince on infanta. It was extended to the entire body of foot soldiers and finally adopted throughout Europe.

SALZER'S New 20th Century OATS

TEST YIELD 300 BUS PER ACRE

CLEAR THE TRACK!

Here's the monarch—nothing like it on earth. Salzer's New 20th Century Oat takes the cake, carries first prizes as the biggest yielder everywhere. The fact is, Salzer's oats are bred to produce. The U. S. Department of Agriculture claims that out of over 400 samples and kinds tested, Salzer's were the best. How do you like that, Mr. Farmer? Our new 20th Century Oat is bound to completely revolutionize oat growing and we expect dozens of farmers to report yields in 1902 running from 200 to 500 bushels per acre. Price is dirt cheap. Be in the swim and buy this variety this spring to sell to your neighbors the coming fall for seed. It will surely pay you.

Salzer's Marvel Wheat—42 bus. per Acre

The only spring wheat on earth that will yield a paying crop north, east, south, and west and in every state in the Union. We also have the celebrated Macaroni wheat, yielding on our farms, 53 bushels per acre.

SPELTZ

The most marvelous cereal and hay food on earth, producing from 60 to 80 bushels of grain and 4 tons of rich hay per acre.

VEGETABLE SEEDS

We are the largest growers and our stock of earliest Peas, Beans, Sweet corn and all money making vegetables is enormous. Prices are very low. Onion seed 60 cents and up a pound. Catalogue tells.

For 10c—Worth $10

Our great catalogue contains full description of our Beardless Barley, yielding 109 bushels; our Triple Income Corn, going 400 bushels; our potatoes, yielding 600 bushels per acre; our grass and clover mixtures, producing 6 tons of magnificent hay; our Pea Oat, with its 8 tons of hay, and Teosinte with 80 tons of green fodder per acre. Salzer's great catalogue, worth $100 to any wide awake gardener or farmer, with 10 farm seed samples,—worth $10 to get a start—is mailed you on receipt of 10c. postage.

The date of the Hancock county fair this year has been fixed for Sept. 16, 17 and 18.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Hill left last Monday for a visit to Texas. They will go by Chicago and New Orleans and will be gone for about three weeks.

Is a newspaper an object of charity, or a business institution? To scan some of the country papers the reader would imagine that so much "per" was expected from every individual in the community every time the editor permits the startling information to filter through the columns that "Jno. Jones has purchased a red heifer from his brother, Bill Jones." This Bailey and Trigg sort of sentimental foolishness is all rot. We think the home merchant does and can serve you best. We think the weekly newspaper sold for one dollar per year is worth ten; but the News is not a whiner, not an object of charity doesn't blackmail the merchant that has his printing done out of town.

The announcement last Saturday morning that Mat Johnson, a well known and highly respected citizen, was dead came as a great shock to the community. Mr. Johnson attended church on Friday night and came home with his family in a buggy and when he went to put his horse away complained that he was not feeling well and his wife assisted him. They soon had the horse put away and came to the house where Mr. Johnson laid down and expired almost immediately. A physician was called who gave neuralgia of the heart as the cause of his death. Mr. Johnson had been complaining for several days that he did not feel well, but his ailment was not considered serious.

LESLIE'S MONTHLY, now in its fifty-second volume, is another of the great modern monthlies. Its program for the coming year embraces features second in interest to no other periodical, while its illustrations will continue to be the highest expressions of magazine art. Monthly, $1.00 per annum.

THE NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE paints with loving touch the historic landmarks of New England; it recalls the customs and traditions of the "old red schoolhouse days" and tells of the achievements of New Englanders in all parts of the world. It has distinguished contributors and is artistically printed and illustrated. Monthly, $3.00 per annum.

THE NORTHWESTERN AGRICULTURIST is the leading farm, livestock and home paper in the West. It interests every member of the family, having departments devoted to the interests of women as well as of men, on the farms in the Northwest. It is filled with instructive and interesting reading matter from beginning to end. Its various departments are under the charge of practical men, who have made a success themselves on their particular line on which they are writing. Amongst the department editors who contribute regularly to The Agriculturist, are Prof. Thomas Shaw, Professor of Animal Husbandry at the Minnesota State Agricultural College. Professor Shaw edits the sheep, beef cattle and horse departments; A. X. Hyatt, a dairyman known all over America as a practical and experienced dairy writer; Forest Henry, editor of the swine department, a man who has paid off mortgages by raising swine in Minnesota, and who is himself making money in swine raising now, not as a breeder but as a feeder of swine for market; A. K. Bush, in charge of the horticultural department, State Lecturer on Horticulture at the Minnesota Farmers' Institutes. These are only a few of the more important departments of the paper. Sample Copies will be sent free to all who are interested. The Northwestern Agriculturist is published semi-monthly, and already reaches over 66,000 farm homes twice a month. Subscription price fifty cents a year.

P. V. COLLINS, Prest. and Gen. Mgr.,

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, 725 BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, MD., March 20, 1901.

Gentlemen—Five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head-noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

Two Big Fires

Most of the Business Part of Titonka Destroyed.

Crystal Lake is Also a Sufferer.

Monday, disastrous fires visited the towns of Titonka and Crystal Lake, both on the new "Klondike" north of Garner.

At Titonka nine of the principal business houses were destroyed. The loss of property is estimated at from $35,000 to $50,000. The fire originated in a restaurant near the center of the town.

At Crystal Lake the loss was not so heavy, being estimated at about $20,000. A drug store, general merchandise store and a vacant building burned. It is not reported how the fire was started.

News of our Neighbors

Ell Center

Special Correspondent.

Sleighs and sleigh bells are in fashion once more.

Ernest Braund has just completed a fine new poultry house.

Peter Gilbert's entertained the ladies' aid society last Thursday.

Mrs. Charley Stough is enjoying a visit from her sister this week.

Isaac LaRue, who lives north of Garner, visited Ally Jones last Thursday.

Ed. Post has returned from his Illinois visit and likes Iowa better than ever.

E. P. Dow and wife attended church at the Pleasant Mound school house Sunday.

The Misses Hubbard spent part of the Sabbath with E. P. Dow's family in Klemme.

It is reported that A. Schurz, who returned home from Illinois last week, brought a wife with him.

Anyone having a cutter and a horse that will go without driving is in good demand these days.

Rev. Phelps will commence a series of meetings at Pleasant Mound next week. All are invited to attend.

Mr. Schulz, of Germantown, came over to the literary and helped the married men out with the question.

Strayed, from my place about six weeks ago, one red steer, two years old. All charges will be paid. FRED AX.

J. W. Allen shipped a car load of cattle and one of sheep the first of the week. Ray Burman accompanied them to the city to see how Chicago compares with Klemme.

The Lemon boys entertained about thirty of their friends last Wednesday evening. There was plenty of music, plenty of good things to eat and all present had a good time.

Our literary last Thursday was very well attended, standing room being at a premium. Garner, Klemme, Ellington and Clear Lake were well represented. The question was ably discussed and the judges decided there was more pleasure in single life than married life. We are inclined to believe they decided this way to get a joke on the old bachelors but perhaps they are right.

Children Especially Liable.

Burns, bruises and cuts are extremely painful and if neglected often result in blood poisoning. Children are especially liable to such mishaps because not so careful. As a remedy DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled. Draws out the fire, stops the pain, soon heals the wound. Beware of counterfeits. Sure cure for piles. "DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured my baby of eczema after two physicians gave her up," writes James Mock, N. Webster, Ind. "The sores were so bad she soiled two to five dresses a day." J. L. Harr.

Garner

From Special Correspondent.

L. A. Warner, the attorney, was a Klemme visitor Tuesday.

Wm. Gallagher and E. Gossett are now running Olson's barber shop.

L. D. Byers has been working for George Schuler the past week.

Rev. Lackey, of Traer, conducted evangelistic services in the U. P. church last week.

Webster Sage has accepted a position as clerk in the drug store of Baas & McMahon Co.

"The Battleship Maine" which was to have been played at the opera house Monday evening, was called off on account of the diphtheria.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Brackett, of the Democrat, are enjoying an extended visit from a neice, Miss Geneva Scholton, from Bear Lake, Penn.

School was closed last week on account of diphtheria, to begin again January 27 if no new cases develop. We understand there are three or four cases but none seem to be serious.

Don't Live Together.

Corwith

From the Hustler.

Mr. Shaw, the new member of the firm of Hartman & Shaw, is now located in Corwith.

W. L. Mitchell Sundayed at Corwith. He reports the treasurer's office in nice running order, and says he enjoys the work.

Someone persists in shooting the window lights out of the school house on the flat north of town. They should be apprehended and dealt with severely.

Mrs. Young has undergone a surgical operation at a hospital in Minneapolis for a slight curvature of the spine, for hemorrhoids and female trougle. The operation was very severe, but she is doing nicely, and both she and Mr. Young are much encouraged over her condition.

Child Worth Millions.

"My child is worth millions to me," says Mrs. Mary Bird of Harrisburg, Pa., "yet I would have lost her by croup had I not purchased a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure." One Minute Cough Cure is a sure cure for coughs, croup and throat and lung troubles. An absolutely safe cough cure which acts immediately. The youngest child can take it with entire safety. The little ones like the taste and remember how often it helped them. Every family should have a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure handy. At this season especially it may be needed suddenly. J. L. Harr.

Goodell

From the Globe.

Rev. Keckler departed, latter part of last week for Larchwood, Ia, to attend the funeral of a cousin.

Geo. Duryea, who is engaged in the hotel business at Britt, spent Sunday with his parents north of town.

Wm. Nelson and Mrs. John Ahrenkiel are enjoying a visit from their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nelson, from Iowa Falls.

W. O. Butterfield has been appointed justice of the peace for Avery township and is ready and prepared to do all business in that line.

John Mason informs us that he has purchased a good farm near his old home in Wisconsin, consideration $45 per acre. Mr. Mason will not move onto his farm there for a year.

The Secret of Long Life.

Consists in keeping all the main organs of the body in healthy, regular action, and in quickly destroying deadly disease germs. Electric Bitters regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood, and give a splendid appetite. They work wonders in curing kidney troubles, female complaints, nervous diseases, constipation, dyspepsia, and malaria. Vigorous health and strength always follow their use. Only 50c, guaranteed by Harr, druggist.

Jennie W. White, Plaintiff, vs. W. H. White, Defendant. } In the District Court of the State of Iowa, in and for Hancock County, February Term, A. D. 1902

To W. H. WHITE:

You are hereby notified that on or before the First day of February, A. D. 1902, the petition of Plaintiff in the above entitled cause will be filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the State of Iowa, in and for Hancock County, claiming of you a divorce from the bonds of matrimony and alleging as grounds therefor your desertion of the Plaintiff in the month of September, A. D. 1898, without any reasonable or just cause, and for such other relief as may seem just and equitable.

For further particulars see said petition when filed.

And that unless you appear thereto and defend before noon of the second day of the next term, being the February term of said Court, which will commence at the Court House in Concord, Iowa, on the 17th day of February, 1902, default will be entered against you and judgment and decree rendered thereon as provided by law.

Des Moines, Jan. 20, 1902.

At a joint caucus of the members of the senate and house to select trustee of the Agricultural College to succeed L. B. Robinson, of Harlan, James H. Wilson, of Adair county, better known as "Prairie Jim" Wilson was named. The other candidates were the present incumbent, L. B. Robinson and Silas Wilson of Atlantic. Senator Hazleton was chairman of the caucus, and Asmus Boysen secretary. Ten votes were cast in the caucus, and Mr. Wilson was elected on the first ballot, the result being as follows: James H. Wilson, 6; L. B. Robinson, 2, and Silas Wilson, 2.

For the first time in the last six years the state auditor has been notified of the sale of Iowa school lands. He received notice that 160 acres in Allamakee county had been disposed of. No information was given as to whom the land had been sold to or as to the price it brought. The sale was reported and blanks asked for making returns regarding it. The state auditor has just transferred another batch of school funds to Winnebago county. The transfer amounted to $1,800 and was transferred from Cedar county. This makes about $209,000 in school funds which Winnebago county has on hand, and the county is still asking for more.

Following the action of the democrats of the general assembly in refusing to endorse Fletcher Howard to succeed himself as a member of the pharmacy commission, Charles A. Walsh, secretary of the national committee of the democrats, has written a letter to Mr. Howard withdrawing his endorsement, as he says it will get him in trouble with the silver democrats. The friends of Mr. Howard say they are not worrying because of the loss of this support.

The first copies of the second biennial report of the board of control have just come from the binder and will be distributed to members of the legislature at once. The report has heretofore been quite fully outlined. The volume is a valuable one of 748 pages. The part of the report dealing with the Iowa State college at Ames has been modified in accordance with the understanding reached between the trustees and the board. Chapter two of the report on state farms contains much interesting matter relating to the state farms. Attention is called to the fact that the amount of land owned by the state in connection with its institutions is very small. This leads the board to say: "But evidently those on whom evolved the duty of securing land for state institutions did not realize the possibilities of the future, and in this respect they were not different from others, for who could have foretold forty or fifty years ago that land subject to entry at $1.25 an acre, would at the opening of the twentieth century be in demand at prices ranging from $40 to $80, and even more per acre.

The educational legislation sought by the teachers of the state at this session of the general assembly was set in motion at a meeting of the legislative committee of the Iowa State Teachers' association at the Savery. Approval was given by the committee to measures allowing graduates of institutions of required standard licenses to teach; to a compulsory education bill; to a bill for the establishment of rural high schools; the consolidation of rural independent districts into school townships, and the transportation of pupils in such townships; to the idea contained in the bill providing for the election of the city superintendent for a fixed term of office; to the establishment of more normal schools, and to several other educational propositions. The members of the committee at the meeting were Superintendent A. W. Stuart of Ottumwa, Superintendent S. H. Sheakley of Des Moines, chairman of the committee, Prof. J. J. McConnell of Cedar Falls and Superintendent O. J. McManus of Council Bluffs. Superintendent Barrett was also present at the meeting.

Mrs. Evelyn H. Belden, of Sioux City, has arrived in Des Moines and taken charge of the opening work for suffrage in the legislature. She will be here several days and will assist Miss Daisy Deighton, of Shenandoah, in getting acquainted with the members. She will also assist in the preliminary work, using her influence to secure the appointment of men on the constitutional amendments committee who are known to not be prejudiced against suffrage. It is not her intention to be here all of the session, but she will be here from time to time. She did not intend to be here at all, but was sent for by the workers here in order to assist in getting the work started.

A novel system of adornment for rooms has been perfected by a London Electrician. The walls are lined with panels of transparent glass, which are faced with well-known pictures, through which filters subdued electric light. The effect is the same as the light of a stained glass window, and is quite artistic. There is no glare, and the pictures can be chosen according to the taste of the owner of the room.

GIANT ENGINE EXPLODES.

Blowing Up of Boiler Causes Wreck on Rock Island Road.

Des Moines, Jan. 20.—Rock Island train No. 5, composed of three sleepers, two chair cars, two day coaches and a mail and baggage car, was wrecked between the switches at Victor, twenty miles west of Marengo, Saturday morning, by the exploding of the boiler while running at rapid speed. Engineer William Williams and Fireman Wilbur Hoar, both of Rock Island, were instantly killed. The body of the former was found afterward, lying by the side of the track about three coach lengths from where the train left the track, with a section of the cross-head weighting him down, while Hoar was discovered in the tank, with portions of the cab frame lying upon his body.

The engine, No. 1413, of 100-ton weight, was one of the recent improved type of locomotives procured for its passenger service by the Rock Island. The train was due to pass Victor at 5:56 a. m., but was behind time, Engineer Williams, who had seen twenty-eight years' service with the company, was crowding the big machine to move up abreast the schedule by the time he arrived at Brooklyn. The engine had passed the station, but was yet within the switches when there was a terrific detonation, a sudden cessation of the speed energy, a jolting of the trucks on the ties, and apparent application of the air, and the six sleepers and coaches anead bolted the track and pitching forward and sidewise, rolled down an embankment. The third soach from the rear stood quartering, with the forward trucks at the base of the embankment and the hind ones on the rails. Two coaches remained on the rails. None of the passengers were injured and aside from the deaths of the engineer and firemen only Baggageman Shaffer and two porters received severe bruises.

EDITORS ORGANIZE.

Meet at Des Moines and Perfect a State Organization.

Des Moines, Jan. 18.—At the Northeastern Iowa Press association which met in Waterloo in November, it was decided to hold a meeting in Des Moines inauguration week to be attended by the officers of the various district press associations for the purpose of organizing a state association.

This meeting was held in the club rooms of the Savery. Twenty officers and members of the various associations were present. The meeting was presided over by Sam. G. Sloan of Charles City, W. F. Parrott of Waterloo acting as secretary.

Among the matters that were discussed was the necessity for better laws for the protection of publishers and it was decided that the officers who were elected today confer with the legislative committee relative to drafting a bill for submission to the legislature. The old state press association took annual excursions and at least once a year got together for a social session. It was definitely decided that this feature should be continued and a program will be prepared at the next meeting to be held at the call of the president.

The following officers of state association were elected: President, C. M. Junkin, of Fairfield; vice president, Emory H. English, Valley Junction; secretary, W. F. Parrott, Waterloo; treasurer, Howard W. Tedford, Mt. Ayr.

Executive committee—C. M. Junkin, B. Murphy, W. F. Parrott, A. W. Adams and Phil. Hoffman.

ASK FOR QUARTER MILLION.

St. Louis Exposition Commission Formulates Demands.

Des Moines, Jan. 18.—The St. Louis exposition commission at a meeting held in Des Moines yesterday decided to ask the legislature to appropriate $250,000 for the erection of a building and making a display at the fair at St. Louis. There was some discussion as to the amount, some favoring not asking for so much, but the great majority being in favor of $250,000, which was finally decided upon. A legislative committee was named, consisting of W. H. Berry, of Indianola; Samuel Mahon, of Ottumwa; Thos. Stivers, of Burlington; J. J. Hartenbower, of Des Moines; G. M. Curtis, of Clinton; E. H. Hunter, of Des Moines; S. M. Leach, of Adel; A. B. Funk, of Spirit Lake; E. P. Heizer, of Sioux City; C. T. Hancock, of Dubuque. This committee will draft a bill to be presented to the legislature and will work for its passage.

Mettie Given His Liberty.

Cedar Rapids, Jan. 16.—Charles Mettie, who was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary at Anamosa for attempting to blow up the home of Attorney Cron, has been pardoned by Governor Shaw after serving eighteen months.

Dick Williams Convicted.

Oskaloosa, Jan. 20.—The jury in the case against Dick Williams for shooting Wm. Sharper, at Buxton, five weeks ago, returned a verdict of murder in the first degree and recommended punishment by death.

Blind in a Night.

Nichols, Jan. 18.—F. M. Nelson of this place, at night noticed something wrong with his eyesight, and in the morning he was totally blind. Specialists do not seem to understand the cause of his sudden blindness.

OFFICERS TAKE THE OATH

CUMMINS AND HERRIOTT ASSUME THEIR NEW DUTIES.

Thousands Watched the Progress of the Parade From the State House to the Auditorium.

Des Moines, Jan. 17.—At ten minutes after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon A. B. Cummins of Des Moines and John Herriott of Stuart took the oath as governor and lieutenant governor of Iowa and their predecessors, Leslie M. Shaw of Denison and J. C. Milliman of Logan, retired from office and became private citizens. The exercises accompanying the induction into office of Mr. Cummins and Mr. Herriott were characterized by unusual brilliancy and a due degree of the pomp and circumstance that obtains on such occasions, even on the democratic soil of Iowa.

The day's programme, consisted of a parade from the capitol to the Auditorium, exercises at the Auditorium, including Governor Cummins' inaugural address, and a reception at the state house in the evening. In addition to these was the formal assumption of office by Lieutenant Governor John Herriott, following the farewell address and retirement of Lieutenant Governor Milliman.

The exercises were carried out in the midst of perfect weather and in the presence of great crowds of enthusiastic spectators gathered from Des Moines and from all quarters of the state.

The military features of the day were imposing. The battalion that took part in the parade contained four of the crack companies of the state in addition to the local company. The starting of the parade from the state house was accompanied by inspiring ceremonies. The senators and representatives assembled in their respective chambers at 1:15 and thence at 1:30 proceeded through the east door of the capitol to carriages in waiting. At the head of the procession walked Governor Shaw and Governor-elect Cummins. The battalion of troops had been drawn up along Eleventh street facing the state house. As the two distinguished citizens walked side by side down the state house steps, the trumpets sounded loud and clear the general's march, and the troops saluted by coming to a present arms. The colors were dipped, and shortly afterward the first gun of a general's salute of seventeen guns re-echoed from Scott's Heights, south of the capitol.

The troops were then moved to Ninth street and Grand avenue and the carriages were filled as rapidly as possible by the members of the assemly and others who were to take part in the parade.

The parade from the state house through the principal business streets immediately preceding the inaugural ceremonies at the Auditorium was one of the most pretentious ever seen in Des Moines. Thousands of people thronged the streets along the line of march and waited patiently for an hour in the biting weather for the parade to pass.

Governor Cummins and Governor Shaw returned to the state house together. They were taken there in Charles E. Rawson's carriage, drawn by the four-in-hand that had driven them to the Auditorium. Governor Cummins remained in the office of the chief executive for an hour or more. A number of his friends called and extended their congratulations. Governor Shaw, after remaining in the chief executive's office for a short time, left the state house.

TWO SENATORS NAMED

UNANIMOUS ACTION BY REPUBLICAN JOINT CAUCUS.

Each made a Brief Address Expressive of His Appreciative of Honor.

Des Moines, Jan. 15.—The joint caucus of the republicans of the house and senate of the Twenty-ninth general assembly, held in the hall of the house of representatives last evening, by a unanimous vote nominated William B. Allison and Jonathan P. Dolliver to succeed themselves in the United States senate. The honor conferred upon Senator Allison is unprecedented. He was nominated for the sixth consecutive term. Senator Blanchard placed Senator Allison in nomination and Senator Hubbard presented the name of Senator Dolliver. There were several seconding speeches in each case.

Both Allison and Dolliver spoke briefly after their nominations, expressing gratitude for the trust reposed in them. Senator Allison spoke with specially deep feeling and referred earnestly to the weighty problems which confront the government and the responsibilities which confront the members of the senate.

The caucus, in addition to renominating Bernard Murphy for state printer and Howard Tedford for state binder, nominated John R. Carter of Sioux City for editor of the code supplement.

Pleads Guilty to Charge of Murder

Iowa Falls, Jan. 18.—Hardin county will be spared the cost of an expensive murder trial by Lane, the Alden murderer, pleading guilty to the charge of murder in the first degree. This was agreed upon by the attorney for the state, and no effort will be made to convict the man on the first charge brought against him. He is advanced in years and his sentence will probably mean for life. He will be sentenced by Judge Whitaker next Tuesday. Lane was charged with the murder of his wife near Alden last fall. He also attempted to kill his son-in-law, but was unsuccessful. He was under the influence of liquor at the time.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, Jan 14.—Senate.—The feature of the morning session of the senate was the discussion which arose over the Bruce-Emmert contest. Senator Ball, one of the leading democratic members, brought the matter up in an effort to give Senator Emmert, a democrat and the present incumbent, an opportunity to file an answer before the special committee to whom the contest papers of James Bruce, republican contestant, have been referred. Senator Hubbard and other republicans at first thought this an effort on the part of the democrats to cause a delay in the consideration of the matter, but after some discussion it was found that Senator Ball's only idea was to give Senator Emmert a fair showing, and the matter was agreeably adjusted by the adoption of a resolution referring the contest to a special committee and providing for the filing of an answer by Senator Emmert with this committee. The only other matter of importance was the adoption of a concurrent resolution, providing for a recess of three days when the assembly adjourns Thursday afternoon for the inauguration ceremonies.

Joint Session.—A scene such as has not been witnessed in Iowa for a third of a century was presented in the house chamber today when Governor Shaw read his message to the two houses assembled in joint convention. Through the efforts of the governor's friends, who considered it would be a fitting tribute to the man who is about to be secretary of the treasury, the governor was extended an invitation to personally present his message before the joint convention instead of merely filing it, as has been the practice since the time of Governor Stone. Senators Allison and Dolliver were present.

The governor's message is a brief, tersely worded document. The reading of it took but a half hour. Yet it covered a wide field. Among its salient features are recommendations for conservatism in appropriations; that any additional buildings erected be of a permanent nature; that the recommendations of the capitol improvement commission be carried out; that adequate appropriations be made for the St. Louis exposition and the Vicksburg monuments; that the governor's salary be raised to $5,000; that the bond of the state treasurer be increased and the state pay the cost of bonds of state officers; that interest be required on state funds; that legislation against child labor be enacted; that more normal schools be established; that centralization of rural schools be furthered, and that the bureau of labor statistics be clothed with plenary powers.

The governor recommended such modification of the statutes as will permit the board of review to adjust the assessment of all property, including railways, at the same time. He indorses the parole system and devotes considerable space to explaining and upholding it. He indorses the recommendation of the board of control that the state architect be relieved from designing educational buildings, and in view of the change in the boundaries between Iowa and Nebraska, caused by the wavering of the Missouri river, he advises that a boundary commission be authorized. The thorough inspection and labeling of linseed oil is urged. Brief space is given to memorials of Senator Gear and President McKinley.

The session then proceeded to canvass the vote on governor and lieutenant governor. The discovery of an error of 1,000 votes in the official returns from Dallas county on lieutenant governor brought proceedings to a sudden stop. The mistake gives G. E. Furgeson, democrat, 1,815 votes when he is entitled to only 815. The result of it was the adjournment of the joint body until 2 o'clock tomorrow in order that the error might be corrected.

Des Moines, Jan. 15.—Senate.—A resolution providing for four policemen, three clerks in the document room, twelve janitors, three elevator tenders, two assistant bill clerks, one clerk in the supply department and a mail carrier, was adopted. Papers in the Crawford-Nolan contest case, from Dubuque county, were ordered filed with the special committee already provided for. Adjourned.

House.—Senate resolution providing for additional employes was adopted. Kendall of Monroe introduced a resolution providing that no appropriation measure should be considered by the house unless indorsed by three-fourths vote of the members, providing such measure was not presented before February 20. It went over. The message of the governor on pardons was presented to the house.

Joint Session.—The house and senate met in joint convention at 2:30 p. m. and concluded the canvass of the vote on governor and lieutenant governor. The vote was found to be as follows: On governor: For A. B. Cummins, 226,802; for T. J. Phillips, 143,783; for A. U. Coats, 15,659; for James Baxter, 3,463; for L. H. Weller, 780; for E. H. Conger, 1; scattering, 1; total, 390,489. On lieutenant governor—For John Herriott, 227,171; for G. E. Ferguson, 142,588; for A. B. Wray, 13,095; for W. A. Jacobs, 3,391; for Perry Engle, 766; total, 387,011.

Des Moines, Jan. 16.—Senate.—The senate session this morning was devoted entirely to a farewell of Lieutenant Governor Milliman, who has been presiding officer of that body during the last two sessions. The following resolution was adopted by a rising vote:

"Resolved, That our sincere thanks be, and the same are hereby, most cordially tendered to Lieutenant Governor J. C. Milliman for the able, efficient and kindly manner in which he has presided during the opening days of the Twenty-Ninth general assembly.

"We recognize that he possesses the indispensable attributes of a valuable public officer, among which are honesty, ability and faithfulness.

"Realizing that his duties as president of this senate will terminate this day, we extend to him our good wishes for his future prosperity and happiness.'

During consideration of the resolution Senator Porter occupied the chair and addresses were made by Senators Harriman, Lambart, Junkin, Ball, Blanchard, Crossley, Garst, Hayward, Molsberry, Bishop, Tallman, Lister, and Trewin.

After the ceremonies attending the inauguration the senate reassembled. Lieutenant Governor Milliman called the senate to order and, after a brief address, presented his successor, Lieutenant Governor Herriott, and conducted him to the president's chair. The retiring lieutenant governor spoke as follows:

Senators: At the beginning of the session of the Twenty-seventh general assembly the state treasurer was burdened with an indebtedness of nearly $450,000, while you begin the work of the Twenty-ninth assembly with a surplus of over $600,000. The wise and compreheisive measures enacted by the two last assemblies, together with the faithful discharge of duty by the executive officers of the state, have wrought this remarkable change, and these facts are mentioned at this time that we may remember that all things desirable and necessary may be accomplished by the untied action of unselfish, determined men. During the period now under consideration partisan spirit and local interests have been subordinated to the public good, and it is due to the distinguished gentlemen composing the general assembly that their good work be thus noted. The past is history, the present ripe in opportunity, the future laden with possibilities.

Senators, I cannot sever my relations with you without attempting to express to you my sense of gratitude for the kindness and forbearance shown me during my four years of service as president of the senate. When I recall how patiently each senator has overlooked my shortcomings and how promptly one and all have approved such rulings as were helpful in the dispatch of business, I am persuaded that nowhere may be found abler and more courteous gentlemen. I retire from responsible office of president of the senate of Iowa with sentiments of admiration and friendship toward every senator who has during such service been a member of this body. Not one has been unkind, and not one has failed in doing his duty to the state and his constituency. It is due to you that I say, "Well done, servants of the people," for in my position it was given me to know of your work.

Of future legislation by you I feel no apprehension, and trust the future in your private lives may bring much of success and happiness and little of suffering and sadness which so often fall to the lot of man.

Emotions too deep for utterance and too delicate for expression crowd upon me, and I ask you to read in my eyes as I look into your faces and from my handclasps as I bid you good-bye, the benediction of friendship and love known only among manly men. May the blessing of heaven attend you always.

Lieutenant Governor Herriott's address to the senate after taking the chair was as follows:

Senators: In entering upon the duties of this high office with which the suffrages of my fellow citizens have honored me, it is both a duty and a pleasure to acknowledge the uniform courtesy extended my by your retiring president, Lieutenant Governor J. C. Milliman, and by the members of the senate in the incoming days of the session. Even though I have not been able always to indicate a favorable response to your requests or desires, your courtesy has notwithstanding been no less considerate. It is, I assure you, my sincere wish that my conduct as your presiding officer will not alienate your good will.

It is, however, but prudence for me to ask for leniency in your judgments as it has fallen to my lot to be concerned with business affairs and administrative duties and but little with parliamentary bodies and their procedure. If, therefore, it happens that I occasionally go far afield in my rulings I ask that the presumption of good intention be accorded me. I shall do my best to expedite business and deal fairly with you and among you.

Shall we proceed with business?

No business of importance was transacted and the senate adjourned till Tuesday.

House.—After a spirited debate and after several unsuccessful attempts to amend, the Kendall resolution introduced yesterday, providing that all bills carrying appropriations should be introduced before February 20, except by a three-quarters vote, was passed by the house this morning. The passage of this resolution was the feature of the session, and the only important work done by either house during the day. The object of this resolution is to get all bills before the appropriation committee at the earliest possible date, that they may be reported back by the committee and time given the house for a full discussion of the measures. Ex-Governor Larrabee was present during the session this morning and was introduced to the house. He spoke briefly, not desiring to interrupt the discussion on the Kendall resolution then pending.

The house adjourned until 1:15 and then convened preparatory to the joint session. It met to adjourn after the inaugural observances. The house like the senate, yesterday accepted an invitation of the trustees of the state normal school to attend the dedication of the new building at Cedar Falls January 30.

BOMB AMONG METHODISTS.

Infalibility of the Bible Is Denied by Professor Pearson.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Prof. Chas. W Pearson of the chair of English literature in Northwestern University, which is conducted under Methodist auspices, has thrown a bomb into the ranks of Methodism in Evanston, by giving out for publication a statement of his belief that biblical infalibility is a superstitious and hurtful tradition; the bibical stories of Christ's bringing the dead to life, of His walking on the water and feeding the multitude with the loaves and fishes are mere poetic fancies, incredible and untrue.

Prof. Pearson declares that the policy of the Methodist church is one of inactivity, obstruction and jesuitical silence on the views in which the leaders and scholars of the church have gradually become to believe, but which are not held by the body of the church. He says that most of the present teaching is evasive and that most of the Sunday school teaching is almost farcial and inadequate.

MARY THE MAID OF THE INN....

A Story of English Life.

By JOSEPH HATTON.

CHAPTER XI.—(Continued.)

There was something so melancholy, so dejected in the young man's manner, something so forlorn, that Jack's attention was riveted upon his face, and the next moment he was in the grip of Foster, who had sprung upon him from behind and pinned him to the floor, his hand upon his throat, before Jack had time to realize what had happened.

Parker had suddenly come to Jack's aid, and Foster the next moment was as helpless as Jack had been.

"It was his own fault," said Parker, "you should not trifle with desperate men."

His blood boiling at the treachery of Foster, Jack struck him a blow in the face that sent him staggering to the other end of the room, and brought in the landlord.

"It is nothing," said Parker, "only a little tussle for a wager.

"That's all," said the coward Foster, wiping the blood from his face.

"Hand over your pistols to your companion," said Jack, addressing Foster, when the landlord had disappeared, "and sit over yonder. I can trust Parker, and don't mind if he does pistol me; he has done worse to me, and might as well finish his work; but you, you God forsaken coward, I'll tear thee limb from limb if we come together once again."

Foster handed his pistols to Parker, who laid them upon the table and said: "Young man, there is no word bad enough in your mouth for you to use against me; I am all you have called my companion, but the difference between us is, that I suffer from remorse and he does not; that I did love, do love, and shall love to the last, the woman who has had the misfortune to meet me on my way to commit—not the murder of Bellingham, but the robbery."

"Bellingham!" exclaimed Jack, "was it Bellingham! Great God! One of the best and bravest men in the whole country! Was it Bellingham! What have I done in all my life that Fate should place you in my hands, and that I should be bound to let you go."

"Then you did not know who the man was?"

"Not I, nor she; it was enough for her that murder had been done and that you were implicated."

"How did she know that?"

"By your hat."

"Well," said Barker, for the first time deeply interested, "and how came she to see the hat?"

"She was in the abbey; you passed her hiding place carrying the body. Your hat fell at her feet; she picked it up."

"She in the abbey," exclaimed Parker.

"Yes, beneath the elder tree in the aisle."

"When we passed carrying the body?"

"Yes," said Jack. "It was a wager; they said she durst not go to the abbey in the storm. She went; she was standing by a favorite seat of hers when she heard voices, saw what I have said, and, knowing you to be one of the—well—murderers, she had faith enough in me—in me, of all men—to be her messenger to you to warn you from the country, to get you beyond the seas. And now my job is done; she'll know all in good time as it is done. And so I wish you good-night."

"Stay a moment," said Parker, detaining him. "But I can send her no message by you; I will take it myself."

"Then you'll swing for it, I make no doubt," said Jack. "I've no more to say." Whereupon he strode out of the room as he came, went into the bar, called for a drink, had his horse refreshed with a warm mash, and rode away.

"It's all up, Foster. Save yourself, don't mind me. Fate is against us."

"Your own cursed folly," said Foster.

"Yes, the folly that trusted the word of a liar such as you," responded the remorseful confederate. "Begone, Foster, or I may do you mischief; save yourself. Give no further thought of me."

"Shall I go alone?"

"Alone, or with what other company you choose; but without me."

"Your share of the money," said Foster. "I am not quite so bad as you make me. Here it is."

"Keep it, Foster. I honor in you that one emotion of honesty. Forgive me if I seem to suggest you are worse than I."

"It is the pot calling the kettle black," said Foster. "But no matter, I'll keep the money in trust for you; if I get free, follow me to France and hear of me at the Cafe d'Or, in the Latin quarter of Paris."

"Yes; good-by," said Parker, putting out his hand. "Report me well to the boys; bid them seek fresh occupation, or a better leader than Gentleman Dick."

"Good-bye, and a better frame of mind to you," was all Foster said, as he left the room, went to the stable, ordered his horse, paid his bill, and started on his way, glad to get outside the maudlin influence of Parker, and not a little delighted to be master of the plunder for which they had murdered "one of the best fellows," as Jack had declared, "in all the country."

CHAPTER XII.

The trial at York of Richard Parker for the wilful murder of Stephen Bellingham was one of the most exciting events of the March Assizes for the East Riding of Yorkshire. Richard Parker was known by several aliases; his training and education, his courtly manners, his handsome face and figure had all been themes of admiration even occasionally with the ladies whose coaches he had stopped. It was also known that it was his boast that he had not only never shed blood, but had vowed he never would except in the last extremity of self-defense. At the same time he was known to be mixed up with a gang of plunderers who were less scrupulous than he; and many deeds of desperation were laid to their charge, and more particularly to the charge of the confederate Foster, whose complicity with the abbey murder was now a matter of public notoriety.

Locally the affair had many points of absorbing interest. Mary, the Maid ofthe Inn, was a pathetic figure in the story, and the name of Jack Meadows was on every lip. It had been rumored that his conduct in the awful business was more or less compromising.

The fact that the principal witness against Parker was his sweetheart Mary (who would have gladly laid her life down for him rather than compromised his safety), gave to the trial its most dramatic interest.

Mary, her uncle, Morley, Jack Meadows, Jack's mother, and brother, a gouty old fellow of 60, were a party by themselves in charge of the clerk to the solicitor who had got up the defense, and they were accommodated at a little inn near the river, whence they had a picturesque, but, to them, very gloomy view of the castle where Richard Parker was imprisoned, where he would also be tried, and where in all probability he would be hanged; for, apart from the murder of Bellingham, there were other charges, which only awaited the result of the verdict in this case to be formulated against him as the authorities might think necessary or desirable.

It was not likely that the prisoner who had captured poor Mary's heart would leave the Castle of York alive.

Meanwhile Richard Parker had been placed at the bar. Counsel had told the tragic story of Bellingham's death, and indicated the nature of the evidence that would be sworn against the prisoner, and had further called upon the jury to dismiss from their minds any romantic or prejudiced influence which might have taken possession of them arising out of the stories which had been circulated in connection with this case, and the attachment that had sprung up between the prisoner and the young woman, who, as if by the interposition of Divine providence, had been made the chief witness against him.

Then witnesses had been called touching the murder, the discovery of the body, the appearance of Parker and Foster in the neighborhood; the conduct of Mary Lockwood on the night of the murder; her interview with Meadows; his presence at the Heather-bell Inn, in company with Foster and Parker; what the landlord overheard, and the strange, obstinate refusal of the prisoner to seek safety in flight until he had seen and said good-by to Mary Lockwood; together with his arrest at the very door of the Star and Garter, and his saying good-by to her not as he had hoped a free man, but a prisoner in the hands of the constable of Kirkstall and his assistants.

At this point of the case, John Meadows was called. He was considerably harassed by the learned counsel for the prosecution, who was more than once reminded even by the court that he had no right to treat his own witness as hostile; but the learned counsel's ire had been raised somehow by the witness's fearless obstinacy, and his examination in chief gradually assumed the offensive character of the severe cross-examination of not only an unwilling, but an untruthful witness.

Having taken the witness through a brief narrative of his first seeing the prisoner at the Star and Garter, and getting from him an account of his having seen Stephen Bellingham, the murdered man, there, the examination proceeded as follows:

"You knew the victim of this cruel murder?"

"'Squire Bellingham," said the witness.

"Yes," said the learned counsel; "he was well known in the district."

"Yes."

"Known to be rich?"

"Yes."

"Rich and eccentric?"

"I don't know as to that."

"He carried large sums of money about him?"

"I've heard so."

"Was not afraid of highwaymen?"

"He was a brave man," said Jack.

"Yes, he was a brave man and rich? That was his reputation?"

"Yes."

"And you saw him at the Star and Garter the night when the man Foster, of whom we have heard, and the prisoner at the bar arrived at Kirkstall?"

"I saw him, but not them; I heard of them the next day."

"Yes, we cannot take that; but it is of no consequence. You saw the witness, Mary Lockwood, on the night of the murder."

"I don't know as it was on the night of the murder."

"What night was it?"

"I forget."

"You forget?"

"Yes."

"Did she not give you a message to the prisoner?"

"A message?" echoed the witness.

"Yes, a message. Are you deaf?"

"Well, not particularly," Meadows replied.

"On the 20th of October did not Mary Lockwood give you a message to the prisoner at the bar?"

"I have a bad memory for dates."

"Do you think if you took your place beside the prisoner at the bar it would improve your memory?" The learned counsel asked this question with some ferocity, and was understood in a low key to say something about an accessory after the fact, which sent a thrill of anxiety through a little company of friends who were following every word that fell from Jack with intense interest.

"A man cannot be hanged because he has got a bad memory," said Jack defiantly.

"I'm not so sure of that," said the judge, with something of a chuckle. "Listen to me. You had better answer this learned counsel without attempting to prevaricate; answer to the best of your ability; that is all the court requires from you."

"Yes, my lord," said Jack.

"And the learned counsel should not require to be reminded that he is treating his own witness in a very unusual manner."

"I note your lordship's kind remark," said the learned gentleman, but without relaxing the severity of his manner. "On any night within the year—I will make it easy for you—did Mary Lockwood send a message by you to the prisoner at the bar?"

"She has not denied it," said the judge, now addressing counsel as if to suggest that he should not waste time.

"Yes, my lord, I thank you," and, turning once more to the witness, "I will only ask you one or two more questions. You were at the Heather-bell tavern on the 22d of October?"

"I don't remember the date."

"Do you deny that you were there at any time?"

"Well, no, I don't."

"You would if you could, eh?"

"Yes, I would."

"Oh, you would! Why?" Here counsel for the defense rose to protest against this line of examination.

There was a wrangle for ten minutes, and many legal books were mentioned that bore upon the law of evidence. Finally the learned counsel suggested to the witness to say that he did not reply to the question because he did not feel called upon to criminate himself, which was indorsed by the counsel for the defense. But Jack Meadows was made of obstinate stuff, and he had an idea that the counsel for the prosecution was endeavoring to make him say something against Mary, and that the other learned gentleman only desired to protect him out of a feeling of pity.

"You have heard what the learned counsel has said," remarked the judge, speaking to Jack, but looking in another direction, as judges very often do to this day; "you had better attend to his advice."

"Thank you, my lord."

"You decline to say whether you were with the prisoner at the Heather-bell tavern on the night of October 22 because you do not wish to incriminate yourself. Is that your answer?"

"No, it is not my answer! I am not afraid of incriminating myself."

"Oh, Jack, my dear Jack, for your mother's sake?" said an agonized voice in court.

"What is that?" asked the judge angrily.

"I'm his mother, my lord judge, and a kinder, better son never——"

"Yes, yes," said the judge, "that will do. You must not disturb the court, or it will be my duty to have you removed.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Kanawha

From the Record:

Foster & Peterson will soon build a house for Mrs. H. P. Johnson on the old Drew postoffice farm.

J. M. Beardslee is drawing the plan for the United Lutheran church building. It will be 30x44 ft., 16-ft. posts, and a 70-ft. spire, resembling the Westlake church.

If some of Kanawha's friends will induce a shoemaker—a good one—to locate here, they will receive the blessings of many who are very anxious to have their souls saved.

A farmer by the name of Spittler, who lived northwest of Corwith, died in the caboose of a freight train in that town Wednesday. He was subject to heart disease and over-exerted himself in running to the train.

The stock of goods owned by Louis Haefner has been sold to S. S. Nelson, the invoice now taking place. Mr. Nelson has been farming, but last fall bought residence property in town with the intention of going into business. About the same lines of goods will be kept as heretofore.

A Profitable Inuestment.

"I was troubled for about seven years with my stomach and in bed half my time," says E. Demick, Somerville, Ind. "I spent about $1.000 and never could get anything to help me until I tried Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. I have taken a few bottles and am entirely well." You don't live oy what you eat, but y what you digest and assimilate. If your stomach doesn't digest your food you are really starving. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does the stomach's work by digesting your food. You don't have to diet. Eat all you want. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles. J.L.Harr.

Hats Off!

Rev. Shoemaker did a notable act on Sabbath evening when he asked about five hundred ladies to remove their hats to accomodate five hundred men, says the Iowa Falls Sentinel. Why the ladies keep on such occular impediments during church services is truly a mystery. We see dead birds and their feathers scattered along the sidewalk almost daily, and we have not as yet heard that any man was enraptured by such a sight. If you want to show men how much you can carry on your heads why don't you get an Uncle Tom's Cabin or a ship of the fifteenth century, or better yet, big pitchers of water. In this way you might, at some importune time, be of service to some humble man. If some of the maids are bald headed and are afraid of exposing their upteriors to the fatal pangs of nature, let them call at our humb e office any time and we shall loan them one of our wigs. In the opera house they are obliged to remove all outlandish headgear, then why not in the church?

GREAT OPPURTUNITIES

The Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Norther Railway Company is nearing the completion of it's 140 miles of new extensions in the very richest portion of Southwestern Minnesota. The six new towns, Reading, Wilmont, Lismore, Kenneth, Waters and Conger are rapidly becoming commercial centers for the rich and allready thickly settled country surrounding. There has been no "Auction sale of lots" or any attempt to "Boom" these towns; their growth being the result of a demand for convenient markets.

It is the purpose of the railway company to encourage the continuous substantial growth of the towns on their lines. In order that each town may receive the attention of "ownership." it has been decided to sell each town entire, including all unplatted land to private parties. For terms of such purchases, address the undersigned. For business openings or purchase of lots address the Town Lot Agent of the respective town.

A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmer Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

Brackett has just come to the conclusion that Roosevelt will not be elected president of the United States, having drawn his conclusion from Roosevelt's reprimand of Miles. The Democrat dug up an account of the "scrap" out of some democratic paper and as usual was about a month behind the times with the "news."

J. W. Waterman, a jeweler, has purchased the Krouse property recently vacated by Chas. Bracher, and moved up here from Benton county last week. Mr. Waterman is an experienced jeweler, and will work at that trade here. We welcome this family to Klemme, and wish Mr. Waterman success in his business here.

The Corwith Hustler jumps onto the Kanawha Record, because the Record thinks it should have at least a small part of the county printing. It is easy to see that the Hustler gets its share, and hasn't any kick coming, but like the official papers, it don't want any one else to get any county work. Verily, it is a one-sided business, and of course the favored few are well satisfied.

Herman Kipp and Herman Theiman called at this office yesterday and showed us a monstrous chicken hawk which Mr. Kipp shot on the Theiman place yesterday morning It was the largest of its kind that we have ever seen, and we believe it would be hard to beat around these parts. It measures good and strong five feet from tip to tip of its wings. Mr. Kipp shot it with a 32-rifle at a distance of over 100 yards.

The fire company have been circulating a subscription paper this week asking for donations from our citizens, the money to be used in fixing up a wagon for carrying the ladders. This is a worthy enterprise and all property owners should respond liberally. If they don't the time may come when they will wish they had. Better spend a small sum for fire protection than to see your property go up in smoke. Now is the time to act in the matter. The fire boys are working hard to give Klemme the best fire protection possible and they should be encouraged.

GOV. CUMMINS' ADDRESS

ELOQUENT ADDRESS DELIVERED AT DES MOINES

THE GOVERNOR SUGGESTS NEEDED CHANGES IN TARIFF.

The Government Should Take a Hand in Settling the Labor Problem.

Suggests Many Changes in the Law Governing Railway Taxation.

Senators, Representatives and Fellow Citizens: I gratefully acknowledge my deep appreciation of the confidence and goodwill of my fellow men, and I am solemnly conscious of the obligations I have undertaken and the responsibilities I have assumed.

The honor of the office I now enter is outranked by but one of all the places of trust and distinction known to the institutions of the public; and if its duties were as difficult as its honor is great, I would have little hope of discharging them either to your satisfaction or my own; but, happily for you and for me, government in this state has attained a climax of steadiness which gives me courage to begin the work so generously committed to my hands. While the problems of organized society are not less intricate here than elsewhere, and while lawbreaking is not unknown to us, it is still true that the ease with which the laws are executed in this state is a superb testimonial to the sound character of its people. The men and women of Iowa are, I believe, beyond all their fellows, either of this country or any other, law abiding; yielding that implicit and instinctive obedience to the ordinances of both God and man, which makes the enforcement of statutes, the preservation of peace and the maintenance of order a task so light in comparison with the labor attending the duties of a chief executive in many parts of the world, that one may, with confidence and hope, take up the work incident to the office with which I have been injested.

In common with all of you, I share the pride which has become the habitual garb of the citizens of this state. We would indeed be insensible to the natural sentiments of patriotic humanity if our hearts did not expand with pleasurable emotions under the influences which surround us. Our beloved state has barely passed the pioneer period of its development, and yet it occupies a position, in all the affairs of the republic, so commanding and so honorable that its sister commonwealths, without envy or jealousy, graciously yield to Iowa a pre-eminence that it modestly accepts and will zealously hold . It is fast becoming an established maxim that of the things men most want, Iowa has the most to give. With an empire of farms, which, taken as a whole, never have had, nor can have, a parallel on the face of the earth—farms whose productions can be multiplied again and again without serious strain upon the enduring strength of their fertile fields; with a population steady in growth and permanent in character, prosperous beyond description and as well defended against the uncertainties of the future as the imagination can conceive; with poverty and ignorance reduced to their minimum; with education and intelligence universally diffused; with a love of country in every heart, and the weapons of industry in every hand; with a genius for the science of government, leading as well in congress as in cabinet; with a growing tendency toward the best forms of learning, and the noblest ideals in social and civic life, it is small wonder that prosperity reaches its highest level, progress its most uniform pace, content its serenest phase, and happiness its most perfect expression, in Iowa. Without disparaging the splendid accomplishments of other states, it can truthfully be said that the world can present no fairer destiny for the human race than may justly be predicted for the men and women whose homes will beautify and enrich this garden of the world.

It is with mingled sentiments of pride and gratitude I speak of the republic and the conditions which surround and sustain its citizens. Governments may rise and fall, nations may appear and disappear, races may develop and wither away, but we have established one proposition that will never again be doubted. The student of statecraft will hereafter always assume that a republic may be free, just, strong, and enduring. We have solved the problem for all time and our people will be renowned in all ages for the splendor of the period in which the demonstration has been made.

The story of the marvelous transition from the puny power of colonial days to the puissant strength we now exercise, is in every memory, and need not be retold. The magical development in material things which has raised us above all the nations of the earth, has been the theme of so many an oratorical epic that the echo of the song is always in our ears. The wonderful prosperity of the people is a theme so fascinating that we rest continually under its charm and detail only makes the romance sordid. The maintenance of our high standard of manhood, so essential to the preservation of free institutions, is so manifest and satisfying that the evidences of our senses needs no supplement.

I therefore check a natural tendency to fall into the language of eulogy, and content myself with these plain statements. The men and women of the United States have reached a higher point in the pathway of progress morally, intellectually and socially than was ever before touched by the human race; they are the creators of a mightier physical and material development than was ever before known; and they have established and now maintain a government that has more liberty, justice and improvement in it than any other government that the world has ever seen.

These observations, however, do not mean that we have finished the fight. The years to come have victories to be won and will be crowded with opportunities to be embraced. I turn from an inspiring retrospect to a hopeful future.

It is eminently appropriate upon this occasion to review some of the duties of citizenship, to re-examine some of the questions which engage the public mind, and to again resolve to promote with our utmost endeavor the cause of good government. The experience of the world establishes beyond controversy that nothing is more helpful in the solution of the problems of state and nations, than constant discussion of the plans suggested for the reform and betterment of the rules of society. It is unfortunately as common, as it is unpatriotic, to sneer at the idea of reform and to deride the reformer; but the sneers and derision proceed either from a corrupt heart or an unthinking mind. Reform and betterment in laws are as essential to the advance of the republic as is the growth in its industrial life. I therefore make no apology for the belief that many of the questions propounded to us by the evolution of the time have not been adequately answered. On the other hand, he who predicates his demand for change upon the hypothesis that what we have is wholly bad and proposes overthrow rather than a gradual approach toward higher efficiency in government, is a superficial agitator, who dooms himself to defeat by ignoring the fundamental law of mankind. The true friend of progress recognizes that what we have is good, but perceives that we may have better. He sees life and energy taken on, from time to time, new forms and phases; and he knows that government, to be just and effective, must adapt itself to the changing relations of men and the varying tendencies of the age. He understands that this generation has something more to do than to glorify the past and enjoy the fruits of its victories.

The rapid accumulation of wealth and its unparalleled concentration were the distinguishing characteristics of the last decade of the nineteenth century. These characteristics have propounded a new inquiry for governmental investigation. The subject has, by common consent, received a name which, though once appropriate, is now altogether misleading. Commercial combinations and industrial trusts have provoked much thought which, as yet, has produced little result. Originally they were, as the names imply, concerts of independent companies acting through agreements controlling the business of the several constituent parts. In that sense they have substantially disappeared, and there have been substituted for them incorporations that have become the absolute owners of the property and business affected by them. I shall not pause to inquire whether these vast incorporations are wise or unwise. The extinction of the independent trader, merchant and manufacturer may ultimately impair the standard of manhood so essential to free institutions. If this shall be its effect, we may deplore the tendency; but if it be wholly overcome, it will not be through the prohibition of government, but by that imperceptible warning which changes the currents of the world and teaches humanity to avoid approaching danger. I do not believe that the government can safely deny the right of association under established forms; nor am I ready to concede that industrial organizations, however large their capital or extend their operation, if competition remains, constitute a menace to the prosperity and welfare of the people. The motive which underlies the so-called trusts and combinations is apparent; it is the ordinary selfish desire to make money, coupled with the belief that it can be more readily, surely and largely made in that manner than by any other. I do not criticise the motive; for it is the mainspring of material progress, and to eliminate it would be to paralyze the arm of industry, fatal alike to ambition and improvement. The most manifest evil of these tremendous aggregations is their effect upon competition. Competition is the paramount law of industrial life. It may, and very often does, destroy; but in my judgment it must exist in full vigor if we do not desire the government to assume the power of fixing the prices of industrial products. It must be clear that if a single corporation owned and controlled all the transportation facilities of the United States, it would be absolutely necessary for the government to prescribe and enforce the rates for transportation service. It is equally clear that if a single corporation controlled the manufacture of the important commodities required by modern life, and the monopoly was likely to be long continued, it would be necessary for the government to fix the price at which such commodities should be sold. It cannot be successfully denied that every consolidation, even though it does not draw in all the products in which it deals, narrows the field of competition. There may be sharp and effective competition with two competitors; it is, however, not so likely as with a greater number. I have mentioned these things, not to indicate that I think there is a perfect remedy within our reach, for much must be remitted to the natural laws of individual enterprise; but rather to point out the lines along which interference is not only permissible, but demanded. First, the motive to organize such coporations could be, and should be, limited to the natural desire to make profit from the business in which the coporation is to engage. My observation leads me to believe that many of the large industrial combinations would not have been proposed or effected, had it not been for the knowledge that the promoters or organizers could make stupendous fortunes in the mere operation of consolidation. It is said, and I believe it to be true, that more than 50 percentum of the stock of every trade combination now in existence is pure fiction, and the opportunity to gamble upon the stock exchanges in worthless stocks has been uppermost in the minds of those who have been most active in bringing together these organizations. Every coporation should be required to have its capital stock paid for at par, in money, before it is authorized to transact business. The genius for deception has too often been accepted as legal tender for stock and it should be declared the counterfeit it is. The evil of over-capitalization has still another serious phase. It furnishes an illegitimate motive for excessive prices. It is perfectly natural for the managers of a corporation so organized to endeavor to pay dividends not only upon the real capital invested in the business, but also upon the baseless stock which represents nothing but the audacity of promoters and the weakness of the law.

These suggestions would be idle if there were no practicable remedy for the obvious wrong. There is no hopes of attaining uniformity through state legislation. The state in which the greater number of these companies is organized secures a revenue from them more than sufficient to defray the expenses of its state government, and seems easily convinced of the justice of its laws. I believe the question is a national one, and that the time has come to nationalize it. I recognize the difficulty of amending the constitution of the United States; but I know that whenever the people are sufficiently in earnest, it can, and will be done. Before corporations which are to do business throughout the country, and in which the people of one state are quite as much interested as the people of another, are permitted to organize, they should be compelled to show that their capital stock has been paid for in money, and that the real value of the property they acquire is as great as the stock which represents it.

I am unable to agree that we can cure other evils may exist in these organizations, by publicity. Their affairs are already sufficiently public so that every intelligent man understands in a general way of what they are composed, what they are doing, and what they are earning. It is well enough to require them to make statements, and submit to examinations, but if we are to limit our regulation to mere publicity, the outcome will not justify the attention we are bestowing upon the subject.

I recur to an expression of a moment ago, that competition is the force upon which we must rely to regulate the prices of the products of industry, for I cannot consider with complacency the alternative to which we would be driven if competition were eliminated. I sincerely hope that we will find sufficient protection against the efforts to monopolize or unduly restrict the field of a profitable business; and if these coporations, however large, can be put and maintained upon a lawful basis, I confidently believe that industrial monopolies cannot endure.

Pursuing the subject one step further, I am led to observe that if we accept the proposition that competition, and that alone, will preserve the people from undue exactions, we must see to it that if we cannot artificially induce competition, we can at least be certain that we do not artificially exclude it. We have limited competition in the past through tariff duties, believing, and well believing, that the general interests of the people would be better served by developing our own resources to the fullest extent, even though in so doing the American price rose higher than the foreign price; believing also that home competition would sold every commodity manufactured here upon a fair American level. To me, however, it seems plain that whenever a consolidation of manufactures with respect to any commodity stifles competition at home, or so restricts its operation that its force is not fairly felt, then it is the imperative duty of congress to immediately remove the artificial restraints we have created. I am not an advocate of general revision of the tariff; but I stand for competition, the competition of the republic if possible, but of the world if necessary. I regard the consequences of a monopoly, or substantial monopoly, in any important product, as infinitely more disastrous than the consequences of foreign importations.

Permit me also a brief consideration of the tariff and of reciprocity. In this presence I need hardly reiterate my profound conviction in the wisdom of the policy which has levied tariff duties, not for revenue alone, but to equalize the conditions under which manufacturing has been established and carried on in the United States and the conditions which have existed elsewhere. I firmly believe that we are more deeply indebted to this doctrine for the gratifying position we hold in the affairs of the world, than to any other one cause. Situated as we have been, the paramount object of maintaining high protective duties has been to enable us to profitably produce that which we have consumed, paying for its production the superior wages which are the birthright of the American laborer. The point of view, however, has somewhat changed, and we are now feely exporting not only agricultural, but manufactured products; and we must look, therefore, not alone to the things we consume, but to the things we export. Our tariff, therefore, should always be adjusted so as to give the greatest possible amount of work to our own people, whether the product of their labor be intended for home or foreign use. We have come gradually to feel that there is little danger of an invasion of our markets with respect to many of the commodities we are naturally fitted to produce; and we must keep our eyes steadily upon the chief purpose of protection; viz: the employment, not of a part, but of all the men and women of America. This, I submit, is the spirit in which reciprocal treaties should be examined. If we can make a trade that will enlarge our markets; that is to say, increase the amount of work to be done in the United States, the trade should be made, even though some particular industry is curtailed in its production. While we shall hold fast to cardinal principles, we are not blind worshippers of a tariff schedule. Protection was established for man, not man for protection. Reciprocity that takes without giving is an idle dream and a contradiction in terms; and if its scope embraces only non-competitive products, it is of little future value in the economy of the nation.

I cannot resist the conclusion that some changes might well be made, not through the medium of reciprocal treaties, but directly. I said recently in a public address, and I repeat it, that there is one condition which the consumers of this country will not endure. They are patriotic enough to see American goods sold in foreign markets cheaper than they are sold at home, if the purpose is to establish a trade or to unload an unexpected surplus; but they will not tolerate, as a permanent trade policy, the selling of goods abroad at a less price than they are sold at home." It is believed that there are lines of industry in which this practice is likely to become permanent, and if congress so finds, it ought, and I doubt not will, declare they no longer need the fostering care of protective duties. In no other way can we render justice to all our people.

I have already referred to one subject which, as I view it, cannot be successfully dealt with until the constitution of the United States is so amended as to give to congress the power to make and enforce such regulations as will be effective throughout the whole territory of the United States. I now desire to refer to another which, in my judgment, must ultimately be treated from the same standpoint. I mean the unending controversy between the employer and the employed respecting the conditions of work and the compensation for it. It is altogether natural that the employer reaches a conclusion different from that of the employe. The accumulated and aggregated wealth ordinarily represented by the employer gives him a palpable advantage in the contest, and the employe long ago discovered that associated labor was necessary to deal with associated capital, and the tendency toward organized labor is as marked and will probably be as enduring as the tendency toward organized wealth. The collision between these forces in society not only disturbs the peace of industrial pursuits, but is so destructive that the student of affairs is constantly looking for some plan through which agreements, fair to both sides, may be affected. I thoroughly believe that the government must bear a hand in the solution of this problem, and I am equally convinced that it cannot effectually do so until we nationalize the subject. I have no sympathy with the arraignment of our institutions because a few men have grown very rich while the great mass of mankind accumulates but little or nothing. I do not believe that the laws of the United States, and in them I include the laws of the several states, can be justly charged with either the intent or the effect of favoring one man or class of men at the expense of another man or class of men. I may deplore the fact that wealth is not more evenly distributed, but it is nevertheless true that the startling inequalities of life must be imputed to some other cause than the favor of the government. Nature endows one man wtih a genius to make and save money, and denies it to another. This power can no more be equalized than any other form of superiority in the struggle for leadership; and he who cavils at the differences which the world presents, quarrels with the plans of the Almighty. While, therefore, the government could not if it would, and should not if it could, attempt to reduce humanity to a common level, i am firmly of the opinion that it is worth our while to consider the propriety of curbing some of the power which great success creates. Our history makes it clear that it is easy to create wealth, but the problem of its just distribution is one which will tax the strength of the best minds of future generations. Governments are not organized simply to keep the peace; it is no inconsiderably part of their function to help those who cannot help themselves. It is perfectly true that the world always has a place for men of great capacity, and they can always exact full compensation for what they do. It must not be forgotten, however, that much the larger part of the work of the world does not require great intellectual strength or demand trained minds. This work must be done, and the pay for it cannot be raised to the standard of those who lead in the fields of industry. The government, as it seems to me, has at least one duty to perform in this connection. It is vitally interested in seeing to it that the men who can never rise to that prominence which will enable them to fully protect themselves, shall receive that reward for their labor, and shall be surrounded by such conditions, as will make them good citizens. I believe that the power which wealth bestows ought sometimes to be checked, and, through wise legislation, the rights of the weak and helpless more carefully preserved.

There is another thought which is directed more to the creation of a wholesome sentiment than to the enactment of laws, to which I must draw your attention. He who honestly makes has the right to safely keep, whether it be one dollar or a million dollars; yet there are certain incidents of wealth, and especially associated wealth, which ought to receive the serious consideration of those who have the welfare of their country at heart. Wealth gives to him who owns or controls it power for great good and for great evil; it gives him power to endow schools, found libraries and relieve want; but it also gives him power to seduce and coerce his fellow men and this power should be most jealously scrutinized. Wealth, and especially incorporate wealth, has many rights; but it should always be remembered that among them it not the right to vote. Corporations have, and ought to have, many privileges; but among them is not the privilege to sit in political conventions or occupy seats in legislative chambers. Corporations, as such, should be rigorously excluded in every form from participation in political affairs. Here at least, the rich and the poor, as individuals, should meet upon a plane of absolute equality. The conscience and intelligence of the natural man must be the sole factors in determining what our laws shall be and who shall execute them.

At this point I must be permitted to refer specifically to one phase of corporate interference that ought speedily to disappear under the righteous indignation of honest men. The professional lobbyist has, I regret to say, become one of the features of legislative assemblies; he has become a stench in the nostrils of a decent community; and he ought to be driven with the lash of scorn, pursued by the penalties of the law, from the presence of every official and from the precincts of every legislative body in the republic. Do not understand me to suggest that the halls of legislation should be inaccessible to either the individual or the corporation. The right of petition is as sacred as it is venerable; and through it the wants, objections or complaints of all who are interested in public affairs should be made known with absolute freedom; not only so, but the right to a fair and impartial hearing before appropriate committees should be sedulously preserved. The lobbyist, however, who is for anything or against anything for hire, whose mission it is to promote one measure or defeat another, who haunts the chambers of legislation and taints its atmosphere with his corrupt designs, who sends for members for interviews in the cloak room, who carries a tally sheet and watches the roll call, who shadows the members at their homes and hotels, injecting at all hours and all places his poison into the public service, is a criminal whose approach is an insult, and to whom the doors of the capitol should never swing inward. Even as Christ scourged the money changers from the temple at Jerusalem, so you, senators and representatives, will scourge the lobbyist from your sight and hearing.

TAXATION.

The manner in which the government ought to raise the money necessary to carry on its varied operations has been the subject of the widest difference of opinion from the time organized society took form until the present moment. The subject has been a difficult one with every people in all time, and it is especially difficult in the complex material development in which we live. While it has not always been so, the fundamental principle of taxation has now become well settled. It is universally agreed that every tax payer should contribute his fair, just and proportionate share of the expense which governments entail. The preparation of a law carrying this principle into execution would not have been an easy task in the simplicities of a former period, but with the wonderful variety of property, with the mysterious forms in which wealth finds expression, and in the dual system of government known to the United States, the subject has become altogether the most intricate and baffling of modern days. I believe that there is no economic question that has been so adequately answered as the one relating to taxation. This conclusion must not be accepted as a disparagement of what has been accomplished, for those who have been charged with the duty of framing our laws have been inspired by conscientious motives and have done the best they could. The conclusion is rather an acknowledgement of the tremendous obstacles which lie in the way of fitting a law to meet the infinite variety of progress and expansion, and the fertile power of the tax payer to shift his burden to his neighbor's shoulders. The fact that our present law relating to the assessment and collection of taxes is imperfect, should not discourage the general assembly from attempting to remedy its defects. It is not likely that justice can ever be completely done, but each year will shed new light for our guidance, and every general assembly should courageously undertake to make the law a more perfect exemplification of the principle upon which it is founded.

The most flagrant defect in the execution of our taxing law is disclosed in the escape of so large a part of the personal property within our jurisdiction from the view of the assessor. The plan which has been recently adopted to bring it to light can not be said to be permanent in its character, and eventually some officer of the county must be entrusted with the duty that contractors now perform. Final relief will come. I believe, first from the gradual growth of a sentiment that the tax dodger is an unworthy citizen. There ought to be, and will be, a quickened conscience that makes the duty of the tax payer much plainer than it now is, and that will command the truth and sincerity in dealing with the assessor that is practiced in all other business matters. I believe further that there ought to be imposed a reasonable penalty upon the failure to list taxable property. From the standpoint of high morals, the tax payer forfeits his title to property which he wilfully conceals, and there is no stringency of legislation which would, in such cases, invade natural right. The severity of the penalty should be determined with reference to the practicability of enforcing the law, and if we had appropriate legislation along these lines, I doubt not that it would aid materially the development of a sense of duty to the state which seems now, with many persons, to be dead or dormant.

My observation reveals another weakness which may well engage the attention of the general assembly. A casual examination of the reports of the state board of review shows that many of the assessors of Iowa sadly mistake their duty. It is probably true that personal property fails to bear its just measure of taxation, partly through the weakness of the connivance, or both, of assessors; but the more serious charge to be brought against them, or some of them, is their disobedience of the statute which requires that the true value of property shall be made the basis of its assessable value. In my judgment, the compensation provided for assessors is much too low and as is usual when economy of that kind prevails, many of them do not earn the meager salary which the law allows. The effort to make assessment just and uniform begins with the assessor, and the general assembly can render a greater service to the state by diligently inquiring whether the present method of selecting assessors that is likely to yield better results than those now before us. While it is not within the province of this address to make specific recommendations to the legislature, I earnestly hope that in the midst of other duties the Twenty-ninth general assembly will find time to consider this vital point in our system of taxation.

RAILROAD TAXATION.

No discussion of the subject would be complete without a reference to the taxation of railroad property. The policy of our law which has created a distinct tribunal for the ascertainment of the value of the railroads of the state, naturally introduces a comparison between the values attached to railroad property and the values assigned to other property. Those whose property is valued by assessors, subject only to a limited revision by the state board of review, have an undoubted right to demand that the executive council, the assessing board of railway property, shall so perform its duty that the railway corporations shall pay their just and proportionate share of taxes; or, to phrase it differently, that the assessable value of railroad property shall bear the same relation to its true value that the assessable value of other property upon the tax list bears to its true value. I believe that the difficulties in ascertaining the value of a railroad are not fully understood or appreciated. It is comparatively easy to fix, with approximate accuracy, the value of a farm, or of live stock but it is not easy to fix the value of a railroad, and especially of that part of a railroad which lies in this state and which is but a portion of a system extending through many states. Nevertheless, the work must be done, and it should be done so that, as nearly as human power can accomplish it, justice is done both to the railroad company and to the general tax payer. Many plans have been suggested and some have been adopted in other states, which would, if adopted here, relieve the executive council of the discretion or judgment which it now exercises. I have not been able to perceive the merit claimed for them, in any of these plans; and moreover it may well be doubted whether under our constitution, any plan is available which destroys the discretion and judgment of the assessing board and its right to give due weight to all the elements or factors which, by the common consent of the business community enter the question of value. I, therefore, do not advocate a change in the law which would take away from the executive council the duty of expressing its honest conviction, after having sought and obtained all the information accessible to it. I do, however, believe that there are amendments to the law which, if made, would greatly facilitate the work of the executive council and render its conclusions more just and certain. The three great factors to be taken into account in determining the value of a railroad are: First, its physical condition; second, its gross earnings, and third, its net earnings. Passing the first, concerning which the executive council has now abundant authority to acquire all the information that exists relating to it, I come to gross earnings. With respect to a railroad that begins and ends in the state of Iowa, there is comparatively little difficulty; but with respect to a railroad which owns or operates a system extending through two or more states, the ascertainment of the gross earnings of that part of the property lying within this state is most imperfectly provided for. Very much the larger part of the railroad property in Iowa is owned and operated by companies with lines extending through other states, and their property in this state is used as a part of a system. The business done upon these railroads is divisible into four clases: First, that which originates and ends in the state of Iowa, second, that which originates in Iowa and terminates elsewhere; third, that which originates elsewhere and terminates in Iowa; fourth, that which neither originates nor terminates in Iowa, but is carried over some part of the state. It is manifest that with regard to all the business save that which originates and terminates in the state there must, in order to ascertain the gross earnings within this state, be established a basis of division; and that I believe should be the work of the legislature and not of the executive council. The basis of division being known it is then clear that in order to do justice there must be a uniform system of accounts kept by the railway companies so that their reports will furnish the same information, computed in the same manner, from each company. The executive council has no authority to so require, and the remedy is in the hands of the general assembly. With such amendments, and with faithful reports the assessing board could ascertain, with reasonable accuracy, the gross earnings of a railroad property in this state.

With respect to net earnings, the inadequacy of the law is still more apparent. I have much reason to believe that the phrase, "net earnings," has different meanings with the various railway companies. What should be deducted from the gross earnings, in order to arrive at the net earnings, ought to be declared by statute; and such uniform accounts should be kept by railway companies as will enable them to make their reports upon a common basis. With net earnings, as with gross earnings, it is palpable that with respect to those railway companies which have systems doing business in two states or more, there must be some rule adopted for the division of the cost of maintenance and operation by the law. With the gross and net earnings thus ascertained, many of the obstacles in the way of a just assessment would disappear.

I am heartily in accord with the proposal to make railroad assessments in July instead of March; that is to say, at the time when the executive council has under review the assessment of other kinds of property. I favor such change in the law for two reasons: First, because it will enable the executive council to have more fully before it the general basis of assessment of other property, and to put the railroad property upon the same basis; second, because the time between the coming in of the reports from the railway companies and the time at which the assessment must be made, is inadequate for the work that must be done. The executive council should have the amplest opportunity, not only to examine the reports themselves, but if such reports fail to disclose all the information which the executive council should have in order to fully and fairly discharge its duty, it ought to seek that information from other sources. My final thought in this connection is that the executive council should have the power to employ, if deemed necessary, an expert accountant, and acquire through further inquiry the facts which the reports may fail to disclose.

ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

There will occurr next year at St. Louis the celebration of an event of greater significance to the people of Iowa than any other in the history of America. We were deeply interested in the exposition which took place in Philadelphia in 1876, but we shared that interest with the whole nation. We were much concerned in the Columbian Fair at Chicago in 1893, but we shared that concern with all the people of North America. The centennial anniversary of what is commonly known as the "Louisiana Purchase" relates peculiarly to those states which comprise the territory then acquired. The patriotic citizens of this commonwealth claim for her the highest range among the states. The commemoration of the act which gives us our title to statehood in the greatest republic of the earth, the event which gives us a place in the azure field of Stars and Stripes from which our star blazes more radiantly than any other, ought not to be allowed to pass unnoticed. It would humiliate every man and woman in the state if at St. Louis in 1903 Iowa were not, as she is everywhere else, among the first. We may not be able to pass into the treasury the dividends which will, from time to time, be declared upon the investment we make in this memorial; but I am sure that abundant returns will come to us in a more devoted and enlightened citizenship, and in a truer conception of the greatness and growth of our splendid commonwealth.

VICKSBURG MONUMENT.

It gives me more than ordinary pleasure to mention the proposal to erect an appropriate state monument and suitable regimental monuments in the National Park at Vicksburg. The tributes we render to the patriotism and heroism of the men who fought for the Union in the war of the rebellion, no matter how great or how noble, will but feebly express the gratitude we feel Iowa has a peculiar interest in the siege of Vicksburg. The valor of Iowa soldiers everywhere conspicuous was especially distinguished through the dreadful days that preceded the fall of this important stronghold. Our proportionate losses were greater than history records for any other engagement, and it is meet that we should mark the field of patriotic courage with enduring testimonials of our grateful memories.

HISTORICAL BUILDING.

The state has made a beginning in the erection of an historical building. In the rush of material affairs let us not forget that important and essential department of the government which is to be housed and carried on in the historical building. Many considerations urge the completion of the work at the earliest practicable moment. The proposed division of the state library, which I believe meets the approval of all who have examined the subject, must be delayed until the building is finished. There is no adequate repository for the collection of books, papers, documents, and other things that relate to the history and growth of the state. As time passes on much that is now accessible will become inaccessible, and much that is now in existence will be destroyed. I am not permitted at this time to enter into the detail of this, the most interesting branch of state affairs; but must content myself with earnestly urging the speedy completion of the work so well begun.

LAW OF NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

I have been advised that there will be introduced into the general assembly a bill covering the law peculiar to negotiable instruments. I have long felt so deep an interest in the attempt to create uniformity throughout he United States upon this important subject that I cannot resist the inclination to mention the matter at this time. In an age like ours, when commerce utterly disregards state boundaries, and in which the business relations of the people of one state are as intimate with the people of another, as with their own citizens; and when we reflect that law is but a stumbling block unless it is known to those who are to be governed by it, the diversity of the laws of several states upon so simple a thing as a promissory note or a bill of exchange is a reproach to a civilized people. It is obvious that the final remedy must be in extending to congress the power to enact a statute that will be general in its operation throughout the whole sovereignty of the republic, but in view of the difficulties that lie in the way of an amendment to the constitution of the United States, the American Bar association, about three years ago suggested an effort to secure concerted action in the principal commercial states. The proposed statute was prepared by a competent lawyer, and has already been adopted by three or four states, and will, unquestionably, during the present year, be favorably acted upon in several others. It contains no radical departure from the well known principles controlling

WHAT SETTLERS IN SASKATCHEWAN VALLEY HAVE TO SAY.

Formerly from the United States.

Rosthern, July 8th, 1900.

Frank Pedley, Esq.,

Superintendent of Immigration.

Sir:—We, the undersigned settlers in Saskatchewan, Township 43, Range 6, beg to submit the following letter. We came from Springfield, Bonhomme County, S. Dakota, in the spring of 1899, and settled where we now reside. We had considerable crop last year we put in on new breaking, and it was very good, and this year, 1900, our crop is excellent. Our wheat will yield about twenty bushels to the acre, the oats and barley are also very good, and our potatoes and root crop all that could be desired. We consider this a fine country and are glad we came, as our prospects could not be better. A poor man will get a start in this country much quicker than in Dakota.

We are, yours respectfully, John H. Schultz, H. A. Goshen, S. Gors, B. H. Dirks, C. D. Unry, P. Unry, and A. Ratzlief. All from South Dakota, U. S. A.

Miles of Potatoes.

Everybody knows that the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., are the largest seed potato growers in the world, so when their President, Henry A. Salzer, recently purchased 21,000 acres more of ideal potato land, all wondered what for. Well, it is for potatoes—miles and miles of potatoes.

TO KILL THE DANDRUFF GERM.

Is the Only Possible Way of Having a Permanent Cure.

If you see a woman or a man with luxuriant glossy hair, you may be sure neither has dandruff to amount to anything. In nearly every case where women and men have thin, brittle hair, they owe it to dandruff. There are hundreds of preparations that "claim" to cure dandruff, but not one but Newbro's Herpicide tells you that dandruff is the result of a germ burrowing into the scalp, and that permanent cure of dandruff and its consequent falling and baldness can only be had by killing the germ; and there is no other preparation that will destroy that germ but Newbro's Herpicide. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect."

Homeseekers' Opportunity.

On the first and third Tuesdays of January and February, 1902, the Iowa Central will sell homeseekers' excursion tickets to points in Iowa, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and elswhere in the South, Southeast and Southwest, at One Fare plus two dollars for the round trip, with final return limit of twenty-one days. The Iowa Central is the acknowledged short line to the North, Northwest, West, South and Southwest and has first class equipment, through chair cars and sleeping cars with fast time. It lands the homeseekers in the best sections. For full particulars call on ticket agents, or address, Geo. S. Batty, G. P. & T. A., Marshalltown, Iowa.

CAPSICUM VASELINE
(PUT UP IN COLLAPSIBLE TUBES)

A substitute for and superior to mustard or any other plaster, and will not blister the most delicate skin. The pain-allaying and curative qualities of this article are wonderful. It will stop the toothache at once, and relieve headache and sciatica. We recommend it as the best and safest external counter-irritant known. Also as an external remedy for pains in the chest and stomach and all rheumatic, neuralgic and gouty complaints. A trial will prove what we claim for it, and it will be found to be invaluable in the household. Many people say "it is the best of all of your preparations." Price 15 cents, at all druggists or other dealers, or by sending this amount to us in postage stamps we will send you a tube by mail. No article should be accepted by the public unless the same carries our label, as otherwise it is not genuine. CHESEBROUGH MFG. CO.

the subject, and I confidently believe that nothing objectionable will be found in its provisions. I earnestly hope that it will receive the favor of the Twenty-ninth general Assembly, and that before many years all of the great states of the Union will have taken the step toward uniformity.

Of all the sources of state pride, the most constant has been the generality and completeness of our educational equipment and facilities. We have again and again challenged the country for comparison between our people and any other for education and intelligence. It is to be feared that we have been so well contented with laurels already won that we have forgotten that eternal vigilance is the price of other things than liberty, it is unfortunately true that we have fallen a little behind in the race, and we must gird up our loins and quicken our step.

With respect to our common and high schools in which we are more deeply interested than in any other institutions of society, I cannot now speak, inasmuch as it would be impossible to intelligently treat the subject within the limits of this address. I beg, however, that senators and representatives will make themselves familiar with the well enthenticated statements made by our superintendent of public instruction during the late meeting of the teachers' association, and with his report to the governor. I have been greatly impressed with the recent discussions and I believe that there is an imperative demand for a full and comprehensive review of the whole subject at the hands of the legislature.

NORMAL SCHOOLS.

Of the three educational institutions directly in charge of the state, I refer first to the Normal School at Cedar Falls. It would be impossible to exaggerate the concern we all feel for the proper training of those who are engaged in the work of teaching. The mere possession of the knowledge that is to be taught is not the most important part of a teacher's equipment. We have long ago passed the period of controversy respecting the necessity of training the teacher to teach. It is also accepted as an established fact that the capacity of the present school at Cedar Falls is inadequate to accommodate those who should and who can take the course of instruction now required. Nothing but the disabilities of poverty can be pleaded in defense of the failure of the state to furnish additional facilities. Iowa cannot make this defense, and I confidently predict that the session of the general assembly just begun will not close without supplying a want so keenly felt.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

The Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts holds, and ought to hold a high place in the affections of the people of this state. If it ever failed to recognize its true position in the societies of learning and culture, that day has gone by, and it is at the present moment one of the best exemplifications of the science of agriculture, of the mechanic arts and of kindred things known to the United States. Under difficulties which have not confronted all its competitors, it has won its way to the front, and now enjoys a reputation that confers honor upon its board of trustees and its faculty. The science of agriculture and analogous pursuits have in recent years received a marked impetus. The wonderful progress in the learning which relates to the farm and the dairy is doing more, and will do more, to put money into the pockets of the farmer, the stock raiser and the dairyman than any other branch of educational training. Other forms of study and reasearch may be curious and interesting, but this form pays its dividends in gold. The knowledge, zeal, and devotion of the present secretary of agriculture, all of which he is employing with an energy never equalled, will in my opinion, do more to promote the material welfare of the people of the United States than the work of any officer of the government, national, state or municipal; and it is our duty to aid him in his developments and experiments in every practicable way. Our Agricultural college was never more favorably circumstanced, and it should, both as to buildings and support, be so strengthened that it may have at least an even chance with other colleges of like character.

The established policy of this state concentrates all its colleges of higher learning, save those already mentioned, in the State University. It is, and ought to be, a cherished object of devotion and admiration. I confess that while I have the deepest solicitude for the growth and betterment of our Normal school and Agricultural college, my affection lingers last and longest upon the State University. In an educational way it is the monument which marks the position of the state, in the world of culture, and around it there should cluster our choicest memories and our fondest hopes. In considering it we should remember that it is easier to form character than it is to reform it, and that formative institutions precede in point of importance reformative institutions. Government has no higher function than to prepare men and women to become good citizens. Generosity and liberality should distinguish the provisions made for the university, and inasmuch as it is the institution intended to represent our appreciation of education in its higher and specialized forms, it should be all that money can create or genius devise. Iowa is not poor, and there is no extravagance in any provision which will enable the State University to do the most and best work of which the university is capable. I have given some time to the investigation of the subject so near my heart, and I assert with confidence that there is no school in the union that has made more progress, achieved better results, or done more work with the same means. The fact that it is a state institution precludes its growth through private benevolence and philanthrpy, and I trust that you will feel that the full responsibility for its destiny lies with you. In this day of eulogy and rejoicing respecting the high position which this state has worthily acquired, it is not gratifying to our people to remember that we are doing less for our university than Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri and Nebraska are doing for theirs. We ought to march in the very van of the procession of education, and it is humiliating to see states less able to keep the pace passing us in the ranks. We are not accustomed to look at the backs of our comrades in any march and I trust that we may speedily take our proper position in the advancing column. The boys and girls of our state have a right to the best opportunities of our civilization and we will fail of our duty to coming generations if we deny the right. The university should have buildings which in the beauty of their architecture, the permanency of their construction and the conveniences of their arrangement are the best types of the class to which they belong. It should have a constant support that will relieve its management of apprehension and enable it to secure and retain the most accomplished instructors and varied equipment, to the end that it may gather into its roll of pupils the largest possible number of young men and young women and may be fitted to give the most efficient help in the development of the mind the growth of skill and the creation of character.

Senators and representatives, I conclude my first utterance as an officer of the state with the thought often expressed but never exhausted. It is the quality of our men and women that has made the republic of the United States great, powerful and prosperous. Bountiful as providence has been, her treasures would still be unexplored and undeveloped had not the manhood and womanhood of America towered above the standard of other nations. If we would preserve and increase the honors we already wear we must see to it that no child shall be born without hope; no boy or girl mature without care, and no man or woman die without opportunity. Property must have its protection, but men and women are worth more than property. We are appointed to do justice, absolute, even handed justice, and to the test of this, the divinest attribute of humanity, let us bring every legislative or executive act.

There are forty counties in Texas the residents of which have to seek legal advice in other counties, as they have not a single attorney of their own.

Bennet Burleigh, the noted English war correspondent, reports a suggestive conversation between a British officer and a Boer field cornet, under a flag of truce. The former asked: "When do you think the war will be over?" "Oh," replied the other, "when you people are able to catch a horse with an ox-wagon; not before."

Not so many years ago, there was a veteran teacher in the Boy's High school, who often made his classes wince under the lash of his bitter sarcasm and ready wit. One day a little half-starved, yellow cur strayed into the school, and the boys thought they saw a chance to express their feelings toward "Fussy," who was busy in another room. The frightened mongrel was picked up, quickly fitted with a pair of large spectacles, and placed on the teacher's chair. "Fussy" entered the room, walked to his desk, calmly surveyed the work of his pupils, and then, turning to them, pleasantly said: "In my absence, I see you have held a business meeting and elected one of your number chairman."

These are Plain Words.

Marshfield, Mo., Jan. 20th.—Mr. J. F. King of this place makes the following statement:

"I have suffered untold agony for twenty years with Lame Back and Acute Kidney Disease, and in that time have never been two days together clear of misery, and for some of the time I could not walk a step or even sit up.

"Last spring, after trying many doctors and every remedy that could be thought of, I began a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills. The good results were almost immediate and for the last seven months I have seen more comfort and pleasure than I have for twenty years before.

"Any one with Kidney Disease or Lame Back that will not try Dodd's Kidney Pills deserves to suffer."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Your Vegetable Compound cured me of womb trouble from which I had been a great sufferer for nearly three years. During that time I was very irregular and would often have intense pain in the small of my back, and blinding headaches and severe cramps. For three months I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and aches and pains are as a past memory, while health and happiness is my daily experience now. You certainly have one grateful friend in Emporia, and I have praised your Vegetable Compound to a large number of my friends. You have my permission to publish my testimonial in connection with my picture. Yours sincerely, MISS MARION CUNNINGHAM, Emporia, Kans."

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.

THE NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE paints with loving touch the historic landmarks of New England; it recalls the customs and traditions of the "old red schoolhouse days" and tells of the achievements of New Englanders in all parts of the world. It has distinguished contributors and is artistically printed and illustrated. Monthly, $3.00 per annum.

THE NORTHWESTERN AGRICULTURIST is the leading farm, live-stock and home paper in the West. It interests every member of the family, having departments devoted to the interests of women as well as of men, on the farms in the Northwest. It is filled with instructive and interesting reading matter from beginning to end. Its various departments are under the charge of practical men, who have made a success themselves on their particular line on which they are writing. Amongst the department editors who contribute regularly to The Agriculturist, are Prof. Thomas Shaw, Professor of Animal Husbandry at the Minnesota State Agricultural College. Professor Shaw edits the sheep, beef cattle and horse departments; A. N. Hyatt, a dairyman known all over America as a practical and experienced dairy writer; Forest Henry, editor of the swine department, a man who has paid off mortgages by raising swine in Minnesota, and who is himself making money in swine raising now, not as a breeder but as a feeder of swine for market; A. K. Bush, in charge of the horticultural department, State Lecturer on Horticulture at the Minnesota Farmers' Institutes. These are only a few of the more important departments of the paper. Sample Copies will be sent free to all who are interested. The Northwestern Agriculturist is published semi-monthly, and already reaches over 56,000 farm homes twice a month. Subscription price fifty cents a year.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 20, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

News of our Neighbors

Public Sale

At T. Gauley's farm at Ell Center, Thursday, Feb. 11, at 10 o'clock sharp. Everybody come and get a free lunch anyhow.

Strayed, from my place about six weeks ago, one red steer, two years old. All charges will be paid. FRED AX.

Children Especially Liable.

Burns, bruises and cuts are extremely painful and if neglected often result in blood poisoning. Children are especially liable to such mishaps because not so careful. As a remedy DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled. Draws out the fire, stops the pain, soon heals the wound. Beware of counterfeits. Sure cure for piles. "DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured my baby of eczema after two physicians gave her up," writes James Mock, N. Webster, Ind. "The sores were so bad she soiled two to five dresses a day." J. L. Harr.

Garner

From Special Correspondent.

Carroll Goodyear returned last week from his land hunting trip into South Dakota. While there he purchased two full sections of land and expects to return there at an early date and open up farming in big shape.

The quarantine has been partially raised and the schools have re-opened. Diphtheria has about disappeared, and now nothing more than a few hundred cases of "pipen chox" disturb the serenity of our fond fathers and mothers.

Jay Johnston, late the popular and energetic manager of the Baas & McMahon drug store, has accepted a lucrative position in the Amsden Pharmacy, and is rolling pills and shoveling copperas with unabated vigor and success at his new post.

Webbie Sage, who had just become installed as clerk in the Baas & McMahon drug store, when it was sold out to the Zieger Co., remained until the inventory was completed, and then entered the Garner Bakery and Restaurant under Verne Mason, and is now as busy as you please selling bread, buns and "Pies 'n' things."

Baas & McMahon, the down town druggists, have sold out to the Zieger Drug Co., who inventoried and took possession Saturday. One member of the firm is a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Cooper, and was for a time in the Garner Bakery and Restaurant and has many friends in town and country who will wish him well in his new venture. The Ziegers also control a drug store at Buffalo Center.

This community was greatly saddened last week Thursday, when the news was whispered around that Mrs. Womeldorf, nee Minnie Worden, had passed to the great Beyond, after a happy married life of only a few short months. Her demise was caused as we are informed, by some deep seated nervous trouble. Her remains were laid to rest in the cemetery here last Sunday, followed by a large concourse of mourning relatives and friends. She stricken husband has the sympathies of all in his sore bereavement.

Don't Live Together.

Goodell

From the Globe.

Verne Tracy is suffering from another attack of appendicitis.

A. R. Church was transacting business at Klemme on last Friday.

Chris Rhodes has gone to South Dakota to grow up with the country.

E. J. Bauman went to South Dakota with land seekers, Tuesday morning.

Little Luella Schulz was numbered among the sick last Friday and Saturday.

Lee McNutt is again on the sick list. We understand that Frank McNutt is also sick.

Mrs. Fred Arnold and daughter Stella, of Klemme, were Goodell visitors Wednesday.

Mrs. M. C. Elder visited with her daughter, Mrs, Zook, at Klemme the latter part of last week.

Albert Rhodes, a former resident of our city, but now of Parker, S. D., is reported to be married.

Mrs. Geo. Griggs left Tuesday evening, for a few weeks' visit with relatives in Chicago and Davenport.

Child Worth Millions.

"My child is worth millions to me," says Mrs. Mary Bird of Harrisburg, Pa., "yet I would have lost her by croup had I not purchased a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure." One Minute Cough Cure is a sure cure for coughs, croup and throat and lung troubles. An absolutely safe cough cure which acts immediately. The youngest child can take it with entire safety. The little ones like the taste and remember how often it helped them. Every family should have a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure handy. At this season especially it may be needed suddenly. J. L. Harr.

Kanawha

From the Record:

Clint Patrick was able to be out again last week after his siege of sickness.

John Harms, of Hampton, has been arrested for forging Dick Brandt's name to a note.

Mrs. G. M. Patrick was called to Ft. Dodge Wednesday, on account of the sickness of her son Ernest.

John Savogue and wife, and Mrs. Durvea, of Goodell, were guests of Henry Africa and wife over Sunday.

L. Haefner has been offered a good position as traveling salesman for a large bicycle company. He is thoroughly posted on cycle matters.

ORIGINAL NOTICE.

Jennie W. White, Plaintiff, vs. W. H. White, Defendant. | In the District Court of the State of Iowa, in and for Hancock County, February Term, A. D. 1902

To W. H. WHITE:

You are hereby notified that on or before the First day of February, A. D. 1902, the petition of Plaintiff in the above entitled cause will be filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the State of Iowa, in and for Hancock County, claiming of you a divorce from the bonds of matrimony and alleging as grounds therefor your desertion of the Plaintiff in the month of September, A. D. 1898, without any reasonable or just cause, and for such other relief as may seem just and equitable.

For further particulars see said petition when filed.

And that unless you appear thereto and defend before noon of the second day of the next term, being the February term of said Court, which will commence at the Court House in Concord, Iowa, on the 17th day of February, 1902, default will be entered against you and judgment and decree rendered thereon as provided by law.

OLIVER GORDEN,
Attorney for Plaintiff.

Cards are out announcing the forthcoming marriage of Miss Effie Baker and George McNeish at the home of the bride's parents next Wednesday.

Frank Douglas and Miss Kline both parties living west of town were married by Rev. Whitfield. They will live at the farm occupied by N. Wallace, about 3 miles east of Corwith.

Mr. Dempsey received word that Lincoln Pence, who was nearly killed in an explosion at Mason City, may be able to have the sight of one eye. He is having the best of care and his recovery is a wonder to the medical world.

THE OLD PAPER.

Did you ever run across the old home newspaper, some ten years old or more? asks an exchange. Did it not prove exceedingly interesting as you read columns and columns of local news and personal mention? As you looked over its pages the many seeming trivial notices carry with them a multitude of tender and pleasant associations. You wonder why you prized the paper so little when it was first printed, when you find it so full of interest and food for reflection after so many years. It is only when one gets hold of a local paper and views its panorama of the past and reflects on what a mirror of local events the papers are that he begins to estimate their real value as a recorder of current history. He then realizes how worthy of support and patronage is the collector and recorder of the life and doings of the community which was from week to week and year to year so carefully portrayed. People make a big mistake by failing to place on file the copies of their local paper which will in after years be highly prized and of much interest.

City Physician Wheeler of Webster City has been convicted of bootlegging and fined $260. He paid it.

Nicholas Komas, an old resident of Dubuque, was fatally hurt. He was walking the track and stepped in front of one train to meet another from the opposite direction. No blame attaches to the company.

Judge Wakefield of Cherokee found Harry Hortman, accused of shooting Miss Florence Porter, guilty of murder in the first degree, and fixed the penalty at death. Hortman on his knees begged the pardon of Lewis Porter, the father of the murdered young woman. The decision of the judge meets the general approval of the community.

When Harry Hortman of Cherokee was brought up for trial for the murder of his sweetheart, Florence Porter, he changed his plea of not guilty to guilty. The court ordered that the evidence be taken in order that he might determine th degree of guilt and act wisely in passing judgment on the accused. The indictment charges murder in the first degree.

George McCaulley, an aged farmer residing three miles east of Lake City, was gored to death by a ferocious bull. He left the house to drive his cattle out to feed; not returning at usual time it was thought he had gone to a neighbor's, but his prolonged absence gave the family some alarm and a daughter was started out to look for him and found his lifeless body somewhat mangled, lying in the road. No one saw the happening, but all indications point to the fact that he was killed by the bull that was with the cattle he was driving.

William Detar was instantly killed by a Wabash passenger train at Albia. Detar was a rural mail carrier and was on his way to the postoffice to get his mail when the accident occurred. The shock of accident threw him upon the pilot of the engine and he was carried quite a distance before the train was stopped. When he was picked up his neck was found to be broken and life was extinct. His wagon was demolished, but the term was not injured. The accident occurred on the crossing of the Burlington and Wabash roads and in a deep cut.

A Creston dispatch says: Creston has been experiencing an era of incendiary fires during the last month, no less than nine barns having been discovered on fire within the past fifteen days. The police arrested three boys, ranging from 15 to 18 years old, for the crime, and one of them has confessed that they have been the authors of the fires and had intended to set on fire many others, including the Christian church, one of the best edifices in the city. The boys have been held under $1,000 bonds for preliminary trial. The boys arrested are Marvin Kivett, Willie Seals and Irvin Brightman. The publication of the facts in one of the evening papers has created intense excitement.

The citizens of Denison and Crawford county tendered a farewell reception to Leslie M. Shaw on the vening of the 24th at the opera house, previous to his departure for Washington to assume his duties as secretary of the treasury. It was a great outpouring of the people, over 1,000 being in attendance. Colonel Sears McHenry acted as chairman and introduced the speakers, F. W. Meyers, Carl F. Kuehnle, J. B. Romans, and P. E. C. Lally. Mr. Shaw spoke in his happiest vein and acknowledged his appreciation of the kindness and friendship of his neighbors and fellow townsmen. His remarks were enthusiastically applauded and the ovation given him was most cordial. Democrats as well as republicans vied with each other in their efforts to show their joy at Governor Shaw's promotion.

The Clinton county grand jury has indicted Bernard McGovern, charging him with assault to commit murder. His wife is the complaining witness. According to evidence before the grand jury, McGovern went to Clinton about a month ago, became intoxicated and went to his home in the country a few miles west of the city and made a vicious assault on his wife. He broke three of her ribs, seriously bruised her body in a number of places and then threw her into a creek. She was confined to the hospital for three weeks and for a few days it was thought she would not recover. McGovern was arrested, but his wife refused to prosecute him. He was then charged with intoxication by the chief of police and was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail. It is now understood Mrs. McGovern will appear against her husband.

A terrible shooting occurred at the saloon of Morgan Bros., at Muscatine a few days ago. Thomas Morgan, the bartender, was approached by Kid Noble, an all around tough and bad character, and in a one-sided dispute with Noble about a dog collar, Morgan was felled to the floor by a blow. Morgan retired behind the bar, while the asailant ran out cursing, only to return in about fifteen minutes with a double-barreled shotgun, which, after telling Morgan "to get his gun and come on," he leveled at him, shooting him twice, the first shot taking effect in the abdomen and the second in the leg. Morgan died within a few hours. The murderer escaped through the back door of the saloon and is still at large. He was a desperate character, low in everything that the name implies, was driven out of Rock Island and Davenport a number of times, and has figured in police courts here frequently. He posed as a prize fighter and was a low gambler.

WORST IN IOWA HISTORY

TWENTY-ONE KILLED IN LOST CREEK MINE EXPLOSION.

Volunteers Bravely Went in Search of Victims as Soon as Cages Were Put in Order.

Oskaloosa, Jan. 25.—As the result of a terrible mine disaster at Lost Creek, ten miles southeast of here yesterday, twenty-one dead miners are in an improvised morgue and eight are in a temporary hospital.

The injured: Ed Secress, Ed Swanson, Jonas Maho, Olive Mabie, John Jerkin, Wm. Harvey, George Gogo, Harry Dorrock.

An explosion occurred at noon, being what is known as a "dust explosion." The miners had just fired their usual noon shots, one of which failed to explode. The burning powder ignited the gas and the explosion followed. Smoke and debris was blown out of the shaft to a height of 200 feet. Part of the top works was torn away and the fans and cages were partially wrecked. This made the work of rescue very slow and it was 3 o'clock before the volunteer parties dared to venture into the east entry, where the explosion occurred.

When they had fought their way in, a horrible sight greeted them. The dead and injured were terribly burned and mutilated, some of them almost beyond recognition. Fire had broken out, and this added terror to the spectacle. The flames finally were controlled, and, after several of the rescuers had succumbed to the fumes, all the dead were found and carried to the top of the shaft.

At the time of the explosion more than 100 men were in the mines, but all except those in the east entry escaped with only slight injuries. The total property damage will be about $10,000. It was nearly 6 o'clock last evening when the last of the dead was taken and the last of anguish among the families of the men were most pitiful. Nearly all of the men were married and leave families in poor circumstances. The mine is owned by the Lost Creek Fuel company, of this city, and has been in operation about one year.

Oskaloosa, Jan. 27.—The inquest held over the remains of the twenty-two miners killed in the Lost Creek mine explosion was held Saturday at the mine by County Coroner Charles Foehlinger. The entire morning was given to getting witnesses together, and in special examination of the mine, conducted by Fire Inspector John Venner. Inspector Venner testified in the afternoon.

Fourteen witnesses, including a number of miners who were in the mine at the time of the accident, were examined. After hearing the evidence of the mine inspector and other witnesses the jury returned a verdict that the twenty-two men came to their deaths as the result of a dust explosion caused by a shot which was fired by Andy Pash, one of the dead men, and they attached blame to no person or party, thus exonerating both the miners and the company.

In the course of the evidence it was shown that the Lost Creek was almost an ideal mine. When examined recently it was found to have nearly perfect conditions. There was not a great deal of dust in the mine at any time. According to the testimony of several miners, these dust explosions are liable to occur in the rooms at any time that a windy shot is exploded. But in most cases the fire does not leave the room and go into the entry.

There was testimony to show that several shots were fired close together on this occasion, which is against the rules of the company and of the miners association. The testimony of John Zaeber was most interesting. He was the only miner in the east side who escaped alive, and he was badly hurt. In the room where he was standing the bodies of eight miners were found. This witness said that just before the explosion he heard several shots very close to gether. Then there was a sound something like a distant rumbling of a train over a bridge, or like thunder, and next a hissing sound and a wall of flame rushed by him and he fell to the floor face down. He laid on the floor but a moment, then sprang to his feet and ran into the entry. From there he hurried to the shaft, whence he made his way to safety. He knew an explosion had occurred, but all the lights were out and he could get no assistance to his comrades. He new that he was being overcome and would have to hurry to the surface if he saved himself.

The large cooperage works of S. H. Thompson, in Ft. Dodge, burned to the ground a few nights ago. The loss is $25,000 and is only lightly covered by insurance. The cause of the fire is a mystery. J. V. Lowry, captain of the Ft. Dodge fire department, was terribly burned about the face by the explosion of a can of oil while clearing away the wreckage. Fears are entertained for his sight.

Up to the present time the debts of W. A. Smith, the missing dairyman of Cedar Rapids, foot up to the amount of $12,904.54 and yet there are more to follow. Suits have been commenced in the superior court, the district court and the federal court, the latter asking that Smith be declared a bankrupt. A receiver has been appointed and all his property attached in Linn, Benton and Johnson counties. Efforts to find him have been fruitless.

The board of health, at its recent session, through its legislative committee, considered the legislation that will be advanced this session. An increased appropriation, totaling $10,000, will be asked for to enable the board to do additional work. The increase will suffice to pay a state bacteriologist, for which office provision is wanted. More severe penalties for violation of the quarantine laws will be sought. The board wants the legislature to clear up the present doubtfully worded sections of the code relating to how the expenses of quarantine shall be borne, as between cities and counties. It is understood the state board of health will not directly attack the osteopaths, but will await the introduction of a bill which, it is said, the osteopaths will present regulating osteopathic practice. This bill will be examined by the legislative committee of the board of health and if it is not suitable modifications will be urged. The board feels the legislature imposed the osteopathic practice on the state and that the legislature ought to regulate it. Dr. A. M. Linn made a verbal report to the board showing the Tama Indians had nearly all recovered from smallpox and that a part of the wickieups of the tribe had been burned.

The formation of a battery of light artillery in Des Moines is well under way. A number of young men have set the preliminaries on foot and have agreed upon Bert Trout, a well known East Des Moines young man, for captain. In the movement are a considerable number of the old members of Companies H and A of the Fifty-first regiment. It is planned to have a membership of from fifty to sixty. The young men interested in the formation of the battteries have not formally been authorized to undertake the task by Governor Cummins. They expect, however, to secure the governor's formal approval at an early date. A number of the young men have called on General Byers in regard to it and he has indicated that personally he is friendly to the project.

The county auditors in state convention at Des Moines, endorsed J. F. Wall, of Mt. Ayr, for auditor of state. They refused to go on record as asking the legislature for an increase in the salaries of county auditors, although they believe the present system is unjust.

The supreme court holds that John McGregor, the man who first came into fame by his attack on the character of Governor Shaw, must pay $1,500 damages to William H. Rule of Crawford county, for malicious prosecution.

Governor Cummins issued his first proclamation on the 20th. It is for the purpose of setting apart January 29, the birthday of the martyred president, as a time for the giving of donations to help build the proposed McKinley monument at Canton.

The matter of state printing and state binding has been brought up in a bill by Senator Lambert to define the duties of state printer and state binder. The purpose of the bill is to effect a complete checking system rendering the system less subject to fraud than it has been in the past. It provides for the delivery of a portion of the printing to the secretary of the executive council and a portion to the secretary of state, thus making two having a check on those offices.

J. C. Milliman, chairman of the St. Louis fair commission representing Iowa, has filed with Governor Cummins an estimate showing the scope and plan of the exhibit of this state at St. Louis on a $250,000 basis, as designed by the commission. The body recommends that the $250,000 be spent as follows:

|---|---|
| Preliminary promotion | $ 5,000 |
| Building and plumbing | 100,000 |
| Architect | 5,000 |
| Commissioners | 9,000 |

| Apiary | 1,000 |
| Forestry and minerals | 3,000 |
| Manufactures and machinery | 6,000 |
| Fine arts | 1,500 |
| Educational | 6,000 |
| Historical and woman's department | 6,000 |
| Press | 1,000 |
| Dedication exercises and special days | 7,000 |
| Music | 4,000 |
| Illustrated printing for the state | 5,000 |
| Sundries, contingent and publicity | 12,000 |
| Decorating grounds, grades, walks, etc. | 5,000 |
| Furniture, fixtures, heat and wiring building | 8,000 |
| Bureau of information | 3,000 |
| Live stock | 15,000 |

Secretary Davidson of the executive council has drafted, with the approval of the executive council, bills for two important changes in the laws relating to the taxation of telephone, telegraph and express companies. Under the present laws the companies make their annual reports to the auditor of state. In practice, however, the reports are compiled by the secretary of the executive council and the assessments are certified out by the secretary of the executive council. The bills provide that the reports shall be made to the secretary of the council instead of the auditor of state. A section will be proposed for addition to the bill for the taxation of telephone and telegraph companies, and a similar one is drafted for the law relating to express taxation. The effect would be to require the companies to submit to the county auditor of each county profile maps, showing the extent of their line or route in the county by the government subdivision of forty acres. The maps will also be required to show the companies' subdivisions of land and other property. Possession of profile maps of this kind will enable the county auditor, it is believed, to certify out the assessment on any county by taxing districts with the least possible trouble. In order to assure the preparation of the profile maps the bills contain the provisions authorizing the county auditor to have the county surveyor make a map as required for each company having property in the county, the expense thereof to be added to the tax collected of the company by the county. The bills are intended to lessen some of the most serious difficulties that were encountered in the assessment of the telegraph, telephone and express companies last year.

The state board of control will ask the legislature to fix the per capita support fund of the Cherokee Insane Hospital at $15. This is $2 in excess of the per capita at the other hospitals. But the board also recommends that the $2 be made a charge against the state treasury and that it be met by general taxation instead of by the counties which will send patients to the Cherokee institution. Unless the legislature does adjust the matter in that way the counties of northwest Iowa will be the victims of a considerable discrimination. This discrimination, indeed, has extended, already, over a number of years under the present and past system. For several years the per capita at Clarinda was much larger than at the other hospitals, also, and the northwestern counties of the state sent their patients to that institution. Besides paying this extra support for their insane above that paid by other counties, the northwestern counties have been forced to transport their insane and their convicts, much further than any other counties. For this reason the representatives in the legislature from that section and the board urge that in the case of Cherokee the counties be put on an equal basis at the beginning. The board of control hopes, also, that if this plan is followed by the legislature, at this time, it will lead, eventually, to making all of the insane hospitals state charges and their support payable direct from the state treasury instead of by counties. An emergency appropriation of $138,000 for Cherokee furnishing, etc., has been introduced in the senate.

State Superintendent Barrett has drafted a measure providing for the examination of teachers by county boards of examiners along the line formulated by the educational council of the State Teachers' Association. Copies of this measure have been forwarded to all the members of the legislative committee of the association, accompanied by questions asking for suggestions along certain lines. As soon as this measure is drafted to the satisfaction of all the members of the legislative committee, it will be introduced in the legislature. There is some doubt as to its passage on account of the opposition of the county superintendents. It provides that the examing board shall consist of the county superintendent and two members to be appointed by him and confirmed by the board of supervisiors. It is comparatively easy to secure legislation so far as it affects the three educational institutions of the state, for when they are visited by the members of the legislaure their value and needs are easily perceived. It is difficult to secure legislation for the public schools, because they make no great showing, and the legislators have no opportunity to visit them, except individually. Mr. Barrett says it is very difficult to interest the members of the legislature in the public schools, and to this fact he attributes the difficulty in securing needed legislation.

Gilbert B. Pray of Des Moines, formerly clerk of the supreme court of Iowa, has offered the state historical department his Indian collection, said to be one of the most extensive and most valuable collections of Indian relics in the country. For instance, there is included in the collection a large number of Navajoe blankets. Some of these blankets are worth $150 to $200. They are woven by the Indians so carefully and so closely that a blanket held at the four corners will hold water. There are a great many relics in the collection which have been gathered from various localities and which are invaluable as historical evidences of these people. Mr. Pray has spent a great many years, in fact, most of the years since he attained manhood, in the formation of this collection. It is understood that he proposes to give it to the department outright.

MARY THE MAID OF THE INN....

A Story of English Life.

By JOSEPH HATTON.

CHAPTER XIII.

The witness glanced anxiously for a moment at his mother, and noticed the deprecatory headshakings of his friends, who desired to convey by signal their desire that he should not get himself into trouble.

"I have done nothing that I know of to be threatened or to be ashamed of," said Jack defiantly, "and I say again, my lords and gentlemen, I am not afraid of incriminating myself. Do your worst."

The judge sat up very straight in his throne of justice, the learned counsel for both prosecution and defense stood up.

The court was deadly still. All the immediate interest of the trial was centered in Meadows. For the moment it was as if he were on trial, not the prisoner at the bar.

The prisoner, Parker, flushed to the roots of his hair with excitement, and then became pale as a ghost. He admired the courage, the bravado of the witness, and could not help a passing regret that this brave fellow had not been his companion instead of that wretched Foster, who had so far saved his neck, though he was a thousand times more guilty than he.

As the judge was about to speak, the high sheriff, who was not only his lordship's host in York, but had been a friend of the judge at college, whispered:

"Forgive me; this young man was the girl's lover; he thinks he is serving her by his reticence; he is as honest and true a young fellow as there is in all the country."

The judge listened to his friend with a sign of impatience; but the remark no doubt had a good effect.

"Witness," he said, "but for your very evident position here and what is due to the court I should at once commit you for contempt; but I am willing to postpone my decision in that direction until the close of the day; what course I shall then pursue will depend upon your own conduct meanwhile."

"Thank you, my lord," said the witness, amidst a general sigh of relief.

"Now, sir, listen to me. You went to the Heather-bell tavern and warned the prisoner that he was suspected of the murder of Squire Bellingham?"

"No, I did not."

"The landlord has sworn to the contrary. I have every desire to be generous to you, Mr. Meadows, consistent with my duty, and I have been reminded that you are my witness. I therefore go out of my way to inform you that the landlord of the Heather-bell has told us exactly the contrary."

"Has he?" said Meadows. "Then he has not told the truth."

"You persist in that?"

"I do."

"Then you may stand down."

"Stay a moment," said the counsel for the defense, proceeding to cross-examine the witness in the most friendly manner. Meadows was not a man he would have called for the defense. "You did not warn the prisoner that he was suspected of the murder of Squire Bellingham?"

"No, sir."

"Why did you not?"

"Because I did not know that he had been murdered."

"When was the first time you knew officially of the murder and the name of the victim?"

"On Oct. 25."

"You remember that date distinctly," remarked the judge.

"Yes, my lord."

"Why?"

"Because, my lord, it was Mary Lockwood's birthday, and I had always been accustomed to take her a little present to the Star and Garter on the 25th, and thinking about it, mother came in to where I was smoking a pipe with her brother, and she said they had found Squire Bellingham's body, and that he had been murdered."

"If the learned counsel has finished his cross-examination"—the learned counsel nodded to the judge to signify that he had—"you may stand down; I shall not commit you for contempt of court."

Mary Lockwood was the next witness.

On her name being called, there was a general buzz of conversation throughout the court, followed by a dead silence as the poor girl was assisted into the witness box.

She wore a simple hat and cloak, the latter completely enveloping her figure, the hat tied with a black ribbon under her chin. She was very pale, but this heightened her beauty in the estimation of the ladies and gentlemen of the country, who were present in great numbers.

Instead of the strong, hearty, rural beauty they had expected, they saw a young woman of a refined and gentle bearing, with soft blue eyes and long lashes that fell in dark lines upon her cheeks. When she spoke they heard a soft, sweet voice, the sorrowful tones of which made many of the ladies weep even before they had come to the most touching incidents of her evidence.

The prosecution having decided not to call old Morley, the ostler's evidence being deemed sufficient as to the arrival and identification of the stranger guests, and Morley, being like Meadows a very unwilling witness, the old man came into court with Mary, and when she entered the box room was made for him to sit with Mrs. Meadows and her brother, and other friends, who were now joined by Jack.

The witness, who had bearded the court and still retained his freedom, divided for a moment or two the public interest with Mary, who glanced in the direction where he was sitting, and then rested her eyes upon the rail of the box in which she stood—a martyr for love.

"Your name is Mary Lockwood?"

"Yes."

"You live at the Star and Garter Inn, at Kirkstall?"

"Yes."

"Is the landlord your uncle?"

"Yes."

"And do you assist him in his business?"

"Yes."

"Do you know the prisoner at the bar?"

"I do."

"Do you remember the night when you first saw him?"

"Yes."

"When was it?"

"On Oct. 15."

"Where did you see him?"

"In the bar."

"In the bar of the Star and Garter Inn?"

"Yes."

"Was there another man with him?"

"Yes."

"I think the court needs no further evidence as to Foster, who is not before us, unless the learned counsel has any new facts in regard to him which he conceives to be of importance."

"Thanks, your lordship," said the counsel, who was quite ready to take a hint of the growing aproach of supper time, and the determination of his lordship to finish the case without rising.

"Did the prisoner remain at the inn until Oct. 19?"

"Yes."

"What did he say when he left?"

"I don't remember."

"Did he say he was going to London?"

"I think so."

"You are not sure?"

"No."

"I will only ask you one question upon a matter that cannot fail to be more or less painful to you, and you may answer it simply yes or no, and I will refer to it no further. Were you pledged to marry the prisoner?"

"Yes."

The answer came softly and slowly, but much in the same tone as Mary had answered the other questions, only that she seemed to struggle with herself against a desire to turn and look at the prisoner, the lawyer's clerk having advised her to try and resist any desire to look at him, but simply to attend to the questions of counsel and keep her eyes on the judge, or straight before her.

Presently, when the counsel came to the events of the fatal night of the wager, much of the calmness of her demeanor left her.

The story of the wager had already been told by Taylor, and what she did and said on her return had been vouched for by several witnesses.

The court was, nevertheless, breathless to hear an account of Mary's adventures from her own lips.

She took them along with her in imagination to the abbey bent on winning the wager for Mr. Barnsley, and the learned counsel elicited the facts from her with a gentleness of manner and questioning that was marked in contrast with the treatment which Jack Meadows had received at his hands.

When the crucial part of her story was reached, so far as it concerned the prisoner, Mary glanced at the dock with anxious and tearful eyes.

"When you were picking a bunch of elder, the hat blew from one of the men's heads and rolled to your feet?"

"A hat rolled close to me."

"Yes, so you have told us—you saw the two men?"

"Yes."

"They had hats on their heads when they passed by you?"

"I suppose so."

"Don't you know so?"

"No."

"Was there a moon?"

"Yes."

"It was shining clear and bright?"

"No, it was fitful."

"It was fitful; but you saw two men carrying something between them which appeared to you to be the body of a dead person?"

"Yes," said Mary, with a deep sigh.

"And when they were a short distance from where you had hidden, you saw the hat of one of them fall off?"

"No, I did not see it fall off."

"Very well, you did not see it fall off, but you heard one of them make a remark about a hat?"

"Yes."

"What was the remark?"

"Curse the hat!"

"Was that all?"

"No."

"What else?"

"You can get it when the job is done."

"You had no doubt at the time that the remark referred to one of them losing his hat in the wind, and that the hat you picked up was the hat so lost?"

She hesitated.

The question was repeated.

"I thought so," she replied, "but I might have been mistaken."

"Yes," said the learned counsel, "quite so; but when you got back to the inn you said 'Murder has been done and this is one of their hats,' and you recognized the hat?"

"I looked at it."

"Yes, you looked at it; you had seen it before?"

No answer.

"You thought you knew to whom it belonged?"

No answer.

"I will give you time; I am sorry to have to press these questions."

The prisoner looked at the girl, who glanced at him in an appealing way. The tears stood in her eyes as he noted her deep distress. The silence in court was awful.

"You had picked up the hat, you know, and had run home with it in your hand."

"I did not know what I was doing."

"You would be very much excited and disturbed, we know; but when your eyes fell upon the hat in the light of the fire and the candles in the bar of the inn you were struck with the resemblance of the hat to one you had seen before?"

No answer.

"You must answer the question," said the judge in kindly, but firm tones.

"Yes," murmured the witness.

"What was there peculiar about the hat that made you think you had seen it before?"

No answer.

"Was it a ribbon?"

Still no reply.

"I can quite understand that these questions distress you; would to God it were not my duty to put them! I never found my duty so hard to perform, I assure you."

The prisoner burst into tears; they filled his eyes and blinded him; they coursed down his pale cheeks, but he did not move a muscle; he seemed to be more or less unconscious.

Floating Button Factory.

Taking the factory to the raw material instead of bringing the material to the factory, is an innovation just put in operation on the Mississippi river by a button factory, and it is a plan that has many practical advantages.

This factory is about forty-two feet long and twelve feet wide, fitted with all the necessary machinery for the manufacture of buttons, and provided with a three-horse-power engine for its work.

The principal material used by this factory is mussel shells, which are found at nearly all points along the river, and one of the great expenses in conducting the business heretofore has been the cost of transporting the shells. Now the factory has reversed the operation and will go to the mussels.

When a bed of shells is found the boat will drop its anchor and go to work. When the bed is exhausted it will move on to a new location. In this fashion it will go from state to state, from Minnesota to Louisiana, passing along with the seasons, and always enjoying the most desirable weather of the Mississippi valley.

Use of Revolvers.

I was present at the trial where a man with a split-second watch timed a very ordinary denizen of the border, who drew his six-shooter and emptied it in a second and a quarter, says Munsey's Magazine. It takes a tyro that long to pull the trigger once when he is all ready. The experts do not pull the trigger at all. Long ago it was demonstrated that it was vastly quicker to file off the pawl that locks a gun and trust to "fanning" the hammer, than it was to shoot even the easiest of double action revolvers in the ordinary way. This explains how it was possible for the famous man-killers to accomplish marvels against other and equally desperate men as well armed as themselves.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, Jan. 21.—Senate.—Shortly after the senate was called to order Mr. Herriott announced the standing committees of the senate. The senate then proceeded to election of two United States senators. Senator Blanchard nominated Senator Allison for the long term and Senator Lambert nominated Judge E. H. Thayer of Clinton for the democrats. Senator Allison received 36 votes and Thayer 10, while four were absent. Senator Allison was declared duly elected on the part of the senate.

Senator Hubbard then nominated Senator Dolliver for the short term and Senator Lambart nominated John J. Seerley of Burlington. Dolliver received 36 votes and Seerley 10, four being absent or not voting. Mr. Herriott then declared Senator Dolliver elected to the United States senate on the part of the senate.

After the introduction of bills and concurrence in house messages, the senate adjourned until 10 o'clock Wednesday.

House.—The house proceeded at once to the election of United States senators. Dunham, of Delaware, nominated Senator Allison for the long term and the nomination was seconded by Hamann of Davenport. Langan, of Clinton, nominated Judge Thayer, of Clinton, and Dodds, of Des Moines, seconded the nomination. The vote resulted: Allison, 82; Thayer, 16; absent, 2. The speaker pro tem. then declared William B. Allison elected on the part of the house to the United States senate for the term beginning March 4, 1903. Temple, of Clarke, nominated Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver for the term ending March 4, 1907, in a brief eulogistic address. Kerr, of Grundy, seconded it. Jaeger, of Des Moines, seconded by Walters, of Tama, nominated John J. Seerley for the short term. The vote stood: Dolliver, 83; Seerley, 16; absent, 1. Senator Dolliver was thereupon declared duly elected to the United States senate for the term named on the part of the house. Jones, of Mahaska, announced a concurrent resolution, which was adopted, providing for a meeting with the senate in joint convention at noon Wednesday, January 22, for the election of United States senators. Later the senate concurred in the resolution. At 5 p. m. the speaker announced the standing committees of the house.

Des Moines, Jan. 22.—Senate.—Aside from the introduction of bills, no important business was transacted. Bills were introduced to fix the county superintendent's salary at $1,500; to create a commission to fix the boundaries of western Iowa; to repeal the law requiring lists of building and loan stockholders to be furnished assessors; to reduce the interest on county warrants from 6 to 5 per cent; to make the park commission laws applicable to cities of 22,000 in order to take in Burlington. The appropriation bills for the state educational institutions were introduced in both houses as follows: State normal, $175,600; state university, $363,000 and $35,000 additional annual support; agricultural college, $340,000 and $50,000 annual additional support.

House.—The house voted to permit the introduction of petitions only when the subject of them is being considered. Bills were introduced in the house as follows: To substitute electrocution for hanging; to elect supervisors by counties instead of supervisor districts; to enact a primary law; to require the state treasurer to deposit state money at not less than 1 per cent; to establish a normal school at Knoxville; to establish reformatories at Anamosa. Kendall introduced several very important mining bills.

Joint Session.—William B. Allison, of Dubuque, and Jonathan P. Dolliver, of Fort Dodge, were at a joint session of the senate and the house of the Twenty-ninth General Assembly held at noon today in the hall of the house of represenatives, elected over E. H. Thayer and John J. Seerley to the United States senate, the former for a full term of six years beginning March 4, 1903, and the latter to fill out the unexpired term caused by the death of the late John H. Gear, which began March 4, 1901. The vote was the strict party vote. Five members were absent, leaving but 145 votes in the two houses, of which Allison and Dolliver received 119 and Thayer and Seerley 26. At the joint session, John R. Carter, of Sioux City, was elected editor of the Code supplement; Bernard Murphy, of Vinton, state printer, and Howard Tedford, of Mt. Ayr, state binder. The vote on these officers was practically the same as that on United States senator.

Des Moines, Jan. 24.—Senate—Allyn introduced a bill to create a state commission to examine auctioneers and issue certificates to those who pass; provided that those who have practiced five years and can produce a certificate of good character may be admitted without examination. Porter proposed a law, requiring an eight hour day on all public work, on work aided by the public, and in coal mines. A cumpulsory free text book law was introduced by Hazleton; a law to aid the state to recover $456,000 from the federal government on account of money furnished during the civil war to equip troops was introduced by Senator Hubbard; and appropriation bills for Clarinda $63,500 and Council Bluffs $13,100.

House.—Bills were introduced as follows: By Anderson of Warren, to prevent a white person from marrying a person having as much as one-eighth part of negro blood; by Bealer of Linn, giving savings banks right to lend money outside of state; by Hamann of Scott, to appropriate $75,200 to Soldiers' Orphans home at Davenport; by Powers, for the combining of and transporting pupils to schools too small to maintain separately; by Sweeley of Woodbury, giving cities right to own or to regulate telephone systems as to changes for service, etc.; by Wilson of Washington, to repeal the law relative to the teaching of music in the public schools; by Campbell, providing a maximum penalty of twenty years or $1,000 fine, or both, for advising or employing a person to commit murder. An important resolution was introduced by Warren of Marion providing that the state memoralize congress to preserve the rights of the state in the meandered lake beds, of which a great number exist in northern Iowa.

Des Moines, Jan. 27.—Senate.—Hayward introduced a bill abolishing days of grace; Bishop introduced a bill to make debts offsets against all property assessments instead of moneys and credits alone; Courtright a bill to authorize health insurance; Junkin to codify the collateral inheritance laws, and Lister to prohibit migratory divorces. Appropriation bills were introduced for Cherokee, $138,000; for the Soldiers' Orphans' Home at Davenport, $75,000; for the state historical building, $150,000 for the biennium and $300,000 for the four years, and for the Benedict Home, $10,000.

House.—N. E. Kendall moved to reconsider resolution he had made regarding petitions only being presented when subject to which they referred was under consideration. Motion carried and hereafter petitions may be presented at any time. Following are important bills introduced: By Boysen, to appropriate $33,100 to Girls' Industrial School at Mitchellville and $47,450 to Boys' School at Eldora; by English, to appropriate $10,000 to Benedict Home at Des Moines; by Hawk, for Torrens system of land registration; by Larrabee, to decrease width of highways from 66 to 50 feet; by Mordhorst, to permit steamboat companies to be sued in the same manner as railways; by Nagle, to prevent ball playing on Sunday; by Barker, to remove circle from ballot; by Langan of Clinton, to pension judges who have served four terms and are 75 years of age.

THRICE DECLINES OFFICE

SCHLEY REITERATES HE WILL NOT ENTER POLITICS.

Hero of Santiago Given a Magnificent Reception by the People of Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Rear Admiral W. S. Schley Saturday thrice declared that he had had no intention of entering politics. His remarks were calculated to set at rest for all time the political ambitions which some of his admirers have entertained for him. He said that no office, however high, would tempt him to jeopardize the love which the people of this country have expressed for him.

The day for the admiral was a round of receptions at each of which he expressed his gratitude for tokens of esteem and approbation.

The demonstrations reached their climax in the banquet given in his honor by the Hamilton club in the banquet hall of the Auditorium. Approximately 650 guests were present.

Admiral Schley arose amid applause, and after thanking the members of the Hamilton club for the welcome accorded him, said:

"If I, in my long career of forty-five years have done anything that is worthy of your applause and approval then my satisfaction is complete.

"I want only to say that I am simply a sailor and that I have served you in storm and in calm, in sunshine and in bad weather, from pole to pole and from sun to sun. The only motive of action has always been 'my country and my people.' (Applause.) I desire to say most emphatically that I have no desire to be other than a sailor. I have no aspiration for any civil office, however high it may be. (Applause.) My one ambition has been to serve you faithfully, loyally, devotedly (applause) and if I have succeeded in doing that, the measure of my ambition is full, and my only ambition is that I may retain for the rest of the years that may be vouchsafed me, your love, your esteem and your respect. (Cheers.) I would not care to jeopardize that by seeking or accepting any office where I should be condemned to follow always rather than to remain in the one profession that I have chosen where there are occasionally opportunities to lead. (Applause.) That I want to say to you all from the bottom of my heart and with absolute earnestness of meaning."

PAID $5,000,000 FOR THEM.

Cost of Danish West Indies Informally Known.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Following the invariable rule in such cases, the state department officials decline to make public any of the details of the purchase of the Danish islands, so that it is not possible to state positively the price to be paid, though this is believed to be in the neighborhood of $5,000,000. It is known also that Denmark has abandoned the position she was inclined to occupy toward the conservation of the political rights of the inhabitants of the islands, and leaves the United States a free hand to deal with them, without pledge of American citizenship or of free trade privileges.

Washington, Jan. 25.—The treaty of cession of the Danish West Indies islands from Denmark to the United States was signed at the state department yesterday by Secretary Hay and Constantine Brun, the Danish minister. The treaty will be submitted to the senate for ratification immediately.

Needs Immediate Attention.

A fact was developed at the recent State teacher's convention which brings discredit to the state as well as serious damage. We refer to the fact that the great State of Iowa gives less remuneration to its teachers in country schools than any other state in the Union excepting Louisiana. As a result a majority of the teaching force are in the business as a temporary, a sort of ad interim, occupation to fill in the time between leaving school and finding remunerative employment. There are three classes of teachers who accept these low wage positions. First, those who would rather accept low wages than be unemployed, while looking for something better; second, those who, while able to do a kind of work that will enable them to get a school somewhere would rather "keep school" in their easy perfunctory and comfortable way, than to try for positions which would require enterprise and energy to hold them. The third class are men and women who propose to be up to-date teachers and, while doing good work for the lowest wages. take their first opportunity to secure position in town or country schools where the pay is better. The result is that first-class experienced teachers in the country schools are the exceptions rather than the rule, and here is the damage. There is just as much need of the best teachers in the rural districts as in the city. Each district needs a teacher who would hold his or her place in any school year after year. To get such teachers the wages must be sufficient, and there are few districts that are not able to furnish the necessary pay. The Iowa teaching force is entirely changed every three years. That is, the old ones quit or go to other states, a new set takes their places. By far the largest portion of these "quitters" and new beginners are in the rural districts. The remedy is, up-to-date provisions in facilities and reasonable pay. Good teachers belong in the class of skilled workers. The shovel brigade's wages offer them no inducement.—Dows Advocate.

A Profitable Inuestment.

"I was troubled for about seven years with my stomach and in bed half my time," says E. Demick, Somerville, Ind. "I spent about $1,000 and never could get anything to help me until I tried Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. I have taken a few bottles and am entirely well." You don't live by what you eat, but by what you digest and assimilate. If your stomach doesn't digest your food you are really starving. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does the stomach's work by digesting your food. You don't have to diet. Eat all you want. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles. J.L.Harr.

COMMITTEES ANNOUNCED

MACHINERY OF THE LEGISLATURE NOW IN WORKING ORDER.

List of the Men Who Will Shape the Legislation of the Present Session.

The standing committees of senate were announced by Lieutenant Governor Herriott on the 21st. In announcing the committees, Mr. Herriott spoke as follows:

"Senators, pursuant to your directions and the procedure of the senate heretofore, I have assigned the members to various committees for the transaction of the necessary work of the session. The lists are now submitted. Respecting the assignments I desire first to submit a suggestion regarding a rearrangement of the committees in the matter of their rank; second, to set forth the reasons for certain changes and additions made; and, third, to indicate the purpose in view in the make up of the committees.

"By custom the order of mention in their first announcement has been taken as significant of the rank and importance of committees. At each legislative session temporary and fluctuating interests have induced presiding officers to shift their order more or less. This naturally has resulted in some confusion and ill-assortment in rank. Committees related to each other are not grouped together, but are scattered here and there in the list. Thus the committee on schools, No. 11, appears between the committees on insurance and banks; that on educational institutions, No. 22, is flanked by public health and military. Later charitable institutions, No. 28, comes between federal relations and elections. The rank of the committee pertaining to our industries and commerce is not less illogically assorted, the order being: Agriculture, No. 14; labor, No. 15; mines and mining, No. 16; commerce, No. 31; manufactures, No. 32, and horticulture and forestry, No. 35. If one were to judge solely from the order of mention manufactures and commerce are matters of little concern to the people of Iowa.

"A better arrangement would present the committees in groups comprising those assigned related subjects, and group following group in the order of relative importance. After the committees of ways and means, judiciary and appropriations it is suggested that those relating to the industries and labor interests of the state follow, then those on business corporations, then those on city, county and state affairs and institutions, and finally political and miscellaneous committees. While it is within the discretion of the president under your grant of authority to make such rearrangement he has not deemed it advisable, but submits the matter as worthy of your consideration.

"In harmony with the recommendation just made the committee on agriculture has been enlarged and advanced. The predominant interests of our citizens and taxpayers are in the farm, dairy and garden and industries subsidiary thereto and the advancement of the welfare of those devoted to them is the chief concern of this body. The great wealth which they represent, the high distinction Iowa has attained in the raising of cereals and stock, both on this continent and abroad, the large number of state and local institutions and societies supported or assisted by the state for the promotion of agriculture makes appropriate the action here taken.

"In the past few years there has developed a marked popular interest in our public libraries. The number and influence of these educational institutions have greatly increased. The desirability of promoting them, the importance of extending the usefulness of our traveling libraries and the work of the library commission, and the needs of our state and historical libraries at the capital have led me to enlarge the committee on 'libraries.' In a rearrangement as urged this committee should be advanced to the group comprising the state's institutions.

"The committee on rules has been increased from five to nine in number, and the committee on fish and game from three to five.

"A new committee has been created to consider matters connected with telegraph and telephone companies. The increased use of telephones in our towns and cities and of late among our farmers has produced a host of problems. The granting of franchises, the rights of such companies in our streets and highways, the location of poles and wires and the general regulation of such service are matters that require particular legislative consideration.

"Mindful of the fact that you come to this chamber as representatives of the people who support our state government by contributions of taxes levied on their property, the majority of the membership of the two ranking committees in particular have been selected with a view to reformative changes in our revenue laws which the people have indicated they desire. For several years there has been an increasing popular demand for reform in our methods of assessing corporate property for taxation, especially the property of railroads. In the recent conventions of the party whose adherents prevail in this assembly the contests were squarely made on this issue; numerous resolutions were adopted calling for such modification of our laws as would insure not only the equitable assessment of the railroad but the full valuation of their property; and the nominations for state offices were generally made in harmony with such sentiments variously expressed by the rank and file of the party. The committees on ways and means and judiciary that have most to do with the consideration of revenue measures have, therefore, been composed for the most part of those favorable to legislation that will prescribe definite and uniform procedure which shall guide and assist our administrative officers in assessing railroads and thereby reduce to the lowest degree practicable the intrusion of personal preferences or prejudices in this important work of government or the perversion of assessorial power. All views have been recognized and some who may oppose material modification of the existing statutes have been included in the make-up of the committees.

"Aside from selecting a favorable majority of each committee that will be concerned with such reform measures, I have not presumed to indicate, let alone dictate, what precise form or what the character of the needed legislation should be. This, as I conceive my duties, would be to go beyond my province as your presiding officer. It is perhaps unnecessary for me to say that I shall be in full sympathy with any well ordered measure having such needed reforms in view that may be agreed upon, but no little practical experience in the administration of the present law warrants me in urging the desirability of substantial modifications in the directions indicated."

ADDRESSED BY DOLLIVER

JUNIOR SENATOR TALKS TO THE LEGISLATORS.

Address Before the Joint Convention Which Had Re-elected the Two Senators.

Des Moines, Jan. 23.—Following is the address of Senator Dolliver before the joint convention which had just re-elected Senators Allison and Dolliver to the United States senate:

"Mr. President: Senators and Representatives of the joint convention, it is a very great pleasure to me to have the opportunity for a few moments before the convention for the purpose of acknowledging the honor which you have conferred upon me—an honor which I shall always cherish as the highest distinction of my life. You have not only elected me to this great office, but you have given me a great opportunity, and by the strength of all the ambitions and purposes that are in me I here promise you and through you the great constituency in behalf of which you have acted, to be diligent and faithful so far as in me lies in their service.

"It is a fortunate thing to represent a state like ours. It has for more than a generation had a distinct leadership in the affairs of the American people. Its leadership is no new thing. It dates almost from the entrance of the state into the Union. In so far as it depended upon individuals we owe our unbroken record largely to the influence of the man now grown venerable in our service this day for the sixth time honored, and who, throughout all his years of public service has never lost sight of the land marks of common sense.

"The leadership of Iowa has been unbroken even when many states of the union have looked upon us with more or less question, if not suspicion, and yet when the state of New York anounced its willingness to repudiate at least a part of the public debt, the state of Iowa was standing steadfastly and solidly in the defense of the public treasury of the United States. When the state of Ohio, torn by political rivalists was following the wild notions of Geo. H. Pendleton and Samuel F. Gray, the state of Iowa was quietly recording its opinion in favor of the resumption of special payment and well ordered government in the United States.

"When the state of Massachusetts was chained to the triumphal chariot of Gen. Benjamin B. Butler in the midst of what might have been admitted to be historic prestige in that commonwealth, this state of ours was quietly gonig about its political business without any delusions of any kind whatsoever. And so it is to me gratifying to be called upon to speak for a commonwealth with a record like that.

"We have for more than a generation borne steadfast, and I may say unfailing witness in behalf of the economic system which we inherited from our fathers, which in our own time, before the eyes of all men, has wrought the present day miracles of industrial and commercial progress.

"Without any special or direct interest as many of the communities had in the schedule of the protective tariff the state of Iowa has always been able to find in the general prosperity of the American market places an adequate reason for its faith in the principles represented in that system.

"There never has been a time and there never will be a time when an American industry, making an unequaled, and even a precarious fight with foreign competitors will not find among our people the spirit of encouragement and helpfulness expressed in the laws of the United States. And yet nobody is any longer blind to the fact that with many of the industries of the United States the rates of duty, which, in 1897, were regarded as reasonable and were, in fact, reasonable, have since that time, owing to the curious development of our industrial and commercial life, become unnecessary, and, in many cases, even absurd. They stand on our statute boks today no longer a shield for American labor, but they have in many cases been turned as a weapon of offense against the American market itself.

"I believe that I speak for the average judgment and good sense of the whole community of Iowa when I say that these defects in our laws ought to be corrected, and I express a confidence that the congress of the United States will be able, in a spirit friendly to the principles upon which the protective tariff rests, to correct these defects in a business-like way, unless we are compelled to admit that congress has become helpless in the presence of questions like these.

"William McKinley, standing almost in the presence of the shadow of martyrdom, uttered words which we all feel were words of truth and soberness. I believe the opportunity will come to me and to my distinguished colleague to do whatever can be done in the present situation of our national affairs and give expression and effect to the opinions propounded by our late president on the eve of his final taking off. His name stands for a new era in American affairs, an era that will be forever associated with his fame, an era of enlarged markets, an era of expansion of our commerce, an era of reciprocity, not only with our neighbors near at home, but with the nations of the world and the islands of the sea.

"The hand that killed William McKinley was not aimed at him. Nobody could think of such a thing as killing that gentle and kindly man. It was aimed at our institutions, at our government, at our laws, at all government and at all law. They killed poor McKinley, but they never touched the institutions of the United States. They are invulnerable; they are imperishable. We did not know and we did not care when the hour was that the reins of authority slipped from his hands into the hands of another, but I feel sure, that without distinction of party, we rejoice together with the millions of our countrymen that when his hand fell from the helm that is passed to that man of courage and of sturdy manhood, that sturdy soldier of the United States—Theodore Roosevelt.

"And now I desire again to thank you and to wish this session of the general assembly the full measure of success, and for the administration of Governor Cummins inaugurated under circumstances so auspicious a place famous and memorable in the annals of Iowa."

An interesting lawsuit will soon be tried in Seattle. A telephone girl refused to connect a subscriber with the fire department when he desired to give notice of a fire which had just broken out. A novel system of adornment for rooms has been perfected by a London Electrician. The walls are lined with panels of transparent glass, which are faced with well-known pictures, through which filters subdued electric light. The effect is the same as the light of a stained glass window, and is quite artistic. There is no glare, and the pictures can be chosen according to the taste of the owner of the room.

The maddest man in Kansas is a gentleman named Martin, of Holton. He is such a rabid prohibitionist that he wouldn't use whiskey to kill bedbugs. Almost every day he receives word that some Kansas City or St. Joseph whiskey house has sent him a jug of liquor by express. He never calls at the express office for it, but other parties call and sign for it, using his name, and trot off smilingly, anticipating a delightful jag.

OLD JOE, THE NIGHT WATCHMAN

(From the Pall Mall Gazette, London.)

How often on returning home late on a dreary winter's night has our sympathy gone out to the poor old night-watchman as he sat huddled up over his cage fire, overlooking the excavations which our city council in their wisdom or otherwise, allow the different water companies to make so frequently in our congested streets. In all weathers and under all climatic conditions, the poor old night-watchman is obliged to keep watch over the companies' property, and to see that the red lights are kept burning. What a life, to be sure; what privations and hardships; no wonder they have aches and pains, which nothing but St. Jacob's Oil can alleviate.

"Old Joe" is in the employ of the Lambeth Water Works, and is well and favorably known. He has been a night-watchman for many years, in the course of which he has undergone many experiences. What with wet and cold, he contracted rheumatism and sciatica, which fairly doubled him up, and it began to look a serious matter for old Joe whether he would much longer be able to perform his duties, on which his good wife and himself depended for a livelihood; but as it happened, a passerby, who had for some nights noticed Old Joe's painful condition, presented him with a bottle of St. Jacob's Oil, and told him to use it. Old Joe followed the advice given; he crawled home the next morning and bade his wife rub his aching back with the St. Jacob's Oil "a gentleman gave him," and undoubtedly his wife did rub, for when old Joe went on duty at night he met his friend and benefactor, to whom he remarked; "Them Oils you gave me, Guv'nor, did give me a doing; they was like pins and needles for a time, but look at me now," and old Joe began to run and jump about like a young colt. All pain, stiffness and soreness had gone; he had been telling everybody he met what St. Jacob's Oil had done for him. Old Joe says now he has but one ambition in life, and that is to always to be able to keep a bottle of St. Jacob's Oil by him for he says there is nothing like it in the world.

St. Jacob's Oil serves the rich and the poor, high and low the same way. It has conquered pain for fifty years, and it will do the same to the end of time. It has no equal, consequently no competitor; it has many cheap imitations, but simple facts like the above tell an honest tale with which nothing on earth can compete.

FROM SASKATCHEWAN, WESTERN CANADA.

In a letter written from Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, one of the districts of western Canada, by Henry Laughlin to Dr. C. T. Field of Chase, Michigan, and which appeared in the Reed City (Michigan) Clarion, appeared the following:

"If any one should ask you how I like it up here, tell them I am perfectly well satisfied; for me it is just the place. I have as good a piece of land as ever laid outdoors. Wouldn't exchange it for the whole of Lake County, or at least the township of Chase.

"Of course, I have not been here very long, but as much of the country as I have seen it cannot be beat anywhere. We had as good crops here last fall as I ever saw, and everything gets ripe in good shape. We had as good ripe potatoes as I ever ate in my life. There is no better place for stock on the continent than here. Horses and cattle will do as good running out all winter here as they do where they are fed all winter there. Have built me a residence and now all I want is a wife to keep house for me. I have some breaking already done on my place, but next summer I intend to have more done and then I will be ready for business.

"We have had a very fine winter so far. It has not been much below zero, if any, excepting about a week in the middle of November. It has been quite cold the past day or two. We are in log shanties, and they are just muddied up on the outside, and nothing has frozen on the inside as yet. There is no wind or rain, just nice steady weather all the time."

VISIT IOWA CITY.

LEGISLATURE AND STATE OFFICERS VISIT UNIVERSITY.

Governor Cummins Dedicates New Hall of Liberal Arts.

Des Moines, Jan. 24.—Two hundred and twenty-five members of the legislature and others left Des Moines on the 7 a. m. Rock Island train for Iowa City. Ninety per cent of the members of the legislature took advantage of the excursion. Among the passengers were Gov. A. B. Cummins, Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver, Lieutenant Gov. John Herriott Speaker Eaton, Chancellor William Bayard Craig of Drake university and others.

Upon the arrival of the train Governor Cummins, members of the legislature and guests were escorted to the opera house headed by the battalion. Half way from the depot the marching party met the students of the university, with regents and members of of the legislature were seated on the ents formed a double line reaching to the opera house, the law and medical departments leading.

The opera house seats only 1,00 people and hundreds who desired admission were turned away. The members o the legislature were seated on the stage, other guests on the main floor and the battalion and as many as possible of the students in the balcony. On the stage, in addition to Goveront Cummins, were President McLean and members of the faculty, Senator Dolliver, Chancellor Craig of Drake university and President William F. King of Cornell college.

During the exercises a large banner hung suspended from the balcony staring the legislators in the face and bearing the words, "$250,000 for a New Medical Building."

The need for a new building to replace the structure used by the medical college destroyed by fire March 10, 1901, was emphasized by W. I. Babb, president of the board of regents, in a brief address reviewing the history of the building.

President McLean called the eleventh convention of the State university to order, after which S. A. Swisher presented Gov. Cummins with a gavel made from wood taken from the first capitol of the state.

Governor Cummins made a brief speech, talking less than ten minutes, and then introducing Senator Dolliver.

Dolliver also spoke briefly and in a happy vein. He said: "I have labored with the president of this institution to get the president of the United States to come here. He has other engagements. I also labored with him in trying to get the greatest unofficial man in the United States—Grover Cleveland—to come here. He had an engagement in South Carolina. I happened to dedicate this new building of yours two years ago, and now after all this unselfish devotion I find myself basely betrayed and the work of making a speech again thrust upon me.

"I know you do not want a long speech. With that banner staring me in the face I realize that you do not want to hear from me but want a chance to get at the men who sit behind me—members of the legislature."

Dolliver then spoke of dedicating the building not to Iowa, but to the world.

Speaker Eaton, Senators Garst and Junkin, Representatives Temple and Chancellor Craig spoke briefly congratulating the university on the successful completion of the building.

At the conclusion of the xercises the procession formed and marcehd to the liberal arts building. Here occurred the formal opening of the building, after which luncheon was served at the Kirkwood hotel. During the afternoon a reception was held in the new building and the guests visited the buildings of the university and other points of interest in the city. During the afternoon, also, President McLean held a reception at his residence in honor of Governor Cummins and members of the legislature.

Returning the train left Iowa City at 5:17 p. m.

Railway circles are considerably interested in the late proposition of the Rock Island to extend its line from Fraser to Marengo. It is understood the plan is complete, and that the work of constructing the new line will begin at once. A new line has been completed from Rockwell City to Fraser, Boone county. From there the road will take an eastern route, passing through Story county at or near Nevada, and cross the Northwestern at this point. The Great Western will probably be crossed at Baxter, and from there the line will be laid directly east through Jasper and Poweshiek counties and connecting with the main line of the Rock Island at Marengo. The distance from Rockwell City to Marengo is about 150 miles. It is the purpose of the Rock Island to cut off about fifty miles in their line from Rockwell City, as it is now, east. The freight traffic and especially the consignments of coal from northern and central Iowa points is growing to such an extent as to justify close connections for east bound freight. The project has been under consideration in the general headquarters of the Rock Island for some time, but until recently has not been made known among railway men.

Victor Fish and George Norman, for whom the detectives have been looking since January 1, when they are supposed to have burglarized Brown & Co.s general store at De Soto, and carried off goods valued at $2,000, were captured at Sioux Falls, S. There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. ## The Birth of a Famous Hymn.

In the November issue of the Ladies Home Journal Cleveland Moffet tells how the greatest of all singing evangelists, Ira D. Sankey, came to give the world a hymn that will live long after his voice is stilled. It was during Moody and Sankey's first visit to Great Britain. As they were entering the train in Glasgow, Mr. Sankey bought a copy of a penny religious paper called "The Christian Age." Looking over it, his eyes fell on some verses, the first two lines of which read thus:

"There were ninety and nine that safely lay in the shelter of the fold."

"Mr. Moody," exclaimed Mr. Sankey, "I have found the hymn that I've been looking for for years."

"What is it?" asked Mr. Moody.

"It's about a lost sheep."

Two days later, in Edinburgh, they held a great meeting in the Free Assembly Hall. As Doctor Bonar finished, Mr. Moody leaned over the pulpit and asked the singer if he had not a solo for the occasion. The thought of the verses he had read in the penny paper came to Mr. Sankey's mind, and opening his scrap book, in which he had pasted the clipping, he placed it before him on the organ, and after a moment of silent supplication, struck a full chord and began to sing. Note by note came the now famous song. He composed it as he went along. Thus he finished the first stanza.

Then, as he paused and played a few chords waiting to begin again, the thought came to him: "Can I sing the second stanza as I did the first? Can I remember the notes?" Concentrating his mind once more for the effort he began to sing. So he went on through for five stanzas, and after the services he put the melody in music.

Monthly, $1.00 per annum.

THE NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE paints with loving touch the historic landmarks of New England; it recalls the customs and traditions of the "old red schoolhouse days" and tells of the achievements of New Englanders in all parts of the world. It has distinguished contributors and is artistically printed and illustrated. Monthly, $3.00 per annum.

THE NORTHWESTERN AGRICULTURIST is the leading farm, livestock and home paper in the West. It interests every member of the family, having departments devoted to the interests of women as well as of men, on the farms in the Northwest. It is filled with instructive and interesting reading matter from beginning to end. Its various departments are under the charge of practical men, who have made a success themselves on their particular line on which they are writing. Amongst the department editors who contribute regularly to The Agriculturist, are Prof. Thomas Shaw, Professor of Animal Husbandry at the Minnesota State Agricultural College. Professor Shaw edits the sheep, beef cattle and horse departments; A. X. Hyatt, a dairyman known all over America as a practical and experienced dairy writer; Forest Henry, editor of the swine department, a man who has paid off mortgages by raising swine in Minnesota, and who is himself making money in swine raising now, not as a breeder but as a feeder of swine for market; A. R. Bush, in charge of the horticultural department, State Lecturer on Horticulture at the Minnesota Farmers' Institutes. These are only a few of the more important departments of the paper. Sample Copies will be sent free to all who are interested. The Northwestern Agriculturist is published semi-monthly, and already reaches over 95,000 farm homes twice a month. Subscription price fifty cents a year.

ARE YOU DEAF? ANY HEAD NOISES?

ALL CASES OF

DEAFNESS OR HARD HEARING ARE NOW CURABLE

by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, till I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success; consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

The Klemme Times.

VOLUME VII. KLEMME, IOWA, THURSDAY, FEB. 6, 1902. NUMBER 27.

Fire at Meservey.

Monday morning the St. Paul and Minneapolis elevator at Meservey burned to the ground, together with about 6,000 bushels of grain. The loss is estimated at about $10,000. The explosion of a gasoline engine caused the fire.

Favorite Nearly Everywhere

Constipation means dullness, depression, headache, generally disordered health. DeWitt's Little Early Risers stimulate the liver, open the bowels and relieve this condition. Safe, speedy and thorough. They never gripe. Favorite pills. J. L. Harr.

A Correction.

An entirely inexcusable error occurred in our notice of Thos. Gauley's sale last week. We were told to put the date as TUESDAY, FEB. 11, and how we happened to bungle it and get it wrong, we can't tell for the life of us. Don't forget that the correct date is Tuesday, Feb. 11, and be sure to attend.

Saved Him From Torture.

There is no more agonizing trouble than piles. The constant itching and burning make life intolerable. No position is comfortable. The torture is unceasing. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures piles at once. For skin diseases, cuts, burns, bruises, all kinds of wounds it is unequalled. J. S. Gerall, St. Paul, Ark., says: "From 1865 I suffered from the protruding, bleeding piles, and could find nothing to help me until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes completely cured me." Beware of counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

The Last Heard of It.

"My little boy took the croup one night and soon grew so bad you could hear him breath all over the house," says F. D. Reynolds, Mansfield, O. "We feared he would die, but a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure quickly relieved him and he went to sleep. That's the last we heard of the croup. Now isn't a cough cure like that valuable?" One Minute Cough Cure is absolutely safe and acts immediately. For coughs, colds, croup, grip, bronchitis and all other throat and lung troubles it is a certain cure. Very pleasant to take. The little ones like it. J. L. Harr.

February Weather.

Hicks, the weather prophet, predicts much unpleasant wintry weather for this month. Rain storms with thunder and lightning from 8th to 10th; 13th to 15th cold with snow storms. He predicts some of the hardest storms of the winter for late February and the first part of March

Clerk's Wise Suggestion

"I have lately been much troubled with dyspepsia, belching and sour stomach," writes M. S. Mead, leading pharmacist of Attleboro, Mass. "I could eat hardly anything without suffering several hours. My clerk suggested I try Kodol Dyspepsia Cure which I did with most happy results. I have had no more trouble and when one can go to eating mince pie, cheese candy and nuts after such a time, their digestion must be pretty good. I endorse Kodol Dyspepsia Cure heartily." You don't have to diet. Eat all the good food you want but don't overload the stomach. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests your food. J. L. Harr.

"Around the Pan."

The following is an extract taken from the New York Sun:

"The reader may make up his mind to be pleasantly overwhelmed by the opulence and vivacity of 'Around the Pan,' published by the Nutshell Publishing Company, 1059 Third Avenue, New York.

The wonders begin with the frontispiece picture of President McKinley, drawn in a single line beginning at a point on the cheek bone and going round and round in a constantly widening circle, with waverings and downbearings of the pen in the proper places to secure detachment and shading. We are told that this portrait 'is considered the most unique work of its kind in the world,' and if there are degrees of uniqueness we are willing to believe that this is most the thing of which there are no duplicates. Of course there is text in addition to the pictures, and we should be surprised indeed to hear from any purchaser the opinion that he had not got his money's worth ($2)."

Saved Her Child's Life.

"In three weeks our chubby little boy was changed by Pneumonia almost to a skeleton," writes Mrs. W. Watkins, of Pleasant City, O. "A terrible cough set in, that in spite of a good doctor's treatment for several weeks, grew worse every day. We then used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was soon sound and well. We are sure this grand medicine saved his life." Millions know it's the only sure cure for coughs, colds and all lung diseases. J. L. Harr guarantees satisfaction. 50c, $1.00. Trial bottles free.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best and most famous compound in the world to conquer aches and kill pains. Cures Cuts, Heals Burns and Bruises, subdue inflamation, masters Piles. Millions of boxes sold yearly. Works wonders in Boils, Ulcers, Felons, Skin Eruptions. It cures or no pay. 25c at Harr's drug store.

G W B A S D.

One of Garner's nice young men, who is badly smitten with a fair young lady, wrote her a note the other day and breathlessly awaited the answer. It came, a sweetly scented envelope with a rose on one corner and the enclosure was a card bearing the letters "G.W.B.A.S.D." Then the aforesaid young man was wild. He couldn't decipher the letter but knew it was a loving message from the fair one. At last he took it to a friend for interpretation. She looked it over and gently informed him that it signified: "Go Way Back And Sit Down." We believe he did. The Garner boys are a little slow.

Mrs. A E. Holland, wife of ex-Sheriff Capt. A. E. Holland, died at Mt. Ayr after a long illness. There is much sympathy in Mt. Ayr for this bereaved family. It is only a short time since Homer Holland was shot and killed, and no doubt this awful affair hastened the death of Mrs. Holland.

Will Welch, a brakeman on the Illinois Central railroad, had a miraculous escape from death a few days ago. As the train was coming into Tara station near Fort Dodge, Welch was caught by a pile of trunks on the track and crushed. He was dropped under the coach, but the train was moving slowly and he struggled out before caught by the wheels. Welch escaped with the dislocation of both shoulders and severe bruises. Indictments were found against all of these persons last fall on evidence furnished the grand jury by Rev. H. H. Abrams, and all of them pleaded guilty when their cases came for trial.

General vaccination by an ample corps of physicians, sharp medical inspection and careful quarantining are urged by Dr. Herman Spalding, chief medical inspector of the department of health of Chicago, as necessary to prevent a grave epidemic of smallpox in Des Moines. Of these, general vaccination is rated as of the first importance. Dr. Spalding says if this precaution is insisted upon the disease will be practically stamped out in forty days. Otherwise, he predicts dangerous ravages from the disease during March, April and May and says a thousand or more cases will inevitably result from the large number of points of contagion that now exist.

A number of small boys were on a hill at Corydon coasting, when George Gascoyne, with another boy, drove to the hill in a one horse sleigh. The boys piled on the sleigh and some one of the crowd grabbed the hat of the driver and started to run down the hill with it, when Gascoyne jumped out of his sleigh with whip in hand and began to slash the boys around the legs with the whip. Toby McCan, a boy 17 years old, approached the boy with the whip in a threatening manner when Gascoyne said "I will fix you," and turning the whip and using both hands dealt him a fearful blow with the butt end of the whip, crushing his skull, which caused death in about twenty-five minutes. Gascoyne is 23 years of age, and was a member of the Fifty-first regiment of Iowa volunteers in the Spanish-American war. He is physically a powerful fellow, with a feeble, almost unbalanced mind from a long and severe type of epilepsy. The whole community deplores this sad tragedy, which no doubt began in fun and ended in death.

Hon. Lewis Todhunter, a prominent character in central Iowa, died at his home in Indianola January 29. He was an old settler and well known throughout the state, especially on account of his unwavering championship of temperance reform. He was a most unrelenting foe to the saloon and intemperance in every form and was tireless in his prosecution of illegal sales. He was a successful business man and for a half century a prominent and respected citizen of Warren county and central Iowa. He was born in Fayette county, O., April 6, 1817, and was admitted to the bar in Highland county, of the same state, in 1848, and came to Iowa in 1850, and to Indianola in 1854, and began the practice of the law, and acted as prosecuting attorney and served in many other official capacities. He was a member of Iowa's constitutional convention which met in Iowa City in 1857, and thus assisted in framing the organic law of the state. He served as quartermaster in the army from 1863 to 1865 with the rank of captain. Was a member of the Metnodist church and various civic societies, and though possessing many eccentricities was a strong character and made himself felt in the community and state where he lived. He was one of the best known men in Warren county, and died at a ripe old age amid universal esteem of his friends and acquaintances.

GIVEN A WARM WELCOME

LEGISLATURE ROYALLY RECEIVED AT THE STATE NORMAL.

Dedicatory Exercises Held in the Auditorium of the New Main Building.

Cedar Falls, Jan. 31—Nearly 300 members of the legislative party yesterday attended the dedicatory exercises of the new building of the state normal school. Upon the arrival of the train at Cedar Falls the legislators were given an enthusiastic reception. They were met at the depot by the mayor, city council and a large crowd of citizens, and accorded a hearty and sincere welcome. A merry throng of school children carrying flags and flowers formed an interesting part of the procession. The lawmakers then filled the street cars which were waiting for them and were taken to the normal school. Here a formal reception was tendered the visitors by President Seerley and the members of the normal faculty, and immediately following it came the dinner in the big dining hall of the normal school, a banquet which could hardly have been surpassed in excellence.

About 3 p. m., the guests began to assemble in the large auditorium of the new building, which by the time the exercises commenced was packed with people. As the members of the general assembly entered the room, they were greeted with cheers and the waving of colors. The governor, lieutenant governor, speaker of the house, state superintendent and the leading members of the legislature, whose positions on committees gave them a special relation to the school, were given special yells in which their names formed a prominent part. On the stage were seated, besides members of the glee clubs, Governor Cummins, Lieutenant Governor Herriott, Speaker Eaton, State Superintendent Barrett, Secretary of State Martin, and several members of the faculty. State Superintendent Barrett, president of the board of trustees, presided. Addresses were delivered by Superintendent Barrett, President Seerley and Governor Cummins.

The new main building which is being dedicated by various exercises this week is a handsome and up-to-date structure. Its exterior walls are faced with Bedford stone and mottled pressed brick, and its design is in the renaissance style. It has a frontage of 229 feet and 8 inches, and a depth in the center of 146 feet. Under the auditorium, in the basement, is the men's gymnasium, 70 by 76 feet. On all floors in addition to the auditorium there are fifty class rooms, recitation rooms and offices, and six large society halls. The main entrance has three flights of stone steps, passing under a handsome portico. In a sanitary way the building is considered perfect. The building has three different divisions, the north and south wings and the central section. On the first and second floors in the north wing are the primary and grammar grades of the training department, while the south wing is entirely given over to class rooms for the normal department, twenty in number. The six society halls, which are of commodious size, are located on the third floor, four over the auditorium and two over the training department.

The new building was made possible by the Twenty-eighth general assembly when it appropriated $100,000 for the purpose of an additional building at Cedar Falls.

W. F. Lantz, the Chicago attorney who was pushing the collection of $14,000 worth of forged notes against the farmers of Buchanan county, has evidently laid down his hand. He writes the First National bank of Independence that he has heard nothing more from his client, but by an indirect means he learns that some other attorney has charge of the matter. He therefore will have no further connection with the matter and offers his advice and services to the bank's side of the case. It is expected that this will be the last heard of any attempt at collection.

A new Catholic see has been erected at Sioux City and Very Rev. Philip J. Garringan, vice rector of the Catholic University of America at Washington, D. C., has been named as its bishop. Rev. Garrigan's elevation to the bishopric will possibly take place so that he may assume charge of the diocese at Easter. The diocese of Sioux City will include the western half of the present archdiocese of Dubuque. It will perhaps comprise the following counties: Buena Vista, Calhoun, Carroll, Cherokee, Clay, Crawford, Dickinson, Emmett, Greene, Humboldt, Ida, Kossuth, Lyon, Monona, O'Brien, Osceola, Palo Alto, Plymouth, Pocahontas, Sac, Sioux, Webster and Woodbury. The new diocese will be very wealthy and it will have a Catholic population of nearly 35,000.

Assays of gold found in the hills north of McGregor put the bluffs fringing the Mississippi in competition with the Klondike. The assays were made by professional metallurgists whose standing places their reports beyond question. Assays show $1.30 to $17.30 per ton on samples taken from the ledges, the average price being $8 per ton. The discoveries are on lands owned by Mrs. N. S. Dousman, who is making a more thorough investigation with a view of determining the average yield of ore at varying distances from the surface. Operations are under the direction of L. M. Lasley, of New Mexico, who is thoroughly versed in the work. Indications are that there are millions of tons of ore within reach with all facilities for its reduction easily available.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, Jan. 28.—Senate.—Fitchpatrick introduced the Greeley redistricting bill of the preceding day. Hayward introduced the bill to punish husbands for failing to support their wives, and Ball introduced a bill to legalize all acts done by city councils without a majority vote. Appropriation bills for Marshalltown and Mt. Pleasant were introduced. Classen introduced a bill to increase the support of the Soldiers' Home to meet the higher prices for supplies.

House.—N. E. Kendall introduced a concurrent resolution providing for the appointment of a commission by the governor to investigate into the causes of explosions in mines. The commission is to consist of two operators, four superintendents, ten miners and the mine inspectors. It is not to sit more than eight days and is to report to the legislature this session. The resolution went over to be acted on Wednesday. Important bills were introduced as follows: By Blakemore, to require a record of all assignments of mortgages, in order that they may be assessed; by Calderwood, providing penalty of six months in jail for any husband who fails to support his wife and family if he is able to do so; by Carden, appropriating $105,950 to the Mt. Pleasant hospital; by Cummings, providing for five days' notice in garnishment proceedings; by Cummings, appropriating $75,100 for Soldiers' Home at Marshalltown; by Dunham, a compulsory education law requiring all children between 7 and 14 to attend school at least six months in the year, and providing for truant officers; by Hughes, an anti-pass bill, prohibiting the issuance of passes to public officers, fines of $100 to $1,000 being prescribed; by Larrabee, giving superior courts to cities of 5,000 inhabitants; by Sweeley, to appropriate $5,000 to the Women's and Babies' Home at Sioux City; by Wilson of Buena Vista, repealing the $2,000 limit on incorporation fees; by Willett, providing that county attorneys may return indictments if defendants consent.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—Senate.—The senate adopted a rule prohibiting employes or itself or its committees from lobbying members; spent two hours debating the Blanchard bill to extend authority to vote taxes in aid of railroads to the electric trolley lines projected between cities; and listened to the reading of the woman's suffrage constitutional amendment. Senator Garst introduced a bill to extend the time of making the railroad assessment from March 25 to August 1. Senator Spaulding proposed a bill compelling the listing of mortgages for taxation, the real estate covered by them to be exempted to the extent of their equity.

House.—In the house the normal school bill was referred to the appropriations committee, after two unsuccessful efforts by Warren to have the report of the normal school committee adopted. This committee recommended it for passage. Important bills were introduced as follows: By Coburn, making it a crime for a tenant to sell grain on which his landlord had a lien, without a written order from the landlord; appropriation bills for the institutions at Glenwood and Ft. Madison; a bill repealing the penalty for omitted taxes; by Cummings, providing for three terms of the supreme court each year, and salaries of $6,000 for the judges, and a bill increasing the salaries of district judges from $2,500 to $4,000; by Haselquist, exempting the property of soldiers from taxation to the amount of $800 whether personalty or realty; by Meservey, providing that moneys and credits to the amount of $1,500 belonging to heads of families should be exempt from taxation.

Des Moines, Jan. 31.—Senate.—Senator Harper introduced joint resolution No. 5, the biennial election amendno material changes in this resolution no material changesin this resolution from that of Senator Titus. It provides for the session of the legislature following the adoption of the amendment, which was omitted in the Titus enactment By practically a straight party vote the senate Friday referred to its federal relations committee a resolution endorsing the Senator Hoar bill for the restriction of injunctions issued against strikers. The resolution was introduced at the request of the railroad employes organization and was championed by the democrats, who demanded immediate consideration.

Allyn introduced a bill making punishment of kidnapping for ransom life imprisonment; and enticement twenty years. Senator Harriman introduced a bill to have 30,000 maps printed for distribution by the railway commission and the senate passed the measure at once. Adjourned till Monday.

House.—Among bills introduced were the following: By Piper, to establish and equip a normal school and to provide for the location of the same; $100,000 to be appropriated, after which location of school is to be decided by a joint convention of the assembly; by Secor, to repeal chapter 8, title XVI, and provides that all institutions for the care of friendless children shall be placed under the jurisdiction of the board of control; the board to have the power to investigate and report on the institutions, and the institutions to be required to make annual reports to the board; by Secor, to prevent cheating by sale of adulterated and misbranded foods and to create the office of state food and dairy commissioner.

Chinese Indemnity Paid.

Pekin, Feb. 3.—The first monthly installment of the Chinese indemnity, amounting to 1,820,000 tales, has been paid to Bankers' Commissioners Powers at Shanghai.

TAX REDUCTION FAVORED

HOUSE COMMITTEE MAKES A FAVORABLE REPORT.

The Only Tax to Remain Will be the Tax on Mixed Flour—Unanimous Report Ordered.

Washington, Jan. 31.—The house committee on ways and means has unanimously authorized Chairman Payne to report a bill repealing all the Spanish war revenue taxes, except the tax on mixed flour.

The repeal is to take effect July 1, 1902, except the duty on tea, which is to take effect January 1, 1903. Chairman Payne made a statement showing that the total reduction would be $7,0000,000 annually. The delay in the repeal of the tax on tea is to enable those who have stock on hand to dispose of them before the appeal takes effect. Mr. Payne says that the country will start upon the next fiscal year with $174,000,000 available cash.

An amendment was offered by Mr. Newlands to except from the repeal the tax on petroleum and sugar refiners, and by Mr. Richardson to repeal the customs duties on trust made goods. Both were defeated by party votes. Mr. Newlands' amendment also provided for a tax of one-tenth of the gross receipts of all corporations whose annual receipts exceed $10,000,000.

The repeal will affect the remaining special taxes imposed by the war, viz: On bankers, brokers, grain dealers, pawn brokers, custom house brokers, theaters, museums, circuses, etc., billiard rooms and bowling alleys, playing cards, dealers in tobacco. The reduction on fermented liquors will amount to 60 cents per barrel; that on tobacco and snuff will be 3 cents, bringing the rate back to 6 cents per pound, as before the war. The rate on cigars and cigarettes was changed last year, but the further change now made will bring the rates back to those existing prior to the war. The repeal under schedule A of the law will include the tax on bonds, debentures, etc., certificates of stock, inland and foreign bills of exchange, bills of lading, certificates of profit, brokers' contracts, custom house entries, warehouse receipts, steamboat passage tickets.

The repeal under schedule B will include the tax of 1 cent per pint bottle of wine and 2 cents on bottles over a pint. The legacy tax will also come off. The other reductions include the excise tax on persons and firms engaged in refining petroleum and sugar, special tax of banks and bankers, etc.

The rate on beer, now $1.60 per barrel, will be brought down to $1. The present tea duty is 10 cents per pound, and this will be repealed.

BRITISH WAR SCANDAL.

SENSATIONAL DISCLOSURE RESPECTING THE PURCHASE OF HORSES.

Profits to Contractors Shown to Be Nearly One-Half on the Amount Invested.

London, Feb. 1.—In the house of commons yesterday, Mr. Broderick's presentation of the supplementary army estimate furnished Sir John Blundell Maple (conservative) with an opportunity to refer to yesterday's report of the committee appointed to inquire into the purchases of horses for the British army which, while censuring Sir John for unjustifiable attacks on the integrity of officers, found that exorbitant prices were paid. Sir John asserted that his original statements were true, and submitted papers to show that certain officers were mixed up in horse swindles at Buda Pest and Vienna. He also asserted that the evidence before the committee revealed a gross scandal.

Mr. Hobhouse, a member of the inquiry committee, defended the officers, but declared that the investigations revealed alarming shortcomings in the remount department. On one contract for horses amounting to 111,000 pounds the profit was 44,000 pounds. Assuming that a similar percentage of profit was made on the 18,000,000 pounds spent in remounts, the speaker estimated that the war office had bestowed on the contractors a profit totalling 8,000,000 pounds. The remount department was clearly inefficient, and the official at the head of it ought to be dismissed.

At that juncture Sir William Vernon Harcourt (liberal) said he desired some explanation regarding the new contracts for food.

Mr. Broderick replied somewhat flippantly, whereupon there were loud cries of "Order!" and Sir William, amid cheers, sharply reminded the war secretary that it was the custom of the house for members to treat one another with "gentlemanly courtesy."

Henry Labouchere (liberal) declared that somebody ought to be hanged in connection with the remounts, and moved the reduction of the vote. Lord Stanley, financial secretary of the war office, explained that all the transactions complained of had been conducted by the yeomanry committee, which was not connected with the war office.

Mr Broderick defended Major General William R. Truman, inspector general of the remount department, from the charge of any dishonorable conduct, and, after being considerably pressed from the liberal side of the house, reluctantly undertook to make a full investigation of the cases of all the officers concerned and promised there should be no recurrence of the payment of excessive prices for horses.

Mr. Labouchere's motion was rejected by a vote of 106 to 75 and the supplementary estimates were adopted by a vote of 159 to 56.

MARY THE MAID OF THE INN....

A Story of English Life.

By JOSEPH HATTON.

Mary Lockwood looked at him, and then her eyes wandered round the court.

"It is very painful, no doubt," said the judge, turning toward her and addressing her in the midst of sobs that were audible from more than one corner of the great hall of justice; for the vast concourse was painfully moved; moved as one man, as one woman; it was a relief to those who could weep; some could only sob, as they watched the gradual breakdown of the witness, struggling in the midst of her grief to save her lover from the doom that was surely settling down upon him.

"Now, Mary Lockwood," said the judge, "attend to the question of the learned counsel."

"Let me bring you back to the night when you went to the abbey. These men you told us of having passed you, a hat rolled to your feet——"

Counsel paused as Mary, pushing back her thick tresses of hair that had fallen from their bands, said in what sounded like a new voice—a sweet, strange, confident voice:

"The abbey."

"Yes, the abbey," he replied, puzzled and hesitating.

"Yes, we sat beneath the elder, the leaves were brown, but there is no knowing what you may come to!"

She looked at the dock, the judge, the counsel, but it was easy to tell that she saw none of them. Her great blue eyes seemed to seek something away in the distance. The March wind moaned in the corridor of the castle. The night was coming on; presently the court would have to be lighted up.

"The leaves are like birds when the wind blows," she said, "and, oh, how peaceful to sleep under the water, the calm river. Good-by, good-by."

As she stepped down from the box she broke out into a fit of laughter that rang through the place and pierced every heart with grief. The next moment she had fainted, and was carried out into the bleak March air.

CHAPTER XIV.

After a pathetic pause the counsel for the prosecution rose, and, in a voice tremulous with emotion, said: "My lord and gentlemen of the jury, that is my case;" whereupon the learned counsel for the defense addressed the court for the prisoner, urging for him every point upon which a question of doubt might be raised in his favor; but everybody felt the verdict was a foregone conclusion. The prosecution closed, the judge charged the jurors, and a verdict of guilty was quickly found.

The judge, in passing sentence, alluded to the poor young woman whose strange presence at the scene of the murder seemed like the hand of Divine Providence in the interest of justice. In pronouncing the last penalty of the law he left no room for doubt that it would be carried out, and the road from the highway outside Kirkstall would shortly bear witness to the supremacy of the law in a newly erected gibbet.

Mary Lockwood never spoke again with the directing aid of a balanced reason.

The day before the execution they took her to the convict's cell. He desired it. The doctors said the interview would do her neither harm nor good. She was past all hope. She had wandered about the inn after they took her home, in an aimless way, now smiling at everything that was said to her, now bursting out into a petty rage; but generally ending in a tearful glance at the questioner, and a sigh of weariness.

She took Parker's hand. She did not know him. He talked to her of their love; spoke of his misery; desired her forgiveness. She alternately smiled or frowned at him. Presently she both laughed and cried.

The warders who were present at the interview were unmanned; not alone at the sight of the poor, beautiful, mad girl, but at the piteous grief of the condemned man, whose last words were:

"I welcome the morrow. I have no desire to live another day, seeing what I see, hearing what I hear."

Before the year had passed away, old Morley had left the inn, and had gone with Mary to live at Meadows' Farm. He had grown old and infirm almost suddenly, as it seemed, under the saddening influence of Mary's misery and derangement. What money he possessed he settled in the hands of Mr. Taylor and another trustee for the safe-keeping of Mary in case he died before her.

She became a hopeless maniac. Mrs. Meadows, out of compassion and for her son's sake, took care of her, watched over her, and at odd hours talked to her of Jack, who little thought, when he had made his disposition for leaving Kirkstall, that, having found reason for not going away as sorrowful as those which had previously decided him in favor of a life-long exile, he would be taken away against his will. The king needed troops. The press-gang was busy in many districts of the north, and on the very day of Richard Parker's execution, a daring company carried off Jack Meadows and transferred him in due course to a vessel bound under sealed orders for a distant part. Jack made but little fuss in respect to this reverse of fortune. He was permitted, before sailing, to send a letter to his mother, in which he was allowed to state that he had taken service under the king, and that he was glad he had already made arrangements for a long absence from Kirkstall. He enjoined his mother to be a mother to Mary. He sent manly if tender messages to all his friends; and the farm, of which he had been so proud and had hoped to have installed Mary as his wife, knew him no more.

Sometimes Mrs. Meadows thought Mary had a glimmering of reason, for she would often say: "Jack, Jack, dear Jack!" but she only repeated the words as the widow had taught her.

Old Morley would wander about with the girl who had once been his chief pride and delight; but the merest boy in the village, or the smallest girl, could have outstripped her in any sport or exercise.

She had not only lost her gayety, but her physical strength, as it seemed. She would walk with her uncle over the meadows by the abbey along the banks of the Aire, but she would rest oftener than the old man himself. He, too, loved to hear her say "Jack, dear Jack!" though it had no more meaning for her than the gibbet by the plantation where the abbey murder was committed.

Mrs. Meadows would often say that it was a mercy after all that Divine Providence had taken away Mary's reason, since the man who had worn her ribbon in his hat was now a shapeless, awful thing, swinging in dreadful state, with chains and iron collar, in the wind, as it whistled down the valley.

There was a break in the trees at the point where the strangled man swung to and fro—dead, yet living, as it were, dead, yet alive in the autumn wind and rain, rattling his chains sighing in the rain, a white ghost in the winter when the snow and ice clung to him and protected him from hawks and vultures, and fixed him in bonds the wind could not break.

CHAPTER XV.

A terrible warning, unheeded of those whom it warned, only terrible to those who need no such inhuman sign of the rough vengeance of the outraged law.

An awful warning if men who need it had thought of what it meant; but many a highway robber rode merrily by the grim sign-post, snapped his fingers at it and muttered to himself, "Not for me; there is no tree so high, no irons so strong, that they shall ever swing me to and fro in the wind."

They would fall, some of these, to the hangman's perquisites nevertheless; they were either too bold, too reckless, or a woman was in the case, or what not. For all that, justice won no victories by her scarecrow.

As the birds of the field will feed beneath the empty coat, the straw man of the farmer, so were there highwaymen who would sit beneath the gibbet and divide their spoil, or pass around the bottle.

But it was a fearful business, this inhuman, awful thing, for nervous women and girls, for old men and young, obliged to traverse the king's highway sometimes at night, always in the day; this ghastly suggestion of a human creature warring with the elements and the birds of prey, attacked by the carrion crow, and worn at last into exhibitions of its weather-beaten nakedness.

Old Morley, and the men who saw Mary come home that autumn night from the abbey, had strange visions of the bright, gay young traveler who had jested with them, who had fished in the river, who had played bowls on the green; and it was like a nightmare of an untimely resurrection—the figure in its rough tarred swaddling clouts hanging by its iron collar, wailing with the wind and rattling its chains in the tempest.

In the second winter, after the setting up of the inhuman sign on the Kirkstall road, Mary Lockwood had, so old Morley and Mrs. Meadows thought, given signs of awakening reason; but the hope in which they fondly indulged arose simply from the fact that Mary's constitution was utterly breaking down.

She had grown quiet, and they in their ignorance said thoughtful. She walked less, and sat longer by the window, looking at the sky.

When the snow came and silence reigned over the land, she smiled at the white flakes as they fell, and held out her thin hand to catch them, and would seem to wonder that they disappeared.

Then came Christmas Eve.

The new landlord of the Star and Garter would insist that Joseph Morley should come to the inn and sip one glass from the wassail bowl in the old inglenook, and meet the friends who sorrowed with him and held him in honor and respect.

Mrs. Meadows urged him to go. She never kept these feasts, now that Jack had left her. It would content her to spend the evening with her brother who was an invalid, and teach Mary to call their beloved by his name—their dear Jack—for the widow had long since forgiven Mary the part she had played in his voluntary exile, and had come to regard her as a poor forlorn daughter, no sympathetic memory lingering in her mind of the rival who had expiated his crimes on the gallows.

She tried to forget this shadow upon her son's affections, and would sit for hours and talk to Mary of her love and of the time when he might return.

Old Morley went to the inn.

The talk was of the old days when Morley was the landlord.

Tom waited upon him hand and foot.

Mr. Taylor proposed his health in some touching words of remembrance, glancing only at the fatal shadow which had fallen upon his old age, and enforcing the moral that they must all bend to the decrees of Providence.

Old Morley sat and smiled in a mournful way at the kindly efforts of his neighbors and friends to comfort him.

They had sent for him in a chaise, and promised Mrs. Meadows to see him safely to the farm in time for her, and him and Mary, to hear the Christmas bells begin to ring; for, although the bells were few and the ringers were not experts, they did manage to "salute the holy morn" at Kirkstall, and it was good, they thought, for the sorrowful, as well as the gay, to hear the glad tidings and to believe in them.

But the bells, if they rang for Mary, rang in heaven.

She heard them no more on earth.

Game to Tempt the Sportsman.

Hunting big game has an irresistible attraction for all sportsmen, and the more rare the species being sought, the more keen is the hunter's delight. The big game of this country is comparatively well known, but Asia offers some rare species, they are sought every year by countless sportsmen of all nationalities, usually without success.

An ambition of big game hunters is to capture, or shoot, a snow leopard. This rare animal lives on the snow-covered Himalayas, and seldom is seen at an elevation of less than 11,000 feet. He is a beautiful creature, white as the snow he lives among, and is both wild and savage. Even in the great altitudes where he makes his home he is extremely rare, and not only have few persons shot him, but few even have seen him. Any one who wants to stand in the first rank of big game men should try for a snow leopard; if he gets one his reputation is made.

An animal known to exist, but of which no white man ever has seen the dead body, is the mountain ibex of Kamchatka. This great peninsular of Kamchatka, whose half a million square miles is inhabited by less than 7,000 people, is probably the least known of any land in the world not circumpolar. Down its center runs a chain of great mountains, many of them active volcanoes and others covered with thick forests up to a height of 4,000 or 5,000 feet. Above the timber line lives a species of ibex, or mountain sheep, larger and stronger than any that exist elsewhere. The natives show bits of the skins of these animals and some of their enormous horns, but no white man ever has seen a whole one alive or dead, much less killed one.

Lost the Fourth of July.

An incident occurred during a summer voyage of the army transport Hancock, which will not soon be forgotten by the distinguished party of American officials then en route to Manila. It all came about through the speed of the trim transport and the accepted laws laid down in the Gregorian calendar. The Hancock made a record run from San Francisco and arrived at the one hundred and eightieth meridian on the night of July 3, and, as usual, one day was lost in the crossing thereof. In this case the day lost was Independence day, July 4, and therefore no celebration could be held.

The silk insect is a moth, one inch long by two across, with wings of a bright yellow color, and having crescent-shaped spots.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Senate.—Senator Nelson's bill creating a department of commerce, which passed the senate today, was amended in various particulars. Probably the most important of the amendments was one changing the title to read "The Department of Commerce and Labor." It provides for a secretary, who is to be a member of the cabinet, an assistant secretary, and also the other officials and clerks necessary. The proposed department is especially charged with the collection and distribution of statistical information and with the development and fostering of foreign and domestic commerce. In the department there is to be a new bureau of manufactures, and many bureaus now included in other departments are transferred to this new department, including the life saving service, the light house service, the marine hospital service, the steamboat inspection service, and the bureaus of navigation, of shipping and of immigration, as well as the control of the fisheries and the Chinese exclusion questions, all now within the jurisdiction of the treasury department, the fish commission and the census bureau. The department also is given jurisdiction over the consular service so far as it pertains to commerce. Just before the adjournment of the senate Senator Spooner introduced a substitute for the Nicaragua canal bill. The new bill is a practical authorization to the president of the United States to choose between the Panama and the Nicaraguan routes.

Washington, Jan. 29.—Senate.—For an hour today the senate had under discussion the proposition whether censorship of press dispatches exists in Manila. While no such turbulent scenes as yesterday's were enacted, the debate for a time was very spirited. The secretary of war was quoted as saying that no press censorship now existed in the Philippines and a letter from General Greely, chief signal officer of the army, was presented by Beveridge, of Indiana, making the statement officially that there was no censorship of press dispatches and that "the press is entirely free." It was contended by the opposition that a press censorship did exist in the Philippines, and that copies of every news dispatch filed with the cable company were filed with the military authorities. That, it was maintained, constituted a virtual censorship. Cullom, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, delivered an extended and carefully prepared speech on the history of the reciprocity negotiations. A bill providing for the use by the United States of devices invented by its naval officers while engaged in its service and covered by letters patent was passed.

House.—Henry, of Connecticut, reported the oleomargarine bill from the committee on agriculture. With the report were submitted the views of the minority of the committee and the substitute offered by them. No business of importance was transacted.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Senate.—Today's session of the senate was entirely void of the tumultuous scenes which characterized the sessions of the past three days. After the Philippine tariff measure was taken up, Tillman delivered a speech devoted almost entirely to a discussion of the part his state took in the war for the independence of the colonies. Incidentally, he referred occasionally to the pending bill, drawing morals, as he said, for the benefit of the majority that they might be applied to the Philippines.

House.—The house today passed the bill for the creation of a permanent census bureau. The friends of the civil service law, who were opposed to making the employes of the bureau eligible for transfer or retention, in the permanent organization. The bill also provides for a manufacturing census in 1905, and for the collection of certain special statistics annually. Early in the session a bill was passed for the protection of the lives of miners in the territories.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Senate.—An extended speech on the pending Philippine tariff bill was delivered in the senate by Morgan of Alabama, who devoted particular attention to an amendment he offered to the bill last week. He maintained that the enactment of the bill as it stands now would not be a constitutional remedy for the situation the measure is designed to relieve, but said with the adoption of his amendment the bill would stand the closest scrutiny of the courts. The Alabama senator did not discuss the political phases of the Philippine question, devoting his entire speech to a consideration of the legal and constitutional questions raised by the presentation of the tariff measure. An hour and a half was devoted to consideration of a bill to increase the salaries of judges of United States courts, but no action was taken.

House.—The house today prepared to defend itself against what it considers the threatened invasion by the senate of its prerogative in the matter of revenue legislation by directing the ways and means committee to investigate the subject and report to the house its conclusions. The action of the house was the outgrowth of the agitation in the senate of the claim that reciprocity treaties affecting the customs revenues can be negotiated without the concurrence of the house. After a short debate, Speaker Henderson pointed out that Richardson's resolution did not contain a single averment that there had been an actual assault on the rights of the house and ruled that the resolution was not privileged In doing so he called attention to the fact that under the threat of such invasion the house today had taken action to investigate the subject that it might be qua and equipped with argument if the issue were presented later.

ONE HUNDRED ARE DEAD.

Terrific Dust Explosion in Hondo Mine.

St. Louis, Feb. 3.—A special to the Globe-Democrat from San Antonio says:

Eighty-five miners killed and fifty more buried under the debris is the fearful record made by a dust explosion at the Hondo mines in Mexico, the news of which has been received here.

At the time the explosion occurred there were 160 miners at work in the mine, all of whom were entombed by the shaft being choked up by falling earth and stone loosened by the explosion. Just how many are dead is not at this time known, but at last accounts received here by wire tonight eighty-five dead bodies had been recovered. It is thought that the death list will be over 100.

The Hondo mines are located at Cohilla, at a terminus of a branch of the Mexican International road, about 100 miles south of Eagle Pass and are the most important in the state.

Details of the disaster are meager, no names of the victims being learned here.

MRS. CONGER SPOKE.

SHE REPRESENTED LADIES OF DIPLOMATIC CORPSE.

Empress Dowager of China Also Made a Speech and Wept Copiously.

Peking, Feb. 3.—The dowager empress, the emperor and the empress, Saturday afternoon, received the ladies and children of the members of the diplomatic corps in the private apartments of the palace. The audience was the most revolutionary event since the return of the court to Peking. The exclusiveness of Chinese royalty and the prejudices against the meeting of the sexes was waived and the reception was less formal than is usual in European courts.

The dowager empress occupied the throne, with a brilliant assemblage of princesses and court ladies about her. The emperor was seated upon a small platform in the center of the room.

The visitors upon entering bowed twice to the dowager empress. Mrs. Conger, wife of United States Minister Conger, as doyeness of the diplomatic corps, read a speach, which was translated by Secretary Williams.

Mrs. Conger said:

"We heartily congratulate you and the imperial court that the situation which led you to abandon your beautiful capital has been so happily resolved, that you are now permitted to return in freedom and peace. The events of the past two years must have been as painful to you as to the rest of the world, but the stint of the experience may be eliminated by the establishment of franker, more trustful and friendlier relations between the Chinese and the other peoples of the earth. The world is moving forward, the tide of progress cannot be stayed, and it is hoped that China will accept join with the great sisterhood of nations in the grand march.

"The recent imperial edict is a promise of great good to your people and to your vast empire."

The dowager empress' reply was exceedingly friendly in tone, and read in part as follows:

"Last year the dissensions in the palace caused a revolution, which compelled our hasty departure from Peking; it is a great gratification to us, therefore, our return to the capital has been the occasion of such rejoicing in China and abroad.

Baron Czikann, the Austrian minister and doyne of the diplomatic corps, presented all of the members of the dowager empress, who shook hand of each of them. Mrs. Conger was next presented to the empress, who shook hands with them.

The guests then retired to another room. The dowager empress, on entering this room, grasped Mrs. Conger's hand, which she held for some minutes, trembling, weeping and sobbing loudly, and exclaiming in broken sentences that the attack upon the legations was a terrible mistake and that she repented it bitterly.

In reply Mrs. Conger assured her that the past would be forgotten.

Bracelets and rings of great value were then placed upon Mrs. Conger's wrists and fingers.

Following the reception a banquet was given, the dowager empress sitting at the head of the principal table, with Mrs. Conger and Mme. Manda upon each side. The emperor was the only man present, except Prince Tsi, prospective minister from China to Great Britain, who knelt beside the dowager empress and interpreted what she said.

The dowager empress talked animatedly. She said that China would abandon her policy of isolation and adopt the best features of western life and would send many students abroad.

Every lady of the visiting party was given a pair of jeweled [illegible] which these a solitaire pearl ring [illegible] souvenirs.

The principal points, Spokane, Portland and Seattle, but there are other points one can reach through [illegible].

Clark of the Oregon.

One of the appointments of civil and military representatives of the United States at the coronation of King Edward will give universal satisfaction. Nobody cares much about Whitelaw Reid, and nobody knows much about Gen. Wilson; but Capt. Clark is the one popular hero of the war with Spain whose glory has never been dimmed and for whom popular feeling has never cooled or diminished He has been as eager to keep out of controversies as he was eager to get into battle. He has been as careful of the reputation of his brother officers in peace as he was careful of the lives of his men and careless of his own in war. He has sought no advancement himself, and has stood in the way of no others. He did far greater work in the Spanish war than any other than the fleet commanders, and never has complained of lack of recognition. He was not only cautious in peril, bold in action and master of his profession in every emergency; but he has been in war and peace, in battle and council, in private life and public conduct, an officer and gentleman in the highest sense of the regulations. If it is desirable that the United States should be represented on this historic occasion by the best type of American citizen and soldier, the choice of Clark is ideal. This is a small reward for his services and cannot add to his glory, but it may serve to recall to the minds of his countrymen the high deserving of a man incapable of advertising his own merit. There is still time for congress to send him to the coronation as a vice-admiral. The United States should not be represented there by a mere captain—even by the greatest of its naval captains.—Minneapolis Tribune.

A Legacy of the Grip.

Is often a run-down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disorkered liver and kidneys often follow an attack of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters the splendid tonic, blood purifier and regulafor of Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of grip. If suffering try them. Only 50c. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by Harr.

A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmers' Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

School Notes.

Mr. Suckow dismissed room 3 Thursday noon, Jan. 24, for half holiday.

The pupils were sorry to learn that Mr. Suckow was very sick with appendicitis and was not very likely to resume his duties for some time.

The school board then searched high and low, far and wide, for a teacher and at last they secured Mr. Merten, of Garner, who began his duties Monday morning. He gave a nice introductory speech and then we resumed our duties.

Tuesday morning only forty degrees above zero. Pretty cold to study but with the promise that we might visit the register whenever we got cold, we began our work. There was a merry time at the register. I assure you, but after dinner the room was warmer and studies were then resumed. A number of pupils were absent.

Now the time of long evenings you want good books to read. We have them in our library. Watch for our literary notice next week in this column.

ROOM 2

The pupils were surprised Friday, Jan. 25, to find Mrs. Gibbs sick with the chicken pox, but last Monday morning she resumed her duties. Tuesday she taught roome 1 and 2 combined.

Mrs. Hawley is now on the sick teachers list.

THE TIMES.

Dr. Knopf of the New York [illegible] of Medicine, has discovered a called "Phthisiophobia." It is of madness brought on by try make the first two consonants into the pronunciation.

Cold, hard and other forbidding qualities. Thus Curtis Brown, London correspondent, writes about Rudyard Kipling as his private letters show him. More than one struggling penny-a-liner can prove that Kipling has one of the most brotherly hearts that God ever put pulse into. And this is good, clean, simple truth, which is more or less at the bottom of things.

SPLIT, BRITTLE, DULL HAIR.

All Come from Dandruff, which is Caused by a Germ.

Split hair, harsh hair, lusterless hair, brittle hair, falling hair, all owe their origin to dandruff, which is caused by a measly little microbe that burrows into the scalp, throwing up the cuticle into dandruff scales and sapping the vitality of the hair at the root, causing the several diseased conditions of the hair till it finally falls out. Modern science has discovered a remedy to destroy the dandruff microbe, which is combined in Newbro's Herpicide and may be had of any druggist. Allays itching instantly and makes hair soft as silk. Tobacco-Habit Cure.

One thing sure, you won't want tobacco, if you take "Tobacco cure." One tablet dissolved on the tongue before each smoke or chew for a few days makes tobacco repugnant to both taste and smell. This is not new but true and tens of thousands of former tobacco users have testified to it during the last seven years. It is a scientifically prepared antidote for tobacco poisoning, harmless and pleasant to take, extensively endorsed by physicians and chemists, with carefully tested results showing over ninety-eight per cent of cures. Although never advertised until 1902 its fame and market have become the envy of rivals and imitators. One box completes a cure. # NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

A joint convention of the Twenty-ninth general assembly met in the hall of the house of representatives on the afternoon of the 29th, and held memorial exercises in honor of the fifty-ninth birthday of President William McKinley. A large number of visitors were present and the hall and galleries were crowded. The address in memory of the president was delivered by Governor A. B. Cummins. All of the exercises were simple, but impressive. At the close a collection was taken up for the McKinley memorial fund and $103.50 was contributed.

Governor Cummins has announced his list of aides. He has not yet made public the appointments of members of the pharmacy commission and member of the state board of health. The list is as follows: Hon. I. B. Santee of Darbury, Truman A. Potter of Mason City, Charles E. Mitchell of Marion, A. A. Penquite of Colfax, Walter M. Davis of Iowa City, C. W. Bopp of Hawkeye, Herbert M. Bigelow of Grundy Center.

Governor Cummins has announced the appointment of Dr. J. H. Sams of Clarion, Iowa, to succeed Dr. J. C. Shrader, of Iowa City, whose term as a member of the state board of health has expired. Dr. Shraded was not a candidate for appointment. He is one of the oldest and best known practitioners in the state. He has served in the capacity of a member of the state board of health for seventeen years past, and now retires of his own volition; his successor is identified with the class of physicians known as regulars, the same as Dr. Shrader. Dr. Sams is a comparatively young physician, he having completed his course in medicine in the state university in 1892. He is appointed for a term of seven years, arranged that one term expires on January 31 of each year.

The board of agriculture has decided to erect a $35,000 coliseum on the state fair grounds. The building will contain five rooms and will be an extensive affair. The board has not the funds to erect the building at present and will ask the legislature to appropriate the amount. It is thought that no difficulty will be experienced in getting the appropriation. The board also decided to build an addition to the present horticultural building which will be for the exclusive use of flower exhibits. It will cost about $1,500.

The Iowa State Congress of Mothers elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President, Mrs. Isaac Lea Hillis, of Des Moines; first vice-president, Mrs. J. A. Schmidt, of Muscatine; second vice-president, Mrs. Cato Sells, of Vinton; third vice-president, Mrs. J. W. Cory, of Spencer; recording secretary, Mrs. Edith Payne Parsons, of Des Moines; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. S. Burgin, of Des Moines; treasurer, Mrs. J. Riggs, of Audubon; auditor, Mrs. N. Darnell, of Centerville.

Four men are now under sentence of death in Iowa. Governor Cummins is quoted as declaring that he has no conscientious scruples against the death penalty, and indicates that he will sign the death warrants if the court shall finally sustain the death sentences. The four men under sentence of death at the present time are: Albert Phillips, Lewis Brooks, Harry Hortman and Richard Williams. Phillips and Brooks are the two bank robbers who, at Albert City, Buena Vista County, on November 16, killed John Sundbald, a prominent citizen, and Marshal Lodinew, who were in a posse attempting to arrest the men as being connected with a bank robbery at Greenville in Clay county a few days previous. Harry Hortman on November 30 shot and killed Florence Porter, of Cherokee. The shooting was the result of a quarrel, Miss Porter having formerly been Hortman's sweetheart. Richard Williams, colored, on Sunday December 8, 1901, at Buxton, south of Oskaloosa, shot and killed Wm. Sharper, (white). The shooting was without provocation. Williams was flourishing a gun at the time and was endeavoring to hit another man named Cooper. Brooks and Phillips are to be executed on December 19, 1902; Hortman on January 28, 1903, and Williams on March 13, 1903.

"I have not yet estimated carefully, but in my opinion the passage of my bill reducing the width of highways in Iowa to fifty feet from the present legal sixty-six feet, will save to the people of the state more than 500,000 acres of tillable land. This represents a capital asset of $25,000,000, to say nothing of the value of productiveness which it represents annually," said Representative William L arrabee in an interview. Mr. Larrabee believes that the chances for the passage of his bill are reasonably good, and he expects to press it before the attention of the committees in the legislature with all the energy with which he is capable. He believes that the proposition is one that will receive the support of all the farmers of the state, whose valuable possessions will be increased to the amount mentioned and the rights of the public and the traveling farmer not affected in any particular. A highway fifty feet wide is as easily traveled as one sixty-six feet wide. Mr. Larrabee's bill is extremely simple, and provides merely that the words "sixty-six" in section 1483 of the code shall be amended to read "fifty." While the act does not provide specifically as to the ownership of this land, it provides that the center of the roads now existing shall be the center of the new roads. This means in brief that the owners abutting on highways will gain eight feet in width for the length of frontage that they own on the present highways. As a general proposition it may be said that roads now exist every half mile in every direction in this state; that is to say, there are 600 roads running north and south and 400 roads running east and west. This makes 240,000 miles of roads and the Larrabee bill gives to the farmers a strip of land 240,000 miles long and eight feet wide, or practically 500,000 acres, which at $50 makes $25,000,000.

Representative John Hughes, of Iowa county, states that he will not introduce a two-cent fare bill during this session. He believes that all of his efforts will be required to push the anti-pass bill which he has already introduced, and he does not believe in attempting too much legislation of the same nature during the same session. He did not introduce the anti-pass bill as early as he intended, but considered the matter fully, and decided finally that in order to meet the wishes of his people and to follow out what he believes to be his proper course he ought to introduce the bill and devote all of his efforts to secure its pessage. While he believes that the two-cent fare bill would be an excellant companion bill for the anti-pass bill, he does not feel equal to the task of pushing both bills. At the same time he hopes that someone else will introduce the two-cent fare bill, and if it should be introduced he will support it to the best of his ability. Mr. Hughes declares it to be his conviction that if the railroads would quit distributing passes they could easily afford to reduce the fare to two cents per mile.

NOW UP TO THE PRESIDENT.

Sampson-Schley Controversy Are Before Highest Tribunal.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The comment of Judge Advocate Lemly and Solicitor Hanna upon the appeal to the president of Admiral Schley has been made public by the naval department. It is charged first that the counsel for Schley have shifted their ground from the position taken during the controversy before the naval board. It is charged that all the grave matters are ignored and the appeal is based upon unimportant features on which there could not have been any real difference of opinion with the court. Like the appeal a considerable portion of the "comment" is devoted to the question of command and quotations from the records of the of the inquiry and the testimony, from reports and letters passing between Schley and Sampson were numerous and given for the purpose of showing that there was an understanding between the two that Sampson was in command.

OUTLOOK IS FAVORABLE.

Indications Point to Pacification of Philippines.

Manila, Jan. 31.—The general outlook for pacification in the archipelago, everywhere outside the island of Samar, has never been more favorable since the original outbreak of the Filipino insurrection than at the present time.

The insurgents have been broken up into small bands and are everywhere fleeing for shelter. They surrender daily, are captured or are killed. The policy of reconcentration and the stern measure of closing the ports to commerce have accomplished everything expected of them. General Chaffee still hopes that by the end of February the island of Samar alone will remain not pacified.

Date of Hanging is Set.

Sioux City, Jan. 30.—Harry Hortman, the young man who was convicted of killing Miss Florence Porter, has been sentenced to hang at Cherokee, March 12, 1903.

The Bettendorf Steel Axle and Car Bolster company's plant at Davenport was partly destroyed by fire. Loss $75,000, fully insured.

The jury in the case of Mrs. J. F. Belkin vs. the city of Iowa Falls returned a verdict for $3,000 in favor of the plaintiff. Suit was brought for $5,000 on account of alleged personal injuries said to have been sustained by falling on a sidewalk in Iowa Falls. The case will be promptly appealed to the supreme court.

At Oskaloosa Judge A. R. Dewey pronounced the death sentence upon Richard Williams, colored, convicted of murder in the first degree for the shooting in cold blood of one William Sharper, a white man, at Buxton on the afternoon of Sunday, December 8, 1901. The date for execution is set for Friday, March 13, 1903.

Henry Emil Haubold, a well known young man of Burlington, fainted in front of a Burlington passenger train at Fort Madison and was instantly crushed to death by the engine. He was subject to dizzy spells and fell as he was crossing the track. The terrible affair happened so quickly that nothing could be done to prevent the accident, and no blame is attached to the trainmen. Haubold was 23 years of age.

The saloon men of Dubuque under the strong compulsion brought against them by Archbishop Keane, have resolved to close the saloons at 11 o'clock and on Sunday till 1 p. m. The wine room will be abolished, also the slot machines and the sale of intoxicating drinks to minors. This is the largest concession ever made to the temperance element of Dubuque by the liquor interest and is due to the strenuous efforts of the archbishop in the cause of temperance.

TO RANK AS A PRINCESS

ELDEST DAUGHTER OF PRESIDENT GOING TO ENGLAND.

Will Lodge in the Royal Palace Wear Royal Purple and Golden Coronets.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Notwithstanding that President Roosevelt does not confirm the statement that Miss Roosevelt will accompany Whitelaw Reid and his suite to the coronation of King Edward VII., it is generally understood in the inner circles that he has consented.

It is stated today on good authority that Miss Roosevelt will sail with the party of Ambassador Reid on June 5. Mr. Choate has already been communicated with to ascertain what costume would be necessary for Miss Roosevelt.

According to her station as the daughter of the head of one of the greatest powers in the world she would be received with most distinguished honor. Court etiquette will be binding upon her. Miss Roosevelt would be out of place as a young lady merely in the suite of Mr. Reid, the special American ambassador. The hard and fast rules of a monarchy make it necessary that she should be recognized completely or not at all.

Those who know foreign customs say that Miss Roosevelt would rank with the princesses of the blood, next to those in immediate succession to a throne.

If she attends the coronation she will, therefore, wear a robe of crimson, or, as it is called, royal purple. She will be distinguished from the peeresses by additional bands of ermine and miniver. The princesses will, or course, wear golden coronets. Miss Roosevelt will be conspicuous among this group by the fact that her fair young head will not be adorned by the golden circlet, balls and strawberry leaves. This is owing to the fact that her father's dignity is not hereditary.

According to court etiquette another honor is in store for Miss Roosevelt, that of lodging at one of the royal palaces It will be impossible for her to travel incognito, as is often the custom of royalty. Immediately her presence is known in London the fact will be recognized by the royal family, and every mark of attention and honor will be extended to her.

The visit of Prince Henry to the United States is not exactly a parallel case. While a blood relative of the kaiser, he is not directly descended from the reigning soverign. Therefore the nonor paid to Miss Roosevelt will equal that which would be paid to the eldest daughter of Emperor William or the czar himself.

In its possibilities for the exchange of international compliments, the visit of Miss Roosevelt far exceeds in importance that of Prince Henry of Prussia. The opportunities for a display of international amity and cordiality are greater in the fact that she is a young girl, and the felicitations will be of a much more subtle character.

Miss Roosevelt has asked this favor of her father as a birthday gift on the occasion of becoming 18 years of age. Her father, therefore, finds it difficult to refuse her request.

SHAW GOES INTO OFFICE

SUCCEEDS GAGE AS SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Parting Between the Retiring Chief and His Subordinates Was Affecting.

Washington, Feb. 3.—At 10:30 o'clock Saturday, in the presence of the chief officers of the treasury department, Senator Dolliver and nearly all of Iowa's delegation in the lower house of congress, and other friends, Former Governor Leslie M. Shaw of Iowa took the prescribed oath of office as secretary of the treasury, succeeding Lyman J. Gage. The oath was administered by Justice Shiras of the United States Supreme Court in the largest of the secretary's office rooms in the treasury building. As soon as the ceremony was concluded Secretary Shaw was warmly congratulated by each person present upon his succession to his high office. The retiring secretary was among the first to grasp his hand and as he did so said, "Mr. Secretary, I congratulate you, and wish for your administration the highest possible degree of success." Secretary Shaw responded: "I thank you, sir, most sincerely, and if my success shall be anything like that of my predecessor I shall be fully satisfied." The new and retiring secretaries then received all of the clerks and officials in the treasury building to the number of over 2,000. Secretary Gage has the love and respect of all the officials and clerks of the department to a remarkable degree, as was shown in their leave-taking.

Many eyes were wet and voices trembled as the chief they had known and loved so well was grasped by the hand probably for the last time. Secretary Gage remained in conference with his successor an hour or more and then left the department. He will go to New York to remain a few days in the course of two or three weeks will go to Florida for a rest of two or three months. From that time his movements have not been definitely decided upon, but it is altogether probable he will return to Chicago and accept the presidency of a large trust company in that city.

Investigation shows that the fire at the Bettendorf Steel Axel company's plant in Davenport caused a loss of $200,000, much greater than the estimates given out at first. The company will rebuild at once.

The following advertisement recently appeared in a London paper: "MILK—If the individual who stole the milk off my doorstep this morning will be good enough to knock at the door on the occasion of his next professional visit, I'll give him a drop of rum to put in it. Milk taken neat on cold mornings and an empty stomach, is likely to injure the internal economy of outdoor workers.—Address, etc."

It is said that one of David B. Hill's first lawsuits was a non-jury case in which the opposing counsel was one of the best attorneys in New York state. Hill gave a speech which lasted about three hours. It was such a speech as might be expected from a young lawyer, and it was very trying to the court. After he had finished his opponent arose and said: "May it please the court, I intend to follow the example of my young friend, and submit the case without argument.' Hill lost the case.

"GO TO THE ANT."

And Learn of Her How to Be an Ideal Socialist.

"It now being past noon and Formica's thoughts turning to refreshments, she hied herself to the outskirts of the nest, where the family cows were pastured. These cows, or aphides, were feeding on the leaves of the daisy, into which they plunge their probosicides and suck all day long, filling their bodies with pleasant juices. Our ant came up behind an aphis and stroked it gently with her antennae, when the little creature gave out a drop of her sweet liquid, which Formica sucked into her own crop. There were thousands of these aphides pasturing on the leaves and thousands of ants milking them. Most of the ants took more of the juice into their crops than they needed; and, on the way back to work, gave up a part of it to friends whom they met going to the cows, thus saving the others' time and enabling them to resume their occupation more quickly. The ants were making the most of the aphis juice during the summer days, knowing that the supply would fall off later when the aphides laid their eggs. (Note here the superior mental equipoise of the ant, which neither betrays surprise nor writes to the newspapers when her cows begin to lay eggs.) These eggs the ants would store over winter, tending them with the utmost care until spring, when the young aphides are brought out and placed on the shoots of the daisy to mature and provide food again during the hot weather. This far-sightedness is unexampled in the animal kingdom. Other insects and animals put away stores for the winter, to be sure, but the ant is the only one of them that breeds its own food supply. Having taken her fill of the sweet juice on this particular day, Formica noticed that the aphis which she had been milking was in a position on the leaf which might expose it to observation of some aphidivorous insect. She immediately descended to the ground, when she obtained a mouthful of earth, and, again climbing up the daisy stalk, built a tiny shed over the cow, going back and forth several times to bring up sufficient material."—Frank Marshal' White in Pearson's.

Historic Roanoke Island.

The historic spot where the first English-speaking people landed within the boundaries of the United States is Roanoke Island, N. C., and the date was 1584. The people who settled there had been sent over by Sir Walter Raleigh, and they wrote such glowing letters home and made such attractive maps that in 1585 and 1587 the colony largely increased. It was at Roanoke Island in 1587 that Virginia Dare, the first Anglo-American, as Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, calls her, was born. She ought to have a monument, says Mr. Simmons, and he wants Congress to appropriate $25,000 for this pu[illegible] he has. Besides this, he has introduced a resolution asking Congress to appropriate [illegible] building, and the North Carolina people [illegible]ion ball w[illegible]n, which is to be held next [illegible]ugust in celebration of the lan[illegible]er of Roanoke Island. At this exposition there is to be a remarkable display of ancient manuscripts, maps, relics, curios, etc., which will illustrate an almost forgotten chapter in American history.—Kansas City Journal.

Old Needlework.

The needlework picture seems to have made its first appearance in the first years of the reign of Charles I, for although Elizabethan and Jacobean are said to exist, one with an absolutely unimpeachable pedigree is yet to be found, and the costumes in the oldest specimens the writer has yet seen certainly indicate that they cannot be assigned to a date before 1630. The earliest Stuart pictures are worked with silks on coarse, irregularly woven brownish linen canvas, in the fine, slanting stitch taken over a single thread, which is technically known as "tent stitch," or petit point. This method of working produced an effect much resembling that of tapestry, by which, indeed, the embroidered picture was probably suggested. * * * As time went on the simple stitchery was elaborated, portions of the design being wrought in silver "passing"—a fine metallic thread passed through the material instead of being applied; hence its name.—The Connoisseur.

To Irrigate in California.

Baltimore capitalists, headed by General John Gill, president of the Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company, are to organize a company to develop an irrigation system to California. It is said that $7,000,000 has already been put up and that a tract of 140,000 acres in the Rialto Plateau, San Bernardino county, has been selected for working.

Sunday of Different Nations.

Each day of the week is observed as Sunday by some nation. The first day of the week is our Christian Sunday; Monday is the sacred day of the Greeks; Tuesday is the holy day of the Persians; Wednesday of the Assyrians; Thursday of the Egyptians; Friday of the Turks, and Saturday of the Jews.

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.

JNDERFUL MACHINE.

Some Remarkable Facts Regarding the Human System

The framework of the house in which we live is made up of 206 bones.

To perform the usual movements in our daily life these 206 bones are acted upon by 522 voluntary muscles.

In a normal head of hair there are 250,000 hairs.

The brain and spinal cord have 3,000,000,000 nerve cells.

In the average man there are 32,500,000,000 red blood cells and 53,000,000 white cells.

A German writer says, according to the New York World, there are all told 26,500,000,000,000 cells in the adult human body.

The heart dispenses blessings to the bones, nerves, muscles and organs through nearly 1,000 arteries. The arterioles and capillaries are innumerable.

Life is action. The nervous system makes action possible. The nerves are the avenues to the soul. There are more than 600 nerves engaged in carrying messages to or from the brain and spinal cord. Thousands of sympathetic nerves are kept busy at the same work.

The skin of an adult man spread out on a smooth surface would cover 15 square feet.

There are 2,500,000 sweat glands in the skin. These glands empty their secretions upon the skin through a spiral channel.

In the palm of the hand there are 3,500 pores to the square inch. If these pores were united end to end they would make a sewer nearly five miles long.

The breathing surface of the lungs spread out flat would cover 2,000 square feet, or an area equal to that of a piece of land 50 feet long and 40 feet wide.

The lungs are composed of lobes, the lobes of lobules, and the lobules of 1,700,000,000 are air cells.

There are 10,000,000 villi in the small intestines. These villi are the little structures in the mucous membrane that absorb the food after it has entered the small intestine.

In the optic nerve are 500,000 fibres.

The retina is made up of ten layers. The ninth layer is composed of rods and cones standing like bricks placed on end. It is estimated that there are 3,000,000 of these cones, and the rods are still more numerous.

The most interesting part of the ear is the organ of Corti, found in the spiral portion of the internal ear. It is especially concerned in receiving and transmitting sound. It consists of two rows of rods united at their upper ends, but each rests upon a broad base, with a space between them, called a tunnel. From a side view it looks like a harp, seen from above it is strikingly like the keyboard of a piano.

The inner row of the organ of Corti contains 10,000 cells, the outer part 16,000 cells. These cells rest upon a membrane made up of 24,000 fibres.

A Tardy Recognition.

Although it is some ten years since the city of East Saginaw, Mich., ceased to exist, the United States government has persisted in calling the customs station there the "port of East Saginaw," the protests of the people of the united Saginaws notwithstanding. At last, however, an official order has been issued changing the name of the port to correspond with that of the city.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

Two weddings this week.

Friday is Valentines Day.

The roads are nice for sleighing.

O. C. Allen and bride left for their home in Hansell Monday.

Lee Carpenter, of Rockwell, was a caller the first of the week.

The Burman boys were business callers at Forest City last Thursday and Friday.

Allyn Jones was called to Sunny Tennessee last week on business pertaining to real estate.

Miss LaRue occupied the teacher's chair in the Rice district during Allyn Jones' absence.

Fred Ax's have put up a new barn on the Teeple place and also have the house ready for occupancy. We wonder what this means.

The Garner Democrat was in error last week in announcing the Burman Braund wedding as being on Feb. 11. It should have been the 12th of February.

The hand social and novelty fair at Pleasant Mound last Saturday evening was well attended and a goodly sum was realized. Selling the ladies hands was a great boon to the old bachelors who were too bashful to ask for one, and many of them availed themselves of the opportunity several times. We shall watch the outcome of this with anxious eyes.

Laura Moore no more. In our items last we failed to mention the marriage of O. C. Allen, of Hansell, to Miss Laura Moore of this place, on Jan. 31, Rev. Gutterman officiating. These young people are well known here and all wish them a happy future. On Monday of this week they started for their new home which the groom had prepared and a grand reception was given them by the people of the place, and also some very nice presents.

Saved Her Child's Life.

"In three weeks our chubby little boy was changed by Pneumonia almost to a skeleton," writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Pleasant Cit, O. "A terrible cough set in, that in spite of a good doctor's treatment for several weeks, grew worse every day. We then used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was soon sound and well. We are sure this grand medicine saved his life." Millions know it's the only sure cure for coughs, colds and all lung diseases. J. L. Harr guarantees satisfaction. 50c, $1.00. Trial bottles free.

The largest audience of the season listened to the Jubilee singers Wednesday evening. The hearers seemed well pleased.

Mr. Beokelmann and sister, of Ackley, came yesterday and will make their future home with Geo. Smith, northeast of town.

We are informed that John Deibler has taken unto himself a wife, being a daughter of J. J. Sullivan. The parties live northwest of town.

Chas. Turner returned Thursday from a visit with relatives near Pipestone, Minn., and at Humboldt. He states severe snow storms raged in that state several days ago. However, he thinks it is a nice country with a promising future.

The Last Heard of It.

"My little boy took the croup one night and soon grew so bad you could hear him breath all over the house," says F. D. Reynolds, Mansfield, O. "We feared he would die, but a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure quickly relieved him and he went to sleep. That's the last we heard of the croup. Now isn't a cough cure like that valuable?" One Minute Cough Cure is absolutely safe and acts immediately. For coughs, colds, croup, grip, bronchitis and all other throat and lung troubles it is a certain cure. Very pleasant to take. # THE NEWS IN IOWA

INVOLVES MUCH LAND.

Senate Judiciary Committee Introduces Important Bill.

Des Moines, Feb. 7.—A bill that created no small stir among the lawyers of the senate and that is far-reaching in its possible effect, has been introduced from the senate judiciary committee. Some time ago a decision of the supreme court was made to the effect that in cases where the wife had conveyed the power of attorney to her husband or vice versa, to dispose of a dowry interest in land, and he had sold such land, such sale was invalid.

The decision excited the deepest interest for the reason that a great amount of land has been disposed of in precisely this way and enormous interests are at stake. The bill introduced proposes only to invalidate the title where the husband who has disposed of the land is still living. The bill is entitled:

A bill for an act to validate certain conveyances of real estate in which the husband or wife conveyed the contingent dower interest of the other spouse.

It reads: "No conveyance heretofore made, wherein the husband or wife conveyed or contracted to convey the contingent dower interest of the other spouse, shall be held invalid because the same controvenes the provisions of section 3154 of the code and all such conveyances are hereby legalized and made effective, provided: That this act shall not affect titles where the dower interest has already vested prior to the taking effect of this act and that this act shall not affect the right of parties in any pending litigation."

Mrs. Linhoff Admits it Was She Who Fired the Fatal Shot.

Mason City, Feb. 8.—Mrs. A. C. Linhoff, accused of the murder of Edward C. Bromly, was called to the witness stand yesterday. She went over all the details of the trouble. On the night of the tragedy she testified when Mrs. Kettleson came along the walk she called her husband a foul name and that Mrs. Kettleson fell from the walk. Later Mr. and Mrs. Bromley came up. Mr. Bromley dared Linhoff off his premises, he did not go and Mr. and Mrs. Bromley started for home. When near the picket fence Mrs. Bromly up something and both started back. A picket and a stone were then thrown at Linhoff. Mrs. Linhoff stepped in the door and got the revolver, expecting to give it to her husband. When she came out there was a scuffle and she shot to frighten them away. She said she never had any intention of killing Mr. Bromley, but only meant to frighten him. The story was frequently interrupted by the sobbing of the witness.

SURPLUS IS $697,672.

Auditor and Treasurer Estimate Funds Available.

Des Moines, Feb. 8.—Financial estimates on the surplus in the state treasury have been submitted to Chairman Hughes, of the house appropriations committee, and Chairman Junkin, of the senate ways and means committee, by Auditor of State Merriam and Treasurer of State Gilbertson. They estimated the surplus available for the expenditure by this general assembly at $697,672.17. That is to say, if the state levy be not increased—the assessment of property remaining about the same—the legislature has available about $700,000 for extraordinary appropriations. Probably it will add $1,000,000 to this and if it gets $456,000 war claim it can take care of everything.

MOTHER'S AWFUL PLIGHT.

Finds Child on Top of Stove, Burned to Death.

Ida Grove, Feb. 8.—While Mrs. J. B. Eicherly of this city was over at a neighbor's telephoning, her infant babe crawled from its cab, which had been placed near the kitchen stove. When the mother returned she discovered the child on top of the stove burned to a crisp. The poor woman is nearly crazy with grief. Her husband is traveling somewhere near Fort Dodge. All efforts to communicate with him so far have failed.

Linhoff Tells His Story.

Mason City, Feb. 7.—August G. Linhoff, husband of Mrs. L. K. Linhoff, charged with the murder of Edwin C. Bromley, was on the stand all of yesterday in the Linhoff trial. His testimony was a repetition of the stories of previous witnesses in a greater part and he told in minute detail of the various squabbles which have wrought up the trouble between the families in the past.

The only sensational incident of the afternoon was when he told of the killing of Bromley by Mrs. Linhoff. He alleged that Bromley made a rush at him and that following Bromley came Mrs. Bromley with a club. He says that Mrs. Bromley threw the club and that it struck him upon the head, momentarily stunning him. When he recovered his senses he found himself clinched with Bromley and his wife opened fire with the revolver. He did not know at the time how many shots were fired.

Riot In a Colored Church.

Marshalltown, Feb. 7.—Members of the African M. E. church became involved in a quarrel with their pastor. The latter drew a revolver, but did not fire. The whole congregation, men and women, joined in the fight. A riot call was sent to the police station, who arrested the leaders. A large number were injured.

SHILOH COMMISSION REPORTS.

Asks for Authority to Use Part of Funds for Dedication.

Des Moines, Feb. 10.—The Iowa commission for the erection of monuments on the battlefiend of Shiloh, made a report to Governor Cummins Saturday. From the report it appears that the commission has entered into contract for a state monument, the contract price being $24,000. It has also entered into a contract for eleven regimental monuments, the contract price being $18,051. It has paid out $365.35 for designs, plans, blue prints and minor items, making a total of $43,216.30 that is considered needful for the immediate work of erecting the monuments. The personal expenses of the commission up to this time have been $1,256.67. The appropriation of the Twenty-eighth general assembly for the erection of monuments on Shiloh field, together with the expenses of the commission, was $50,000. Of this $2,000 was for the expenses of the committee and $48,000 monument fund. Taking out of the monument the items mentioned, except the one of $1,256.67, there remains a balance of $4,783.65. In making the contracts for the monuments the commission has had in mind appropriate dedicatory services on the completion of the work. The commission in its report to the governor dwelt on the need of suitable dedicatory exercises and said that it doubted its authority to use the balance in the monument fund for such purposes. It advised the governor that it desired such legislation as would give it discretion in the matter.

The governor sent the report to the legislature, together with a communication from himself, in which he related the facts. He says that on the commission consulting with him he advised that, while he regarded the dedication of so worthy and notable a work as important as the work itself, he could not under the terms of the act of the Twenty-eighth general assembly, making the appropriation, approve the proposed expenditure for dedication. He advised the commission to submit the facts to the general assembly, asking for authority to use so much of the unexpended monument fund appropriation as might be necessary to defray the expenses of dedication. The governor also advises, that provision be made for the actual expenses of a committee of the commission incurred in supervising the work of the contractors during the construction of the monuments.

REVOLUTIONARY MEASURE.

Hobart's Plan to Improve Country Roads.

Des Moines, Feb. 10.—Senator Hobart of Cherokee, has introduced in the senate what is regarded by the friends of the good roads movement as the most practicable measure on this subject that has been taken up in the legislature with a serious chance of becoming a law in a long time. It proposes to do away with the present method of organized road districts and to make the county a unit for all road work, with the county supervisors as the responsible authority.

The bill provides for repealing a good deal of the present road law and enacting a new law in its place. There may be levied a county tax of not over one mill, to be expended by the supervisors wherever they choose, except that taxes paid by cities and towns shall be expended on roads inside the cities or towns, or leading into them, as the councils may direct. Aside from this county tax there shall be a levy of not over four mills, to be expended by the supervisors, but the part paid by each township shall be expended within its limits. Thus the supervisors can adopt a general system of road work which will be worked out to satisfactory results, something impossible under the present law. A supervisor of road work, who shall be an expert road builder, is provided for, to be named by the supervisors.

This bill has the support of the mail carriers' association of the state, and is said to be in favor among the farmers generally, among whom much sentiment has been aroused in favor of better roads because of the demands of the rural postal routes.

FUMIGATE ALL IOWA MAIL.

Secretary Board of Health Notified Postmaster General of Smallpox.

Des Moines, Feb. 10.—Secretary J. F. Kennedy, of the state board of health, has indited a letter to Postmaster General H. C. Payne, at Washington, D. C., notifying that official that small pox conditions in Iowa are alarming; that the disease exists in every part of the state; that it is spread over wide areas; that the areas are constantly growing, and that the authorities appear to be unable to cope with it. Dr. Kennedy enclosed a resolution, passed by the board at its last meeting, requesting all postmasters in the state to be vaccinated. The board expects a general order for the fumigation of Iowa mail to issue from the Washington authorities. It is impossible to estimate the millions of dollars loss that Iowa will suffer from the small pox agitation and exaggeration.

Respecting the Des Moines situation, the state board passed a resolution giving the city seventeen days in which to do business in suppressing small pox in this city. A committee composed of Linn, Powers and McKiveen was appointed to keep tab on Des Moines. The bill drawn by Attorney General Mullan at the instance of the board, giving it specific and full power to interfere in Des Moines or any other place in which the local authorities were not equal to the small pox situation, has not been introduced in the legislature as was expected.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, Feb. 4.—Senate.—Among bills introduced were the following: By Hayward, to convert the Knoxville home for the blind into a female reformatory; by Courtright, giving a standard form of official bond; this is designed to compel surety companies to give straight bonds instead of insurance policies; Garst, by request, prohibiting farmers' fire, hail, windstorm, tornado and accident associations from issuing paid up policies; by Alexander, to require the assessment of property in special charter cities at 25 per cent of its actual value; by Alexander, to allow savings banks to accept twenty times their capital stock in deposits.

Appropriation bills were proposed as follows: For St. Louis, $250,000; for Clarinda, $69,700; for Knoxville reformatory, $18,000; for completing historical building, $300,000. The senate appropriations committee decided to report favorably the bill giving Cherokee $138,000 for furniture, etc.

House.—Warren's resolution to limit the St. Louis appropriation to $100,000 was sent to the committee on apropriations, which is equivalent to killing it. Bill to permit city of Des Moines to lend $50,000 to the water works company was passed. A resolution accepting an invitation to visit Knoxville on the 15th was carried. A number of bills of importance were introduced.

Des Moines, Feb. 5.—Senate.—The bill for an emergency appropriation of $138,000 for the completion, equipment and furniture of the Cherokee insane hospital was passed without opposition. Among bills introduced were the following: By Hubbard, to provide a department in one of the hospitals of the state for the treatment of dipsomaniacs, inebriates and persons addicted to excessive use of narcotics; by Smith, requiring reports of railroads to executive council to be uniform, and to cover gross and net earnings on business originating in Iowa, out of Iowa, terminating in Iowa, or out of Iowa wholly outside or inside Iowa.

House.—The house today memorialized congress to pass the Lacey bill to indemnify the states for payments made on account of purchase of swamp lands at $1.25 an acre. This includes about 1,000,000 acres in Iowa. English introduced a bill providing for reports to be made by railway companies to the executive council. The plan outlined is practically the same as that outlined by Governor Cummins in his inaugural.

Des Moines, Feb. 6.—The senate accepted an invitation to visit Knoxville and inspect the abandoned home for the blind buildings on the 15th. Trewin's bill to codify and republish the session laws since 1897 passed. Kendall's resolution for a commission to investigate recent mine explosions in Iowa was adopted. Among bills introduced were the following: By Hopkins, to appropriate $37,000 to erect on state fair grounds, fire proof stock pavilion 175x225 feet, with a show ring 170x120 and a seating capacity of 4,000; by Young of Washington, to appropriate $35,000 for monuments to Iowa troops at Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge; a commission to locate position to be named from the eleven Iowa organizations in the battles of Chattanooga. The Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Ninth, Tenth, Seventeenth, Twenty-fifth, Twenty-sixth, Thirtieth and Thirty-first Iowa regiments and First Iowa battery were there.

House.—Wise offered a joint resolution to amend the constitution by providing for biennial elections. A large number of bills of minor importance were introduced. Carter filed a motion to consider the action of the house in voting to request the Iowa delegation to vote for the Lacey swamp land bill.

Des Moines, Feb. 7.—Senate.—The trolley line tax proposition was taken up and debated at length, but finally was sent back to the committee. Among bills introduced was one by Crawford, to establish an eastern Iowa school for the deaf in central-eastern Iowa; to be under the state board of control; an appropriation of $100,000 is made, and $15,000 annual support.

House.—Among bills passed were these: To provide water for the Des Moines army post; appropriating $138,000 for the Cherokee hospital; providing five days' notice in garnishment proceedings. The bill abolishing days of grace came in for considerable discussion, and it was finally defeated by a vote of 43 to 54. Among bills introduced were the following: By Furry, providing for the appointment of three public examiners by the governor to examine the offices of treasurers and other county officers annually; examiners to receive $5 per day, and providing for a uniform system of keeping the books of county treasurer; by Hughes, providing for $2,000 appropriation for inspection of county and private institutions in which insane persons are kept.

Des Moines, Feb. 10.—Senate.—By a vote of 30 to 12 the senate Saturday passed the Blanchard bill authorizing the people to vote taxes in aid of the construction of electric trooley lines. A condition prohibiting the issuing of watered stock by the corporations which secure the taxes was voted into the bill unanimously. Some of the opponents of the measure predict that it will fail in the house. Senator Crossley in debate Saturday said the passage of bills of this character would soon make Iowa the New Jersey of the west. The Teachout bills authorizing Des Moines to lend the water works company $50,000 to help construct mains to the site for the army post passed the senate, unanimously, Saturday, and as soon as the bills are signed by the governor and published the loan will be legal and may be effected by the city council. The bill making taxes on property in the hands of receivers a preferred claim was passed without opposition. Among bills introduced were the following: By Hopkins, repealing chapter 109 of the acts of the Twenty-eighth general assembly, which compelled teaching of vocal music in the schools; by Hobart, repealing sections 1528-1568, respecting working of roads. The bill makes each county a road district, under supervision of the board of supervisors; a general levy of 1 mill is authorized, the part raised in cities and towns being expended therein under direction of the council; a 4 mill levy is authorized, the tax raised in different townships being expended therein; a road supervisor is created for one year terms, at $3 per day. The supervisors may contract to the lowest bidder to do the work.

House.—A communication from governor respecting the report of the Shiloh commission was filed. On motion of Stuckslager the message was referred to a special committee of three to draft a bill in accordance with its provisions. Three bills of minor importance were passed. A motion to reconsider the action by which the bill to abolish days of grace was defeated was filed by Temple and Payne. Among bills introduced were the following: By Langan, to establish a barbers' examining board of three to license barbers; by Calderwood, permitting boards of supervisors in counties of over 30,000 to increase the salaries of county recorders to $2,000; by Moore, amending the military code of Iowa, providing that the Iowa National Guard shall consist of four regiments of infantry, one signal company, and at the discretion of the commander-in-chief, two troops of cavalry and two batteries. If a requistion is made by the president the governor shall order into service the National Guard. Enlistments in the guard are to be from one to three years. Bill is a general revision of the code on minor points.

OSTEOPATHS WIN SUIT

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH MUST RECOGNIZE THEM.

Not in Province of Board to Establish Requirements of Osteopaths Not Provided by Statute.

Des Moines, Feb. 10.—Judge Holmes of the district court, in the case of C. L. Parsons vs. the state board of medical examiners, handed down an opinion in which he held that the plaintiff was entitled to a writ of mandamus directing the defendant to issue a certificate permitting him to practice osteopathy in this state.

Plaintiff brought the suit as a test case for the Still college of this city, to whose graduates the board had refused to issue certificates, claiming that it was not up to the standard required by the board.

The court finds that the refusal of the board to issue the plaintiff a certificate was based upon the fact that the board had adopted on December 29, 1898, a schedule of minimum requirements for schools of osteopathy and that this was in conflict with chapter 69 of the acts of the Twenty-seventh general assembly regulating the practice of osteopathy in Iowa, inasmuch as the general assembly had therein provided what the requirements should be and it was only left for the board to determine whether the school from which the plaintiff holds a diploma complied with the provisions of this act.

The court found further that the refusal of the board of medical examiners to issue the certificate to plaintiff was based upon an investigation which had not covered the question of whether the school was within the requirements of the statute or not; that it was not within the province of the board to determine more than whether the school was a school of good repute and whether the course of study comprized a term of at least twenty months of four terms of five months each as provided in the statute and included the branches of study named in the statute.

The court found that those practicing osteopathy are not within the provisions of the statute relating to the practice of medicine, surgery and obstetrics.

The defendant having raised the question of the constitutionality of the act referred to on the ground that it permits osteopathic physicians to practice their profession without having pursued the same course of study as is required of persons attempting to cure diseases by the administration of drugs or by the practice of surgery, and was therefor in violation of section 6, of article I of the constitution, which provides that all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation and that the general assembly shall not grant to any citizen or class of citizens privileges of immunities which upon the same terms shall not equally belong to all citizens, the court finds that every citizen of the state can, if he so desires, bring himself within the provisions of the act and thus secure the privileges provided therein, and for this reason the act is held to be not in violation of this section of the constitution.

The court finds that the act of the board in refusing the certificate was arbitrary and that therefore the writ should issue.

The decision is a complete victory for the local school and is one that has been sought by the osteopaths of the state for the last three years, the state board during that time having refused to issue them certificates.

The state association of osteopaths cooperated with the Still school in bringing the suit.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, Feb. 10, 1902.

Custodian J. D. McGarraugh has filed his last annual report with Governor Cummins. It is a lengthy document, covering the same points as usual, the question of repairs and improvements which have been made on the building and about the offices, containing an inventory of the state's furniture and equipment and other matters of interest pertaining to the state's property.

Governor Cummins announced the reappointment of Fletcher Howard on the state pharmacy commisison. Mr. Howard's re-appointment is not a surprise to those familiar with the situation. He was bitterly opposed by the silver democrats on the ground that he was not entitled to consideration as a member of the democratic party. Mr. Howard proved, however, that he had always voted the democratic ticket and had always contributed to the democratic campaign funds, although he was not a 16-to-1 adherent. Mr. Howard is the only democratic member of the board. The law does not require that the board shall be non-partisan, though by custom it has been made so.

The State Grocers' association has succeeded in getting its bill introduced in the house. Representative Head took charge of the measure. It provides that 10 per cent of a man's wages may at any time be subject to garnishment. The present law provides that a man's wages are not subject to garnishment unless they remain uncollected for a term of more than three months. This bill will meet with opposition from the labor unions, although many of the labor leaders are in favor of it.

H. H. Abrams is confident that his bill for the establishment of an inebriate hospital will be passed by the legislature this year. It has been introduced in both houses and he has canvassed the situation with considerable care. He believes that a majority of the members are in favor of it. It is not the intention to establish a separate hospital for inebriates, but merely to have a ward or cottage.

Auditor of State Merriman has issued an ultimatum to a number of the big foreign fire insurance companies that have paid to the treasurer of state the 3½ per cent tax required by law but have done so under protest. Unless their protests are withdrawn the auditor has notified them they will be refused certificates to transact business in Iowa for the current year.

The companies that are affected are the following, all companies organized or incorporated outside of the United States: Liverpool and London and Globe, Prussian National Insurance company, North British and Mercantile Insurance company of London and Edinburgh, London Assurance corporation of London, the Imperial Insurance company, limited, of England, Lion Fire Insurance company of Hartford (United States branch), Northern Assurance company, limited, of London, Atlas Assurance company, limited, of London, Scottish company, Norwich Union Fire Insurance society of England.

Representative Sweeley, of Woodbury county, has decided to divide his telephone bill, which met an unfavorable reception in the committee on municipal corporations. It will be divided into three bills and he hopes to be able to secure the passage of one of them at least. The first bill will be for municipal ownership. The second will give cities the right to regulate prices charged for service. This measure is likely to pass. Many of the members of the committee who opposed the other sections are in favor of this one. A third bill will require companies to connect with each other for telephone service between towns. It is this part in which Mr. Sweeley is most interested and this is also the portion that has met with the greatest opposition from all the companies. Mr. Sweeley believes, however, that he will be able to do more with the different measures separated than with them all embodied in one bill.

The most important measure of railroad legislation which has been introduced so far in this session is the amendment to the present law offered by Senator Hogue, which in effect compels railroads to furnish as many frieght cars to shippers in this state as they may demand. Senator Hogue declares that the purpose of the bill is this very thing, that is, to force the railroads to furnish cars to every man who asks for them. This is to say that if the railroad has not the cars demanded, it must procure them. It means that a refusal to furnish cars cannot be made by a railroad company.

Senator Crossley's bill for primary elections is attracting considerable attention in the legislature and several members of the committee on elections have expressed themselves as in favor of leaving it optional as the law is at present. One great advantage of the proposed law, however, is that all political parties will be required to hold their conventions the same day.

The bill reported by the house committee on schools for the consolidation of independent school districts is along practically the same lines as suggestions made by State Superintendent Barrett. It provides for the consolidation of independent districts in the following manner: At the request of ten voters residing in each of the districts which it is proposed to join together an election is to be called, and if at this election a majority of the votes cast are in favor of uniting the districts another election is to be called to choose a board of directors for the new district. If the districts consolidated have a total population of less than 500 they are to be governed by a board of directors consisting of three members, and if more than 500, by a board consisting of five members. The bill also provides that school townships and civil townships may be organized as independent districts in the same manner. This does not apply to cities and towns which constitute districts of themselves. Another bill has been introduced providing for the transportation of pupils.

RAILWAY ASSESSMENT.

CUMMINS' PLAN IS PROPOSED IN A NEW BILL

Presented in the House by English and in the Senate by Smith.

Des Moines, Feb. 7.—A bill designed to add to the present railway assessment law has been introduced in the house by English of Polk and in the senate by Senator Smith. It is a bill embodying ideas of the governor for reforms in railroad assessment laws, as pointed out in his inaugural address. It is understood this bill is the predecessor of another that will come later, providing for more radical changes in the railroad assessment law, whereby the council will be required to pay less attention to gross earnings and to take into consideration other data, including the market value of stocks and bonds.

The bill follows:

A bill for an act relating to reports to be made by railway companies to the executive council to aid in the assessment of railway property for taxation, and providing for a uniform system in making the said reports.

Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Iowa:

Section 1. That for the purpose of making reports to the executive council, the gross earnings of railway companies, owning or operating a line or lines of railway partly within this state, and partly within another state, or other states, or territory, or territories, upon their line or lines within this state, shall be ascertained and reported by said railway companies as follows, to-wit:

(1). Business originating and terminating within this state shall be separately reported with the full earnings thereon.

(2). Business originating in this state and terminating elsewhere; business originating elsewhere and terminating in this state; and business neither originating nor terminating in this state, but carried or done over the line or lines in this state, or over some part thereof, shall be reported, separating the three classes last above mentioned, with the full earnings thereon in this state, the earnings in this state being computed upon the basis of the length of the haul or carriage in this state as compared with the length of haul or carriage elsewhere. It being hereby declared that for the purpose of making reports looking to the assessment of railway property for taxation the gross earnings or business done or carried partly within this state and partly another state, or other states, or territory, or territories, shall be that proportion of the entire earning of such business that the haul or carriage in this state bears to the entire haul or carriage.

Section 2. The executive council shall have the power to prescribe such rules and regulations with respect to the keeping of accounts by the railway companies doing business in this state as will insure the accurate division of earnings as aforesaid, and uniformity in reporting the same to the executive council.

Section 3. The executive council shall have the power to prescribe a method for all railway companies doing business in this state, together with rules and regulations for the ascertainment of the net earnings of the railway lines in this state, to the end that all such railway companies, in ascertaining and making report of net earnings, shall proceed upon the same basis and in a uniform manner.

Section 4. The reports herein provided for are not in lieu of, but in addition to, the reports provided for by law, and they shall be made at the time and as a part of the reports already required.

Section 5. The rules, regulations, method and requirements herein provided to be made by the executive council shall be made and communicated in writing or print to the said several railway companies within thirty days from and after the passage and taking effect of this act, and shall be and become binding upon said railway companies from the time they are so communicated: provided, however, that the said executive council shall have the power to prescribe supplemental or additional rules, regulations, and requirements at any time, and communicate them to the several railway companies in the manner aforesaid, and with respect to such additional or supplemental rules, regulations, and requirements, they shall be and become binding upon the said railway companies within thirty days after they are so communicated.

Section 6. If any railway company shall fail or refuse to obey or conform to the rules, regulations, method and requirements so made or prescribed by the executive council under the provisions of this act, or to make the reports as herein provided for, the executive council shall proceed and assess the property of such railway companies so failing or refusing, according to the best information obtainable, and shall then add to the taxable valuation of such railway company twenty-five per centum thereof, which valuation and penalty shall be separately shown, and together shall constitute the assessment for that year.

Section 7. This act being deemed of immediate importance shall take effect from and after its passage and publication in the Iowa State Register and Des Moines Leader, newspapers published in the city of Des Moines, Polk county, Iowa.

SLEW A MAN WITH HIS FIST.

But Jury Finds Him Guilty of Very Small Offense.

Sioux City, Feb. 8.—Eleven men found Frank B. Ferguson guilty of assault with intent to commit great bodily injury for killing Leonard Shelgren with his fists January 5th last at the home of Samuel Surplice, 506 Sixth avenue. This offense carries with it a maximum penalty of a $500 fine or a year in jail, so Ferguson will escape the penitentiary, where he has twice been sent. Juror John Myers was taken ill with erysipelas and was forced to leave the jury box. The attorneys agreed to let the other eleven men decide th case. A number of the jurors wanted to find Ferguson guilty of a more serious offense, but at length compromised. The verdict went farther than the indictment, which charged manslaughter, in that the jury found that the accused man was possessed of an intent, while no intent is implied in the manslaughter charge. Ferguson struck Shelgren three times in the head, causing his death.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Senate.—After a brief discussion today the senate passed the bill providing for a 25 per cent increase in the salaries of United States judges. All amendments were voted down, including one to increase the salaries of cabinet officers from $8,000 to $12,000 a year. During the remainder of the day's session the urgent deficiency appropriation bill was under consideration. the Philippine tariff measure being laid aside temporarily. Hansbrough, of North Dakota, made a spirited defense of Judge Arthur H. Noyes, of the district court of Alaska, and Alexander McKenzie, upon whom an attack was made in the senate yesterday. This precipitated a long discussion of the Noyes case, legal and technical rather than personal. No action could be taken on this subject, but the discussion will be continued under the latitude allowed when apropriation bills are pending.

House.—Debate on the oleomargarine bill continued today in the house and the prospects are that a vote will not be reached earlier than Thursday. The opponents of the bill are making a strong fight so far as the presentation of argument is concerned. The speakers today were Tompkins, of New York; Robb, of Missouri; Knapp, of New York; Bates, of Pennsylvania; Davidson, of Wisconsin; Driscom, of New York, and Hepburn, of Iowa, in favor, and Cowherd, of Missouri; Lanham, of Texas; Grosvenor, of Ohio, and Kleberk, of Texas, against the bill.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Senate.—Throughout today's session the senate had under consideration the urgent deficiency apropriation bill, and just before adjournment passed it substantially in the shape in which it was reported to the senate by the committee. During the early part of the session the case of Judge Arthur H. Noyes of the district court of Alaska, and Alexander McKenzie and others was discussed. McCumber, of North Dakota, delivered an elaborate speech in defense of Judge Noyes and Mr. McKenzie. He paid a high personal tribute to both men, characterizing them as men of fine character, eminent ability and sterling integrity, incapable of doing the things with which they had been charged. Incidentally he criticised the circuit court of appeals of San Francisco for permitting itself to be influenced by prejudice and bias. He became involved in a colloquy with Tillman, who said he appeared in the novel attitude of a defender of the United States judiciary. The South Carolina senator had intimated that he would deliver a speech on the Noyes case, but at the conclusion of McCumber's speech he contented himself practically with putting into the congressional record the decision of the circuit court of appeals of San Francisco in the cases of contempt against Noyes and McKenzie. In a brief speech Stewart reviewed the case, speaking strongly against Noyes and his actions in Alaska.

House.—An agreement was reached in the house today whereby the oleomargarine bill will be brought to a vote after two more days of consideration, one to be devoted to general debate and one to debate under the five minute rule. The debate today continued in desultory fashion without special incident, the speakers being Kluttz of North Carolina, McLeary of Minnesota, Eddy of Minnesota and Crowley of Illinois for, and Allen of Kentucky, Scott of Kansas, Moon of Tennessee and Boutelle of Illinois against the bill. Tomorrow the bill will be laid aside to permit action on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bills.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Senate.—For four hours the senate had the Philippine tariff bill under discussion. The measure was completed, so far as the Philippine committee is concerned, all of the committee amendments being adopted. Several other amendments, however, will be offered, one or two being pending. Toward the close of the session the discussion became heated. In response to a resolution offered several days ago by Rawlins, of Utah, the secretary of war transmitted to the senate the sedition laws enacted by the Philippine commission. They were read in full and immediately drew the fire of the opponents of the government's Philippine policy. Hoar, of Massachusetts, expressed his astonishment that such law should be enforced by the government authorities. Foraker, of Ohio, had read from the revied statutes of the United States the laws of congress relating to the crime of treason and similar offenses against the government, and said that the acts passed by the Philippine commission were almost identical in their language with the laws enacted by congress in the days of the fathers of the republic, and that there was nothing unprecedented or unusual about them.

The Ohio senator was interrupted continually and had several warm colloquies with senators who were opposing him. In one of them he announced with great earnestness that the American army would never return from the Philippines until it returned victorious, and that gentlemen in and out of congress, rail about it as they might, ought thoroughly to understand that fact. In conclusion of the debate, Hoar poured oil on the troubled waters of the senate, saying that men might well differ on any of the great questions now before the country, but that all were thoroughly loyal to the country and were doing their duty as they saw it.

House.—The house spent the day on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. Very rapid progress was made, 74 of the 130 pages of the bill being disposed of before adjournment. No debate of importance were developed during the consideration of the bill and no amendments of importance were adopted.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Senate.—The Philippines tariff bill was taken up early in the senate today. The session was notably quiet. Turner, of Washington, delivered a carefully prepared speech on the general Philippine question, and had not concluded when the bill was laid aside for the day. He discussed particularly the legal and constitutional questions involved in the government and control of the Philippine archipelago by the United States. After the adoption of only minor amendments, the pension appropriation bill was passed early in the session.

House.—The house today passed the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, the second of the regular supply bills. As passed it carries $25,171,969, which is $503,721 in excess of the current law. Only two amendments of importance were adopted. One provides for a commission to redistrict the legislative districts of Oklahoma, and the other authorizes the president in his discretion to cover into the civil service the temporary clerical force employed on account of the war with Spain. There are about 1,250 of these clerks still in the service. By the terms of the amendment, the president must place all or none of them under the civil service.

SWINDLED IN LARGE WAY

CONCLUSION REACHED AS TO BRITISH WAR OFFICE.

Evidence Show Hardly Any of Supplies for South Africa Have Been Bought Right.

London, Feb. 10.—The apparent incompetence, and it is claimed, possible dishonesty which permeate the purchasing department of the army board, as revealed last week in parliament, have caused a public agitation that augurs badly for the war office. Judging from recent disclosures, scarcely any of the supplies for the army in South Africa were secured on business principles. Speculating contractors are now known to have made nundreds of thousands of pounds by reselling contracts.

The opposition vainly endeavored to get details regarding the new contract for the supply of meat, announced by the government in the house of commons, with the view of ascertaining if a saving over the former methods will be really effected. The government successfully avoided answering, but tue Associated Press understands that the contract in question was first resold at $50,000 premium, and then at $200,000, while Cecil Rhodes and the De Beers group handed over $1,000,000 and thus finally secured the privilege of supplying the troops in South Africa with fresh meat. These figures are likely to be published here soon and when known will doubtless add fuel to the fire of public indignation which threatens to center around the secretary of war, Mr. Broderick, as viciously as it did around Lord Landsdowne when the latter was sponsor for the early blunders of the war. A dozen or more committees of investigation are now sitting or are in process of formation, but as the Saturday Review says, "these are only too often synonyms of oblivion."

"The fact remains," adds the Saturday Review, "that we have been swindled on a very large scale."

While those stringent criticisms of the war office are being publicly aired, there is proceeding beneath the surface a revolt which threatens to be of even greater importance. The leading authorities of the volunteers, including many of the commanders of the best known regiments, several of them being titled persons and nearly all wealthy, are holding frequent meeting to decide upon the best method of defeating Mr. Broderick's new volunteer regulations.

The committee which Broderick appointed to hear the grievances only aggravated matters. The commanders of the leading regiments had previously formed themselves into a deputation to wait on Mr. Broderick and he, temporarily, declined to see them; but the secretary of war stole a march on the members of the deputation by announcing in the house of commons that he had appointed a committee of his own, in which not one of the deputation was included. His action created intense feeling among members of the original deputation, who privately declare that the new volunteer regulations and the "dead head committee" were introduced for the sole purpose of making conscription possible.

PRESIDENT'S SON IS SICK.

Theodore, Jr., is Afflicted With Pneumonia.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Mrs. Roosevelt, the wife of the president, left Washington yesterday afternoon for Groton, Mass., where their son, Theodore, Jr., is lying seriously ill of pneumonia. Mrs. Roosevelt is accompanied only by a maid. The first information to reach the president and Mrs. Roosevelt of the illness of their son was received at the white house by telegraph this morning. The message was signed by the president of the college where the young man is a pupil and stated in effect that a slight indisposition had developed into an acute and sharp attack of pneumonia and that he was seriously ill.

Mr. Phillips Pays His Fine.

Ottumwa, Feb. 7.—T. J. Phillips, former candidate for governor, was fined twenty-five dollars in the district court for kicking Editor Moore several weeks ago. He pleaded guilty.

BEFORE HE TOOK VOGELER'S

He Could Not Touch His Wife's Dinners, and They Were "Fit for a King."

So writes our esteemed friend Mr. Frank Chambers of 9 Bennett street, Chiswick: "For over two years I suffered agonies from indigestion and became reduced to a mere shadow of my stalwart self. I would return home from my business feeling so faint that I could hardly drag one leg after the other. My dear wife did all she possibly could to tempt me with dainty dishes, and as I entered the house I sniffed and thought: 'Oh, how good; I know I can eat that!' But alas! no sooner had I eaten a few mouthfuls, when I felt sick; severe pains shot through my chest and shoulder blades, my eyes swam and everything seemed black, I became alternately hot and cold, and got up from such a dainty dinner heartily sick of living, and feeling I was a sore trial to everybody. I may mention that I was also very much troubled with scaly skin, and often boils. But one evening I noticed my wife seemed more cheerful than usual. I questioned her and found she had been reading a pamphlet she had received of men afflicted just as I was, and who had been cured by Vogeler's Compound. Said she, 'What gives me more faith in it is that it is made from the formula of an eminent physician now in active practice in the West End of London, so I am sure it is no quack thing.' 'All right, dear, let's have a bottle,' said I. After taking the contents of the first bottle, I felt very much better, and determined to give this remedy a fair trial, and I can positively assure you that a few bottles made a new man of me. I can sleep well, eat anything, and thoroughly enjoy life. I have told several of my friends whom I knew were suffering the same as myself, and they all wish me to say that they are like new men. I sincerely bless the great physician who gave you the formula of Vogeler's Curative Compound, and also yourselves for making its virtues known to a suffering public."

THE KANSAS PEOPLE ARE IN LOVE WITH WESTERN CANADA.

They Say the Land There Is the Finest on Earth.

A great number of delegates have been influenced through the agency of Mr. J. S. Crawford, the Canadian government representative at Kansas City, to visit western Canada, and whether from Missouri or Kansas the story is always the same—they are pleased with the new country being opened up. Isaac H. Levagood writes from Didsbury, Alberta, as follows:

"I met three delegates from Kansas yesterday at Didsbury, and took them home with me and took them out in the afternoon and showed them some of the finest land that lays on top of God's green earth. They are more than pleased with this country. They stayed with me last night; this morning I took them to Didsbury, and [illegible] around north. When they come back [illegible] coming to my place and I [illegible] help them to run some lines [illegible] are going to locate in sight of my house. There have been over 1,200 acres of land changed hands here in our neighborhood this spring. When I located here last fall I was the furthest back of any of the settlers; to-day I am in the center of the settlement. We have thirty-six children that are of school age in our district, and we will have our school district organized next month, when we will proceed to build our schoolhouse. The longer we stay here the better we like the country; that is the way with everybody here, they all seem to be satisfied and doing well. I have talked with a great many men here and they told me that they had less than $50 when they got here, and today they have got 160 acres of good land and five or six hundred dollars' worth of stock. Crops are looking fine here. I think this will be a good winter wheat country. One of my neighbors has a small piece and it looks fine."

Three Versions

A negro minstrel company that has been playing in towns this side of Sioux City, has probably been peddling smallpox. One member of the company was taken sick at Britt, and the Tribune says:

A darkey traveling troupe came to Britt on Friday and one of the colored men was taken sick. Dr. Cole was called and pronounced the case small pox. The man and his wife were taken to the old Mahoney building which has been quarantined and Dr. Samms, the newly appointed member of the state board of health, was wired. He came and agreed with Dr. Cole that it is genuine small pox. Just one case no more no less. The colored man's wife is with him, she has been vaccinated recently and no fear is entertained but what the case is strictly isolated and no fear of any spread of the disease. It is queer that no more cases are known through the country than there are. Marshalltown, Cedar Rapids and Des Moines have cases every day in the year but all are mild and it is rare that a death occurs. The Britt case need give no one any fear. It was taken in time and is properly isolated.

Concerning this same company the Belmond Press has the following:

Last Saturday morning a company of negroes, four men and three women, drifted into town from Corwith, and began billing the town for a show Monday night. Not long after their arrival the authorities learned that one of their number had been taken sick with small pox and was quarantined at Britt. It was also reported that at both Britt and Corwith when the facts became known the balance of the company were hired to leave the towns. Our officers took a different course however realizing that it was or should be a criminal act to thus endanger the public safety. The entire company were fumigated, vaccinated and then quarantined in a small house in the extreme north end of town. Three of the men upon exhibiting physician's certificates to the effect that they had had the smal pox were released after being vaccinated, etc. There is practically no danger of the disease spreading and our officers are to be commended for their prompt action along the only right and proper course.

The Corwith Hustler however don't own up that the company even struck their town. It simply says:

Britt has a case of smallpox, but as the individual is strictly quarantined there is no danger of the spread of the disease. The individual afflicted is a colored man, formerly a member of the Rival Coons Co.

It is a good thing for the country that occasional towns have officers like Belmond's. There is a great deal of criminal carelessness in handling smallpox. which accounts to a great extent for its wide prevalence.

"I have lately been much troubled with dyspepsia, belching and sour stomach," writes M. S. Mead, leading pharmacist of Attleboro, Mass. "I could eat hardly anything without suffering several hours. My clerk suggested I try Kodol Dyspepsia Cure which I did with most happy results. I have had no more trouble and when one can go to eating mince pie, cheese candy and nuts after such a time, their dige-tion mu-t be pretty good. I endorse Kodol Dyspepsia Cure heartily." There has been considerable scare around the country from dogs with hydrophobia. It is reported that over near Hutchins a dog affected with rabies bit several other dogs, and as a precaution the farmers in that neighborhood killed about sixteen dogs and tied up or shut up the rest. A bullet is the best thing for a dog as soon as he shows symtoms of hydrophobia. It's dangerous to allow them to roam around the country.

Senator Culiom, of Illinois, was asked by a correspondent why the Committee on Foreign Relations had enjoined secrecy on the text of the new treaty with Great Britain, when the text of the treaty was printed in all the morning papers. We knew that if we made it public at once not a paper in the country would print its full text."

A French scientist claims to have discovered that laziness in mankind is caused by bacteria. Now he is experimenting with drugs which he hopes will kill the microbes of laziness and permit the man to become industrious and energetic, and eager to earn a good living. We fear there are many people who are so fond of indolence that they will never willingly let the innocent little microbes be harmed.

Philadelphia boasts of a setter called Bill, who recently aroused a sleeping family in a burning house, when delay would have meant death and then himself carried a little child to safety. Bill was asleep at the foot of the stairs on the first floor, shortly after midnight, when the house caught on fire. When the smoke aroused him the family was still asleep and unconscious of danger. He instantly bounded upstairs, barking furiously at every step, until he reached the rooms of his owners, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shannon, and tugged at the bedclothes with his teeth. Mr. Shannon awoke, and, alarmed by the smoke, leaped out of bed, but before he could get into his clothes the dog had caught the night dress of Elvina, a six-year-old daughter of the family, between his teeth, dragged her to the floor and bore her out into the hallway, where the parents took the child from him and carried her into the street.

A Strong Statement.

Star, Wis., Feb. 10th.—Mr. Samuel S. Hook, one of the most highly respected residents of this neighborhood, has given a very hearty recommendation to Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy recently introduced here. He says:

"I have been a sufferer from Kidney Disease for some time and found nothing to help me till I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They gave me almost immediate relief, and I am now well. I have recommended them to many friends and in every case with splendid results.

"They are the very best pills for all kinds of ailments, but especially for Kidney Complaints."

MARY THE MAID OF THE INN.... A Story of English Life.

By JOSEPH HATTON.

CHAPTER XV.—(Continued.)

Morley had gone to the inn. The people at the "Hark-to-Rover" had come round to Mrs. Meadows to beg her for good neighbor's sake to be present while they "cut the cheese," one of the trifling customs of the place, and in memory of Jack, who had always joined their humble board; and they had pressed her so warmly, vowing she should not be away for many minutes, that she was induced to put her shawl over her head and go with them. Her brother was sitting before the fire, smoking a pipe, and nursing a gouty foot, and Mary was lying half asleep on the sofa, in the chimney corner.

When Mrs. Meadows returned her brother was fast asleep in his chair, and Mary was nowhere to be seen.

The widow searched for her, called her by name, then grew alarmed, and went back to her neighbors.

They left their cheese and posset, their smoking ale and currant cake, to join in the search for Mary.

It would not have been odd to have missed her in the daytime; but there was something alarming in the notion that she should be wandering abroad on a cold icy night, and that night—of all others—Christmas Eve, when, according to Kirkstall in those days, the world was more or less peopled with apparitions, good, as a rule, it was thought—angels hovering over the land to whisper glad messages to forlorn souls.

The night was bright and starlight, the sign of Bethlehem shining in the blue heavens, the very star that had been the harbinger of peace and goodwill to man. The snow had ceased to fall; but hill and dale, tree and roadway, were white with their winter clothes.

It was what they called then, and what we call now, when we get it, an old-fashioned Christmas.

The good people of "Hark-to-Rover" spread themselves about the district, and they were still searching for Mary when Mr. Taylor and a native brought old Morley home in time to hear the Christmas bells ring out their joyful message.

Informed of what had occurred they drove along the road to the abbey (carefully avoiding the grewsome tree by the plantation), and met Mrs. Meadows and some others, but without Mary. It had not occurred to them to look for the poor maniac where she was found the next morning.

On the previous day a cloud of carrion crows had hovered around the gibbet, finally resting upon the tree, the figure in chains hanging immovable in its icy bonds.

It might be that these evil birds had more than an earthly reputation of vileness.

Superstitious natives of Kirkstall who saw them, believing they were evil spirits, noted them as of curiously draggled plumage, with fierce beaks, and making strange and hideous cries. It might have been, they thought, in their imaginative blindness—or with an inspired vision—who shall say?—that the hosts of heaven were driving the carrion crows out of the land, and that they had clung to the gibbet as their rightful resting place.

There are no bounds to the Divine mercy, and the last appeal of a good and pure woman is known to be full of saving grace.

CHAPTER XVI.

The moon was shining bright and clear; the stars had gone to rest, leaving sentinel over the sleeping constellations that one diamond-shaped planet the Kirkstall folk had looked upon as the star of Bethlehem, when Mary Lockwood laid herself at the foot of the awful tree and fell asleep.

Had her cruel destiny in its natural sequence of events led her there? Had the inspiration of her love brought her, in pathetic sympathy, to the feet of him at whose grim altar she should complete her moral sacrifice? Was it a pagan sacrifice? Or was it the outcome of the Divine love that was above all love, the Divine mercy which had received the penitent words of the sinner in those last moments of York jail, and selected this gracious time to give them a sign of His Fatherly sympathy and mercy? May it not be that under this celestial inspiration His angels—seeking a supreme opportunity to signalize the blessed eve—had interceded for both the loved and the lost, and, purifying the grim sign of man's stern justice, scattering the evil birds of hell, had brought poor Mary where they had found her, to transform that wretched symbol of man's unforgiving creed into a ladder of angel gold upon which she passed in their sublime company to the sunny land of everlasting peace.

It was in some such strain that the parson preached on Christmas eve, seeking to enforce the Christian doctrine, that even for such as he, whose body was a black and stained thing, there might be salvation; and perhaps through the unconscious intercession of their poor, distraught sister, who had called the heavenly hosts to that modern crucifixion of the modern thief, in a blind hope that, as Christ had opened the gates of heaven to the penitent thief on the cross, so in His infinite goodness might He open them to herself and her betrayer—to him by reason of her love for him; to her by reason of her sufferings and her life, all pure and true until he had crossed her path. If the preacher drew a long draft on their imaginations and hopes and enforced his text with flights of religious fancy that may seem out of place in these prosaic days, it is still permitted for us to hope that the angels did take the place of the birds of evil strain and bear the suffering Mary to that other world, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

Years rolled on.

The law had given a companion to the gibbet by the plantation near the abbey. The man Foster had ventured to return to England, and, being condemned for some petty offense, was taken sick in prison. Under the impression that he was dying he confessed to the murder of Squire Bellingham, and related the circumstances of the crime exactly as they had occurred. Whether it was a malignant and avenging fate that had preyed upon his fears to bring him to this position, and then to restore him to health, it is not for the historian to say; he has simply to chronicle events as he finds them in the evidence before him.

Foster confessed to the jail chaplain that it was he who shot Bellingham, and he also narrated the details of the tragedy to the warder. As if the load off his mind gave his physical nature a fillip, he began to recover, and in due course he was arraigned at York assizes (on his own confession), upon the charge of highway robbery and murder, his confession being fully supported by such evidence as could be got together.

He died, as he had lived, a coward, struggling with his fate to the last, calling himself a fool, swearing he had been tricked by the jail doctor into a fear of death, and at the last moment denying his guilt and having to be supported to the scaffold, a miserable exhibition of judicial strangulation; but he was quiet enough when they made a sign of him near the rattling chains of his fellow criminal, the remainder of whose wretched body had almost disappeared between the assaults of the wind and the rain, and the birds of prey and the human relic hunters.

One calm autumn evening many a year afterwards, there came an old man to the Star and Garter.

He was tanned by wind and weather, wrinkled with age and travel, his hair sparse and of an iron-grey. He had bright blue eyes, white teeth, strong, bony hands, carried a staff like an alpen stock, and wore a straggling beard.

He arrived by coach with a pair of great brown leathern trunks, covered with curious marks and letterings, as if they had seen a marvelous amount of service. He settled down at the Star and Garter, ordered a sitting room, commanded a fire, spoke in calm but very decisive tones, and asked many questions about men and women who had been dead and gone for years and years; the Meadowses, for instance; old Morley, and Mary, the Maid of the Inn.

There was nothing odd in his inquiring about Mary, because she had, as it were, become everybody's property. A famous poet had made a ballad about her, and it was a common thing for folk that were gifted that way to recite it. Other less illustrious ballad mongers had done the story of Mary's night in the abbey into verse, and the chapmen at the fairs had long been selling the "last dying speeches and confessions of Richard Parker," "copies of verses written upon his last interview with Mary," and other literary reminiscences of the tragedy.

It was, therefore, as I have said, not surprising to have a stranger ask about Mary; but this particular stranger asked all kinds of curious questions, and vouchsafed now and then pieces of curious information about events they had heard of at the Star and Garter from their fathers and grandfathers, matters which seemed to them now to be parts of stories in books, or things that belonged to the age of "once upon a time," or incidents that the newspapers reprinted from old chronicles.

The stranger became a particularly interesting person when he obtained permission at his own expense to erect a special gravestone to Mary Lockwood's memory, and people touched their hats to him all over the place when it was known that it was through his influence the two gibbets had suddenly been removed, such of the rags and tatters of the poor wretches who had been hung in chains being buried decently, and a few Christian words of hope said over them.

The old man was fond of rambling about the abbey. He set up a distant branch of the Meadows family in the "Hark-to-Rover," and often called and smoked a pipe with Jack Meadows and his wife at the farm—the young Meadows, who had inherited from the son of the Mrs. Maedows, who was the mother of that Jack Meadows who left Kirkstall and was drowned at sea or worse, because Mary, the maid of the inn, would not have him, preferring the highwayman in disguise, who came to the gallows.

It was noted that the old man was particularly fond of these people, and that he liked to walk with Jack and have him tell the story of the Maid of the Inn, and the sermon the parson preached about the angels driving away the evil spirits, and making a golden ladder for Mary up to heaven.

They had no idea who the old man was; but they grew to love him, he was so generous with his money, had seen so much, could tell such wonderful stories; and he brought to them one morning such a grand recommendation from the bankers of Leeds, not to mention a solicitor there, that when he hinted at a desire to live with the young people at the farm, and he accompanied this with a present of a pair of the finest cart horses that Wakefield market could show, and when he said he had neither chic nor child, and was tired of traveling, they gave him the bedroom he said he liked; and he became one of the household, living as such, a pleasant companion and friend to host and hostess, a grandfather in his actions towards the children.

One calm summer's morning they thought he had slept too long, and went to call him; he smiled at the children so peacefully that they did not like to disturb him. And nobody could or did disturb him again. They found his last will and testament in a conspicuous place on a table near the bed. It was a generous will for more than the Meadows family, as several Yorkshire institutions of charity could be cited to prove; and on a slip of paper he had written, evidently on the morning of his death, "Thank you for letting me sleep in the room where I was happy, as a boy. Jack Meadows."

(The End.)

Ancient London Church.

With a history reaching back to the days of Alfred the Great, a special interest attaches to the Church of St. Thomas, quaintly situated in a backwater of Regent street, and which is now celebrating its bicentenary. A site granted by Alfred's niece to St. Peter's church, Ghent, was in the reign of Henry V., in accordance with an act for the suppression of alien priories, settled upon the Carthusian Priory at Shene. In 1530 Henry VIII. appropriated it to the Crown. The next stage was reached in 1687, when Thomas Tenison, afterward Archbishop of Canterbury, secured the old property and built, first a wooden "oratory," and then in 1702, the present building. At length the Charity Commissioners thought fit to upset the original scheme and with the funds of the trust built the Tenison Schools in Leicester Square. Thanks to the present vicar, a freehold site has been purchased and parish buildings have been erected at a cost of about £8,000, where the parochial work involved in caring for the three thousand people of the parish—most of them poor—can be carried on. The vestry has an interesting collection of portraits and prints of the various interesting people connected with the church. Sir Isaac Newton, for instance, was a trustee. Here Canon Knox Little served his curacy.

An Old Explanation.

A man in Ness county got into print the other day with the boast that he possessed the most ancient almanac in Kansas, the date of his book being 1819. And now comes a man in Smith county with a whole library of more ancient almanacs. For example, he has six consecutive annual issues of an almanac bearing the title, "An Astronomical Diary or Almanack," an American publication, the first of the six having the date of 1769. The owner of these ancient publications is Mr. A. C. Coolidge, who appears to be quite a collector. He has many old newspapers and books, and of one of them, "The Smith County Pioneer" says: "Mr. Coolidge has a book of psalms and hymns published in 1815 under the title "Musica Sacra." Did you ever wonder why it is that song books have the soprano placed above the other parts? The reason given in this book is: "As female voices are, in general, more numerous, the air in this work is uniformly placed uppermost in the brace."—The Kansas City Journal.

The Germ That Causes It Has to Be Destroyed, to Cure Dandruff.

Many a woman spends an hour twice a week scouring her scalp, thinking scrubbing off the scurf will cure the dandruff. Two hours a week, at the age of 40 years, she has spent 260 days of 12 hours each, or two-thirds of a year of her life, in that vain hope; vain, because you can't cure dandruff without killing the dandruff germ, and the only hair preparation on earth that will do that is Newbro's "Herpicide"—also a delightful hair dressing, and thorough antiseptic against all contagion from use of other's hair brushes.

Mrs. L. A. Harris, a Prominent Member of a Chicago Woman's Political Club, tells how Ovarian Troubles may be Cured without a Surgical Operation. She says:

"Doctors have a perfect craze for operations. The minute there is any trouble, nothing but an operation will do them; one hundred dollars and costs, and included in the costs are pain, and agony, and often death.

"I suffered for eight years with ovarian troubles; spent hundreds of dollars for relief, until two doctors agreed that an operation was my only chance of life. My sister had been using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for her troubles, and been cured, and she strongly urged me to let the doctors go and try the Compound. I did so as a last resort; used it faithfully with the Sanative Wash for five months, and was rejoiced to find that my troubles were over and my health restored. If women would only try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first, fewer surgical operations would occur."—MRS. L. A. HARRIS, 278 East 31st St., Chicago, Ill.

REASONS FOR PANAMA ROUTE.

Admiral Walker Says Distance Is Shorter and Curves Fewer.

The examination was with reference to the reasons why the canal commission changed its recommendations from the Nicarargua to the Panama route. The reasons given by the witness for this change, summed up, are that the Panama route is much shorter and that it has fewer curves and that those curves which do exist are not so sharp as the curves in the Nicaragua route. He also said he believed that with proper quarantine regulations the health conditions of the region along the Panama line could be much improved. He did not consider the present condition from a health point of view as bad. The questions bringing out these points were largely asked by Senator Hanna, who also made inquiries concerning the water supply for the Panama canal and the difficulties in the way of constructing a dam at Bohio. With reference to the dam Admiral Walker said he had no doubt that the engineering difficulties could be overcome, and he also expressed the opinion that the water supply would be ample. He also said that the harbor at Panama could be maintained at a nominal cost.

Senator Morgan questioned the witness at length with reference to the commission's investigation of the power of the new Panama canal company to transfer the property and give clear title. In reply to all the questions on this line Admiral Walker said he had been satisfied in a general way that the New Panama canal company would be capable of passing the property to the United States with acceptable title, but that he was not a lawyer and that he felt satisfied, in case the recommendation of the commission to accept the Panama route should be favorably acted upon by congress, the president would be assured by competent legal advice of the genuineness of the title before accepting the transfer. "We only recommended the Panama route as practicable and feasible" he said, "by which we meant that we considered the engineering proposition as practicable and the diplomatic negotiations as feasible."

SPECIAL ACT IS OPPOSED.

Minority Report on the Anti-Anarchist Bill.

Washington, Feb. 10.—Representative Lanham of Texas, democratic member of the house judiciary committee, has presented a minority report on the bill for the protection of of the president against assault and conspiracy. While agreeing with the idea that the United States should not be made an asylum for anarchists and those who oppose organized government, yet he dissented from giving the president protection not accorded to other citizens. As to this he said: "I deny the proposition that one honest and law abiding man's life is any more sacred than that of another. Any officer of our government is but the servant of the people and 'the servant cannot be greater than his lord.' The holding or possession of office does not of itself render any man incapable or immune from human frailties and imperfections. Public men among us can do wrong. There is no such thing as royalty or titled nobility or hereditary prerogative in the United States. With us there are no artificial distinctions and one good man is as much as another, and as much sanctity surrounds the life of one as it does that of another. The murder of the humblest citizen in our land is just as heinous, just as felonious, as that of the greatest or most distinguished. Murder is murder upon whomsoever inflicted and a human life is a human life by whomsoever enjoyed. The life of the highest officer in the country or that of any ambassador of a foreign government is no more precious in the sight of God than is that of the humblest and most insignificant resident of our great republic."

He pointed out that both Guiteau and Czolgosz, presidential assassins, have met death. He holds also that the states should deal with the subject and that this federal law probably would magnify the importance of assassination in the distempered fancy of those seeking to destroy rulers.

CUBA INVITED TO COME IN.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Representative Newlonds of Nevada, of the ways and means committee, who was the author of the resolution annexing Hawaii, has introduced a joint resolution inviting the republic of Cuba to become a part of the United States, first as a territory, and then as a state, of the union, to be called the state of Cuba; also, authorizing a 25 per cent reduction of duties on the present crop of Cuban sugar, in consideration of Cuba's granting prefferential rates to the United States. The resolutions confine the 25 per cent reduction of duties to the period prior to January 1, 1903. The provision as to annexation is as follows:

"That in the meantime the republic of Cuba is invited to become a part of the United States of America, and her people to become citizens of the United States, with the assurance that Cuba will be entitled at first to a territorial form of government under the constitution and laws of the United States, with a delegate in congress to represent her people, and that ultimate statehood will be granted when, in the judgment of the congress, it is advisable to admit Cuba, including such other West India islands belonging to the United States as may be deemed advisable, as a single state in the union, to be called the state of Cuba."

SISTERS OF CHARITY

Use Pe-ru-na for Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrh—A Congressman's Letter.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 8, 1901.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir:—"The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis, and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after farther use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured." SISTERS OF CHARITY.

This young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity and used Peruna for catarrh of the throat with good results as the above letter testifies.

SISTERS OF CHARITY

All Over United States Use Pe-ru-na for Catarrh.

From a Catholic institution in Ohio comes the following recommend from the Sister Superior:

"Some years ago a friend of our institution recommended to us Dr. Hartman's Peruna as an excellent remedy for the influenza of which we then had several cases which threatened to be of a serious character.

"We began to use it and experienced such wonderful results that since then Peruna has become our favorite medicine for influenza, catarrh, cold, cough and bronchitis."

SISTER SUPERIOR.

Dr. Hartman, one of the best known physicians and surgeons in the United States, was the first to formulate Peruna. It was through his genius and perseverance that it was introduced to the medical profession of this country.

The following letter is from Congressman Meekison, of Napoleon, Ohio:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen:—"I have used several bottles of Peruna and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head, and feel encouraged to believe that its continued use will fully eradicate a disease of thirty years' standing."

Congressman David Meekison.

DAVID MEEKISON.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Saved Him From Torture.

There is no more agonizing trouble than piles. The constant itching and burning make life intolerable. No position is comfortable. The torture is increasing. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures piles at once. For skin diseases, cuts, burns, bruises all kinds of wounds it is unequalled. J. S. Gerall, St. Paul, Ark., says: "From 1865 I suffered from the protruding, bleeding piles, and could find nothing to help me until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes completely cured me." Beware of counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

The World Wide Popularity

of the famous Hot Springs of Arkansas for health-restoring properties has brought thousands of invalids from all quarters of the world to partake of its restorative waters. by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen: — Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours.

Lovely weather this week.

T. Gauley's sale was well attended and everything sold well.

Mr. Groves and B. Post transacted business at Webster City last week.

Horses are selling exceptionally high this spring, that is, good ones.

Rev. E. A. Norton and wife, of Hampton, visited at J. W. Allen's last week.

J. R. Whittaker, of Goodell, was around last week supplying the people with Ward's popular remedies.

Rev. Phelps takes the lead tying knots, having married 3 couples in one family in less than a year.

Wm. Marshall and wife returned from their Oregon trip last Saturday and they report a delightful trip.

Allyn Jones returned from his visit to Tennessee last Friday. While there he purchased a choice tract of land.

Married, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Helen A. Braund, on Wednesday, Feb. 12, at high noon, Rev. Phelps officiating, Ray E. Burman and Myrtle M. Braund, both of this place. The wedding march was beautifully and impressionably rendered by Mrs. Dora Holmes, of Clear Lake, when the couple took the vows that united them for life. The groomsman and bridesmaid wore the myrtle wreath and orange blossoms together with the bride and groom. The floral decorations were beautiful. At the conclusion of the ceremony and amid the hearty congratulations of the guests, all were invited to a sumptuous repast prepared by the bride's relatives. The festivities were continued through the day and ended by a social dance in the evening, until the wee small hours, and all went merry as a marriage bell. The young couple will be at home to their many friends after March 15, in their new home near Forest City where they will engage in agricultural pursuits the coming year. Those from a distance who attended the wedding were J. G. Carroll and wife, of Dumont, E. A. Norton and wife, of Hamptor, L. F. Pomplun and wife, of Forest City, Mr. Gardner and wife, of Ellington and the Karr family and Mr. Van Hausen, of Clear Lake. Following is the list of presents:

REDISTRICTING PLAN PASSES.

Only Two Votes Against Harriman Resolution.

Des Moines, Feb. 14.—The Harriman joint resolution for a reapportionment of the senatorial and representative districts of the state passed the senate with only two votes against it. Blanchard, who was the only one to oppose the resolution on the floor of the senate, voted affirmatively on the final ballot in order that he might file a motion for reconsideration. The final vote on the resolution stood 40 to 2, Bishop and Craig voting in the negative. These are the two members who voted in committee against reporting the resolution favorably.

The Harriman resolution passed two former sessions of the legislature and went to a vote of the people at the general election in 1900. It was defeated at the polls, its friends allege because of being overlooked by the voters on the Australian ballot. According to this resolution the senatorial districts of the state will not be changed. In making the reapportionment of the representative districts, however, the population of the state is to be diveded by the number of counties and the result is to be the ratio of representatives. Every county having one and three-fifths times this ratio shall be entitled to an additional representative, up to the maximum limit, which as the bill passed is fixed as 110.

As the bill originally came from the committee the maximum limit was 115. Under this the membership of the house might reach 115, if the population of the state warranted it. Harriman in explaining the bill stated that he had no fears that the representation would ever reach this figure, but as a safeguard he would offer an amendment fixing the limit at 110.

This was adopted and then Blanchard proposed an amendment which would make the basis for an additional representative in any county conditional upon a population one and one-half times the ratio of representation rather than one and three-fifths. He spoke at length in support of this amendment, but it was defeated by a vote of 8 to 34. Blanchard, Brighton, Bishop, Brooks, Craig, Townsend, Bishop, Harper and Hayward voted in favor of the Blanchard amendment. The bill then went to a vote and was passed.

GOOD TIME AT KNOXVILLE.

Members of Legislature and Families Entertained.

Knoxville, Feb. 16.—Nearly 250 members of the legislature, their wives and daughters, legislative employes and state officials visited Knoxville on the special excursion from Des Moines yesterday afternoon. They were feted and banqueted and entertained with the full measure of hospitality for which Marion county is distinguished. Nothing was left undone to impress the members of the assembly of the superior merits of the claims of Knoxville to a state normal school, to be located in the building established or the industrial home for the blind.

The excursion over the Burlington left Des Moines on the regular train, departing from there at 2:15. An ample supply of extra coaches had been provided. The arrival here was made promptly on schedule time, about 4:30 o'clock. At the train the visitors were met by a reception committee headed by John B. Elliott and by hundreds of citizens. A large supply of carriages and sleighs had been gathered by the citizens, and without delay all that desired were taken to the building of the industrial home for the blind, located about a mile from the city. There they were shown through the home, which is now unoccupied, and then driven back to the city, where at 6:30 a banquet was served by the citizens in the Odd Fellows' hall. The serving of the menu and the programme of toasts occupied several hours and the departure was not taken until nearly 11 o'clock, the train arriving at Des Moines at midnight.

Pioneer Lawmakers Convention.

Des Moines, Feb. 15.—The Pioneer Lawmakers of Iowa held their eighth biennial convention at the state historical building. They will meet again in 1904. The convention was largely taken up with the biennial visit of the aged lawmakers to the legislature. In the afternoon the convention adjourned in a body and visited both the senate and house of the legislature, where speeches were made and a warm welcome extended to the visitors by the members of the present assembly.

Before adjournment the following officers were elected by the Lawmakers' association: Hon. J. R. Reed, president; vice presidents by districts; First, William Harper; Second, Samuel McNutt; Third, Thomas B. Knapp; Fourth, L. L. Ainsworth; Fifth, William G. Thompson; Sixth, T. B. Perry; Seventh, John Scott; Eighth, W. S. Dungan; Ninth, L. W. Ross; Tenth, J. L. Kamrar; Eleventh, Rodney A. Smith; executive committee, B. F. Gue, Hoyt Sherman, G. L. Godfrey; secretary, Hon. Isaac Brandt; assistant secretary, E. M. Stedman.

Pioneer Liveryman Dead.

Des Moines, Feb. 17.—Levi Jesse Wells, who has resided in Des Moines since 1856 and who has long been identified with the history and growth of the city as one of its foremost and most enterprising citizens and business men, died at St. Andrews Bay, Florida. Mr. Wells was the pioneer liveryman of Des Moines, engaging in the business in this city since 1870.

TREWIN STIRS UP OFFICIALS.

Introduces a Resolution for Inquiry in the Senate.

Des Moines, Feb. 15.—Senator Trewin sprang a surprise and something of a sensation in the legislature yesterday by the introduction of a concurrent resolution aimed at several of the state departments which have been lax in complying with the statute which requires them to make biennially to the state executive council an itemized statment, verified by oath of all salaries and expenses paid by such departments together with an account of all supplies and paper drawn and printing and binding done. The Trewin resolution provides that the standing committees on retrenchment and reform in the legislature shall inquire into the cause of such neglect and report such proposed legislation as may be deemed necessary to secure the enforcement of the law.

The resolution went over under the rules, but leading members of the upper body stated that there was no question but that it would be adopted. The committee on retrenchment and reform referred to in the resolution is composed of the chairmen of the ways and means, judiciary and appropriations committees of both houses. This committee is the one which reported the law requiring the above mentioned reports to be made, when it was placed on the statute books of the state two years ago.

Before that time a provision for such reports had been made by the previous general assembly, but it was found that the provisions were not specific enough and the law was evaded. Two years ago what was deemed a sweeping statute covering the subject was passed, with the idea that there would be no future trouble in securing the desired reports.

FOUL CRIME OF A FIEND.

Little Girl Criminally Assaulted By Ed Davidson, Near Eddyville.

Ottumwa, Feb. 15.—Edward Davidson, of Pekay, a small mining town on the Keokuk & Des Moines road twenty miles north of here, is accused of rape upon the person of Katie Gallegher, the 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gallegher, who live half a mile north of Eddyville and two miles from his home. Davidson was arrested by Marshal Beeman, of Eddyville, and taken to jail there, but a mob of fifty gathered and tried to lynch him. Sheriff Cremer, of this city, went to Eddyville and brought him to Ottumwa for safe keeping. The mob talked of following, but it did not, and it is not thought that there will be any trouble. The girl, who was unable to leave her bed to identify the man, says he overtook her as she was walking home from Eddyville, after having made some purchases for her parents in the town. Davidson was driving, and offered her a ride, she says, and when they came to the parting of two roads she got out of the buggy and took one, while he continued on the other. He is said to have hitched his horse and overtaken the girl, committed the outrage and gone on home. Davidson was arrested at home and a bloody suit of underclothing which he is said to have just taken off was also found at his home. He denies his guilt, but the officers believe they have the right man.

PROGRESS OF IOWA CLAIMS.

Prospect For Their Collection Seems Good.

Des Moines, Feb. 17.—Governor Cummins has received a letter from Senator Allison which throws further light on the status of Iowa's war claims against the federal government. Major W. H. Fleming also received a letter from Secretary Shaw, giving substantially the same information conveyed by the senator.

It appears from both letters that Iowa's claim has been withdrawn by the department from the court of claims and that it is expected that adjudication can be had as to a large part of it on the basis of decisions rendered in the New York and Pennsylvania cases. Senator Allison in his letter explains in some detail the present situation. A special auditor will be sent to Des Moines by the treasury department to verify the Iowa claims. Indications are that an early accounting will now be secured.

As a result of these communications, the senate committee having in charge the Lothrop bill looking to a special contract for collecting these claims will report in favor of placing the whole matter in the hands of the governor, to settle with Captain Lothrop on such reasonable basis as he may deem proper.

Organized Band of Thieves.

Clinton, Feb. 15.—Farmers in the vicinity of Elvira, this county, report an organized band of thieves operating in that vicinity, and corn, chickens, hogs and provisions have been stolen at a number of places. Cellars have been entered and canned fruit and potatoes have been carried away. Recently a load of hay was stolen and the thieves were traced to this city, where they sold their ill-gotten booty and were away before their identity could be detected. The farmers say that if the thieves are caught they will take the matter of punishment into their own hands.

Found Dead in His Sled.

Manson, Feb. 15.—John Brennon, a prosperous farmer living five miles southwest of Manson, was found dead in the bottom of his sled box in South Manson. He left Knierim for home about 5 o'clock, and was seen two miles south of Manson before dark. When found he was covered with blankets and his team was standing in John Anderson's barnyard. No cause has been assigned for his death except that he had been drinking. Mr. Brennon leaves a wife and a large family of small children.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, Feb. 11.—Senate.—Senator Ball, of Johnson county, introduced a bill in the senate Tuesday extending to electric lines all of the present statutes relating to steam railroads. This measure is sweeping in its provisions, but it especially exempts street car lines from the application of the railroad laws. Hubbard's bill making the maximum penalty for having burglars' tools in possession five years in the penitentiary, was passed. Senator Townsend introduced a bill, by request, prohibiting reinsurance of risks held by Iowa insurance companies in foreign insurance companies. It is alleged that outside companies secure the business of weak concerns in Iowa, to avoid the payment of the discriminative taxes, which they would be compelled to pay if they did business in Iowa in their own name.

House.—The bill by Englisn, which has the sanction of Governor Cummins, requiring railroad companies to report separately the earnings on their Iowa business and other business, was reported out for passage by the house ways and means committee. The committee on schools decided to report for passage the bill for compulsory education of children under 14 years of age. The Buchanan bill prohibiting the sale of cocaine, was passed. A bill was introduced requiring railroad companies to pay their employes semi-monthly.

Des Moines, Feb. 12.—The biennial election amendment was made a special order for Friday. The bill to permit banks and trust companies to act as guardians, executors, receivers, assignees, etc, came up and a sharp debate ensued in which Healy, Trewin, Garst took part. It was referred to the judiciary committee. Three bills by Healy were passed: To require notice to the heirs, devisees, and legatees of an estate of claims filed against it by executors or administrators; requiring divorce petitions to be filed at least ten days before the first day of the term of court at which the hearing is had; and to legalize transfers of real estate in which one spouse has acted under power of attorney of the other. Among bills introduced were the following: By Hayward, requiring franchises to be offered to the highest bidder; by Garst, to define and tax freight line and equipment companies as railroads are now assessed and taxed.

House.—The Fields-Cottrell contest was decided in favor of Fields. Kerr of Grundy offered a resolution in memory of Abraham Lincoln, which was adopted. Whiting of Monona presented resolutions in memory of Hon. Lemuel R. Bolton, which were adopted after brief talks by Messrs. Whiting and Temple concerning the life of the deceased. The bill providing for the retention of inmates of the Girl's Industrial school until they are 21, was passed. Among bills introduced were the following: By Koontz, providing that the words railway, railway company, railway corporation, railroad, railroad company, etc., shall apply to railroads operated by electricity; by Hamann, amending section 2026 and providing that interurbans shall have the rights that commercial railways now have, including the right to condemn a right of way not to exceed 100 feet in width; also providing that the board of supervisors may permit the railway to run along the public highway if two-thirds of the owners of abutting property consent. Also provides that interurbans may incorporate for fifty years and may cross railway tracks.

Des Moines, Feb. 14.—Senate.—The senate passed the Harriman resolution to amend the constitution and increase the number of representatives to 110. It also provides for a reapportionment of the senatorial districts of the state. This resolution has been introduced in the house by Representative Temple. The senate committee on constitutional amendments reported the woman suffrage amendment for passage. There was practically no opposition to it in the committee, only one vote being against the measure. Alexander's bill, authorizing savings banks to receive deposits and make loans to twenty times instead of ten times their capital stock, was passed. Among bills introduced were the following: By public health committee, to amend section 5272, giving the state board of health power over local conditions over which local boards do not exercise control; by Trewin, to amend section 120 requiring the secretary of state to certify to departments of the state quarterly the character and amount for printing and binding, for that department to be used as the basis for the statement of expenditures of money by the department; by Wilson, to amend section 5702, to provide that convict made goods shall not be sold in Iowa in competition with Iowa made goods.

House.—The house passed the following bills: By Buchanan, regulating speed and providing for registry of automobiles; by Marshall, providing that attorneys may be appointed to defend and may receive compensation for defending parties charged with indicated misdemeanors; by Edwards, prescribing a penalty of from ten years to life imprisonment for kidnapping for the purpose of ransom.

Des Moines, Feb. 14.—Senate.—After discussion of the biennial elections constitutional amendment the senate sent it to the judiciary committee, which referred it to a subcommittee composed of Hubbard, Courtright, Blanchard, Molsberry and Porter. The objection was made to it on the floor that it included legislative matters and was defective in omitting a class of officials whose terms are extended by its provisions. Senator Molsberry said in his speech that the impression prevails that the general assemblies of two and four years ago tried to work a confidence game on the people by submitting this amendment in defective form. He hoped the present assembly would make it perfect. The subcommittee was directed to examine it carefully. The senate defeated the bill to permit savings banks to lend money outside of the state. The judiciary committee also killed the bill to allow state and savings banks to act as administrators, guardians, and executors. Bills were introduced to give the state labor commissioner full powers to inspect factories in Iowa and to require reports from labor employing firms.

House.—In the house the bill to require the residence of all three appraisers of fire losses in the county in which the loss occurs, in case of adjustment of insurance by arbitration, was defeated, but motions to reconsider were filed. The committee on judiciary decided to report for passage the bill of Secor, placing all homes for children and charitable institutions of that character in Iowa under supervision of the state board of control. The house passed the bill making it a crime for a farm tenant to sell the grain he grows if his landlord's lease covers it as a lien for rent. The committee on highways reported a committee bill requiring road taxes to be paid in cash and making the township the unit or road district.

Des Moines, Feb. 17.—Senate.—S. F. 192 was made a special order for Tuesday at 10:30. It extends the power of the state board of health over localities in which the local boards fail to enforce quarantine and vaccination in contagious diseases. A quorum was present during none of today's session. S. F. 217 was introduced by Harriman and went to agriculture. It relates to and provides for draining swamp lands in Iowa.

House.—The bill increasing the support fund of the College for the Blind at Vinton to $22 per month for nine months in the year, was taken up and discussed, but owing to the small number of members present action was postponed until Thursday. Fields called up H. F. 130, amending section 1547 of the code, to prohibit the taking of fish from the Big Sioux river except with hook and line. The bill passed. Wilson of Buena Vista called up H. F. 121, removing the limit on fees to be charged by the secretary of state for filing articles of incorporation. At present the maximum fee is $2,000. The bill passed.

Wright called up H. F. 195, amending section 106 of the code, relative to the time of settlement of the auditor of the state with the treasurer of state, making it at definite periods. The bill passed. Among the bills introduced were the following: Providing that express companies shall make reports to executive council at same time as telephone companies; making appropriation increasing the per capita allowance for the inmates of the Industrial School at Eldora from $9 to $11 per month; providing for a bacteriologist, who shall be a physician and director of the state board of health bacteriological laboratory, and who is to receive a salary of $5,000 per year; increase appropriation for health department from $5,000 to $7,000 per year.

PRINCE HENRY ON HIS WAY.

Starts for America With a Mission of Good Will.

Bremerhaven, Feb. 16.—Prince Henry sailed for New York at 3:43 p. m. yesterday.

Kiel, Feb. 16.—What looked like half of Kiel's population assembled at the railway station to bid farewell to Prince Henry at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Also at the station were Admirals von Arnim and von Koester, fourteen other naval officers of high rank and a large guard of marines. On the platform of the station the prince kissed the princess, his wife, and stood uncovered at the head of the rear steps of the car, in spite of the sharp, wintry air, until the train was out of the station.

TEDDY ROOSEVELT'S CONDITION.

Passed a Good Night and Considered Out of Danger.

Groton, Mass., Feb. 14.—The most eventful day at the Groton school since Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., became ill closed with the departure of President Roosevelt for Washington late yesterday afternoon. Before that the president in the nomely phrase, "Ted improved with rapid jumps that I am sure he is out of the woods," had told to the world of the load lifted from his mind.

Wants Tax On House Cats.

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 14.—The question of protecting birds in Wisconsin, which has made the Women's club of Kenosha famed is to be further agitated by a petition to the state legislature asking that a tax be placed on house cats. The ground taken is that the cat is the natural enemy of the birds and that statistics show that where cats are numerous birds become scarce. It is claimed that there is no use luring birds to the gardens and shrubbery as long as the cat is not taken care of.

The question is also to be presented to the State Federation of Women's clubs.

South African War.

London, Feb. 17.—The casualty reports of the fight at Klip River last Wednesday show that four British officers and twenty-nine men were wounded and two men killed. No details of the engagement are given. Skirmishes in the vicinity are of frequent occurrence.

The number of government officials in France is 416,000. Fifty years ago it was 188,000.

UNCLE SAM BUILDS A TOWN.

Navy Department to Construct Homes at Olongapo Naval Station.

Uncle Sam is going to build a town. It will be constructed at Olongapo, the site of the proposed naval station on Subig Bay, Philippine Islands, says the Washington Times.

Such action is believed to be necessary in order to provide labor for the plant. Plans for the town are being prepared by Rear Admiral M. T. Endicott, chief of the bureau of yards and docks.

Rear Admiral Endicott points out that many shipbuilding corporations have been compelled to build towns in the vicinity of their plants. They rent the houses at a nominal figure to their employes. The latter elect their mayor and other officers.

The plans of the department also propose the construction of a railroad which shall connect Manila and Olongapo.

Mixed History.

The juvenile son of an army officer made a strange mixture of the history of George Washington the other day. A visitor called during the absence of his parents, and to entertain the children and instill a lesson of manly honor and patriotism told them the famous stories of the liberty bell and the cherry tree. The scion of the soldier was much interested, but the details got badly twisted in his head. When his father returned home he was told of the fine story the visitor had told about the father of his country. "Washington must have been a wonderful man," said the boy. "He smashed the liberty bell with his little hatchet and his father whipped him with a cherry tree for telling a lie." It took paterfamilias some time to straighten things out.

Remarkable Sheep.

A Kirkby Stephen correspondent telegraphs: "On Dec. 9 last Mr. Wm. Pratt, a well-known cattle dealer of Garsdale, had a large flock of sheep on Dent Fell, just above Hawes Junction. The sheep were gathered in just before the recent snowstorm, but one sheep escaped the dogs and got back on to the fells, where it was buried in the snow on the following day. On Tuesday last, twenty-two days afterward, the shepherds found the sheep in a crevasse. It had just thawed out of the snow, but was able to walk home, a distance of a mile and a half. The same sheep was under the snow for ten days in the November storm. Mr. Pratt declares that he will never part with that animal as long as it lives."—London Telegraph.

"They're thinking now of reversing the usual process, and first trying plays in New York before taking them out on the road." "What's the idea?" "Well, if a play succeeds in New York, the rest of the country will know it's rotten."

Husband—"How long is it since I have been to church?" Wife—"Do you mean to say that you have forgotten our wedding day?"

If we could reach our ideals there would be nothing left for which to strive.

CHAPTER I.

JACK, FROM BOHEMIA.

Famous old Big Ben had boomed out the hour of 3 one afternoon in May, when Jack Overton, who had recently shaken off the dust of the Bohemian Latin quarter in Paris, debouched from one of the numerous courts branching out from the Strand, London, and strolled along this great thoroughfare.

Overton was a man of possibly twenty-five. His form was well built and athletic, his countenance, while not wholly handsome, worthy of deep study—an expert at physiognomy would have gloried in reading the potential features so plainly marked, and his verdict must have been that while the young man had not yet awakened to the resistless and dominant power that slumbered within his grasp, the force of circumstances would sooner or later bring it to the fore.

For some time he had drifted along in his studies—a faint gleam of success had begun to brighten the eastern skies—there was a promise of his latest picture being accepted for the Salon, when his future could be looked upon as assured.

It was at this critical juncture in his affairs when a little more resolute work would have landed him well on the road to success, that fortune, and a woman, brought about a crisis which threatened his bark with disaster.

This accounted for the eagerness with which he scrutinized the inmates of the various vehicles moving hither and thither along the Strand. Finally his kindling gaze was glued upon a dashing equipage, evidently headed toward Rotten Row, and particularly upon the beautiful woman who sat there nonchalantly holding a lace-trimmed parasol above her dainty head, and occasionally addressing some word to her elderly gentleman companion, whose bronzed face and air of distinction marked him as a traveler or man of note in Her Majesty's colonial empire.

Jack held his breath and gritted his teeth as he looked. He loved, aye, worshiped this radiant creature. He, a poor, unknown artist, dared to raise his eyes to such a beautiful bird of fashion.

Why not—who had a right one-half so strong? Time was when he knew Fedora as a modest little English girl with a passionate desire to study art, when he had given innumerable opportunities to stand between her and insult, to soften the rough places for her dainty feet, to assist her in the work she had chosen while his own lay neglected in his garret studio.

Yes, they had become such great friends in Bohemia that it ripened into love, though on Jack's part he fairly adored the girl from the hour they first met.

Thus vows were exchanged, and for months they drifted along in a fool's paradise. Then Jack, poor fellow, insisted on endeavoring to open communications between Fedora and the grim old English grandfather who had exiled his daughter for marrying against his august will.

The negotiations succeeded all too well, and one day there came a dolorous scene when Jack and his betrothed separated, she to go to her new English home, he to work feverishly on the great picture that was to make such a sensation in the Salon—the face of Fedora, created by a hand inspired by the divine passion—and bring him the fame and fortune which he longed to lay at her feet.

At last it was finished, all but a few touches. He had for some time been on the verge of distraction. Stray rumors that Fedora had forgotten him. He, faithful to death himself, believed steadfastly in the woman he loved, and indignantly chased all satanic doubts headlong from his mind. Still, they crept back in spite of him, and when existence finally became unendurable away from the atmosphere she breathed, he had brought his treasured canvas to London.

Never had he suspected the full extent of her radiant beauty and her queenly manner until the moment his eyes fell upon her in the vehicle that rolled toward Rotton Row. Could such a prize be for him?

Then came a revulsion of feeling. She belonged to him—she had again and again vowed no power on earth but death could take her from him. More than that, did he not owe her his life? There had been a fire, and Jack, overcome in his sleep by smoke, might have perished but that some girl dared death to run in and drag him to the open air. They told him it was Fedora, and although she had always in her modesty, appeared confused when he spoke of the subject, yet he never doubted.

At this day Overton had not learned what a mighty influence Moloch had upon the average human heart, nor the winning power of Gold. The time was coming when he would discover these things through bitter experience that would warp his nature and change his disposition.

It was his desire to notice what effect his presence might have upon the beautiful girl in the landau. When her wandering gaze suddenly fell upon him she gave a perceptible start, and the color left her cheeks only to immediately return, and as the vehicle passed he was quick to discover the card, which she had dextrously tossed out apparently unseen by her escort, flutter to the asphalt.

CHAPTER II.

THE MEETING ON THE STRAND.

Jack lost not a second in capturing the bit of pasteboard. It was simply a carte de visite, and gave the address of her grandfather's city house.

Overton made up his mind that come what would that night should see him at the address she had given, to hear from her own lips his doom. Until that had been pronounced he could not and would not believe that she meant to cast him aside.

As he swung down the crowded Strand he was suddenly aware of a gentle pull at his sleeve, a modest little jerk, entirely lacking the assurances that might suggest a bold seeker after alms.

"Oh, Mr. Jack!" said a quick voice in accents of eagerness.

An when Overton looked down from his six feet, and saw the girl's rosy face half shrouded in a blue hood, he experienced such genuine pleasure that the haunted, devil-may-care expression gave way to a glow of sincere satisfaction as he caught the hand she had laid on his own and squeezed it in his own broad palm. If he hurt her the girl gave no sign.

"Bless me, Mazette, this is a pleasure now. Fancy our meeting in the crowded streets of London. How do you get on? Has fortune looked your way? I hope and trust those divine little miniature portraits on ivory bring you in a fair income among these people of your blood."

Thus he chattered on. Mazette looked up to the long-legged, big-hearted American as a prince of men. Secretly she adored him, but no one ever knew that his face was the shrine at which the modest child of nature worshipped, for, like most girls of the present day, Mazette refused to wear her heart upon her sleeve for daws to peck at.

"What brings you here, Mr. Jack?" she asked.

Overton winced as he remembered the nature of his hasty jump from Paris. Then he made up his mind to unburden his soul, and having resolved to make the plunge, he started in with an impetuosity that startled his demure little companion.

If Jack had been able to look under that blue hood while he poured out his passionate story he might have received something of a shock. Most certainly poor Mazette was experiencing one.

"It is hard to give advice, Mr. Jack. She has not thrown you over yet," she said.

"You know Fedora so well, you should be able to judge what she will do—whether or not the glitter of gold would tempt her to give up the man to whom she swore deathless fealty. Tell me truly, little friend, although I would bless you for words of comfort, still I only desire to know what you believe—the truth, even if it kill me."

"You must be calm, Mr. Jack. Even though you lost Fedora, there are other things in the world worth living for," she began, slowly, painfully.

He uttered a hollow groan.

"Ah, money is very powerful, Mr. Jack. It makes the strongest weak. You must not think too harshly of her if the temptation proves irresistible."

"Already you fear the worst," he exclaimed. "God help me if it proves to be so. You would never condemn the man you loved, Mazette; sell him for filthy lucre."

"Thanks for your good opinion. No one may ever know how strong they are until the temptation has come," she replied, steadily, but deep down in her heart the little artist girl was saying over and over again: "Not for all the gold in the world, nor for precious stones, would I sell his love if it were only mine."

Mazette adroitly changed the conversation, and endeavored to cheer him up.

"You must be sure to drop in to see us very soon, and take tea with aunty," she said at length, as they were about to separate.

"I promise you," he replied quickly. God bless you for a true-hearted comrade, and may you in the years to come never know the agony of mind and heart that threatens me now."

"I shall endeavor to avoid that by never allowing myself to fall in love," she replied, a little hysterically, offering him her hand.

"What, your left hand, Mazette. Pardon me, did I hurt the other, brute that I am? No, then surely you have been in an accident since last I saw you, else why should your arm hang so helplessly at your side? Tell me, is it not so?" with anxious solicitude that was not at all affected.

The girl looked either vexed or frightened.

"It is nothing. Long ago I had an accident, and when I use the arm steadily I feel it. Of late I have been unusually industrious. That is all, believe me, Mr. Jack. You will come—soon?" as she moved off.

"Surely," was his reply.

As Mazette hurried on, her heart throbbing with conflicting emotions, she was saying to herself, almost hysterically: "He must never, never know what a weak little fool I am, or why this poor arm sometimes hangs useless at my side. That is my secret, and it shall die with me. But I fear Fedora is lost to him forever—that gold has won her heart."

CHAPTER III.

DECLINED, WITH THANKS.

Somehow Overton felt better after this little chat with the miniature painter. True, in her candor and knowledge of Fedora's weakness she had not been able to give him much encouragement. In fact, she seemed to accept it as a settled fact that the girl he loved would sacrifice him on the altar of Mammon, but the very contact with such a cheery nature as that of Mazette was bound to exert a helpful influence upon him.

He was standing at the corner of Chancery Lane, debating the momentous question as to where he should bestow the favor of his patronage for supper, when he was given something of a staggering shock, for there, within ten feet of him, seated in a hansom, and evidently trying to attract his attention, was the identical bronzed and bearded gentleman whom he had seen some hours before at Fedora's side in the handsome turnout, bound for Rotten Row.

In this distinguished personage Overton at once and instinctively recognized the rival whom he had to meet on uneven terms.

The gentleman had now a fair look at his face, and immediately jumped out of his cab.

"Pardon me," said he, in a deep voice that somehow grated on Jack's ears, perhaps because he had already conceived a deadly feeling of enmity toward the other. "Pardon me, but I believe I have the honor of addressing Mr. John Overton, late of the Latin Quartier, Paris?"

Overton answered stiffly: "That happens to be my name, sir."

"Allow me to introduce myself."

Overton looked at the card and deiberately looked at the inscription.

"Captain Maurice Stanton Livermore,"
The Horseguards."

It was a name known far and wide—a name that had been carried to remote places in the Dark Continent—a name mentioned with especial honor in descriptions of English operations on the borders of India, where only valor counts, and men carve oue reputations with the sword in a desperate duel with savage tribes.

Jack knew it well. 'The name is not unfamiliar to me. In what way can I be of service to you, sir?" he said with an effort at diffidence.

not?"

"You are an artist, if I mistake

"Yes, I aim to be."

"I am greatly interested in art, and desire to have some commissions executed. Having heard you favorably mentioned I would like you to join me at dinner where we can doubtless find an opportunity to reach an agreement."

It was on the tip of Jack's tongue to coldly decline the invitation. Prul dence—policy if you will—checked his disdainful tongue in time.

"I accept your invitation, sir, without in any way committing myself to any policy you may suggest, or compromising myself in the least," he said quietly.

The other looked grimly pleased. They walked along together as well as the crowded condition of the street would permit, until finally they reached a notable restaurant, into which the strangely matched couple plunged.

As Overton sat there in the cozy room, vis-a-vis with Captain Livermore, somehow he was reminded of a man whom the irony of fortune had seated above a volcano or a powder magazine liable to explode at any moment.

A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter ofiered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmer Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

Clerk's Wise Suggestion

"I have lately been much troubled with dyspepsia, belching and sour stomach," writes M. S. Mead, leading pharmacist of Attleboro, Mass. "I could eat hardly anything without suffering several hours. My clerk suggested I try Kodol Dyspepsia Cure which I did with most happy results. I have had no more trouble and when one can go to eating mince pie, cheese candy and nuts after such a time, their digestion must be pretty good. I endorse Kodol Dyspepsia Cure heartily." You don't have to diet. Eat all the good food you want but don't overload the stomach. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests your food. J. L. Harr.

Farewell Gathering.

Communicated.

Friday evening, February 14, about twelve families, friends and neighbors met and surprised Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Stiehl, Sr., and family. Mr. Stiehl's family is about ready to move to Garner, and their Germantown friends are all sorry to see them leave, but our loss will be Garner's gain. Mr. Stiehl was one of the pioneer settlers. He and his family have always been kind and accommodating. This farewell gathering will long be remembered by all. Mr. and Mrs. Stiehl made it pleasant for their friends and everybody had a lovely time. The ladies were well supplied with refreshments and such a good appetite as we all had. As a token of remembrance, their friends presented to Mr. and Mrs. Stiehl a beautiful parlor lamp. And may this lamp shine forth many pleasant remembrances is the wish of all their friends.

Nelson Bros. informed us that they shelled 2500 bushels of corn for Will Bachman in one day with a four hole sheller. We don't pretend to know much about a corn sheller, but it seems to us that the corn turned out better than the cobs.

W. R. Bloom made a trip to Belmond Sunday.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, Feb. 15, 1902.

Auditor of State Merriman has issued an ultimatum to a number of the big foreign fire insurance companies that have paid to the treasurer of state the 3½ per cent tax required by law but have done so under protest. Unless their protests are withdrawn the auditor has notified them they will be refused certificates to transact business in Iowa for the current year.

The companies that are affected are the following, all companies organized or incorporated outside of the United States: Liverpool and London and Globe, Prussian National Insurance company, North British and Mercantile Insurance company of London and Edinburgh, London Assurance corporation of London, the Imperial Insurance company, limited, of England, Lion Fire Insurance company of Hartford (United States branch), Northern Assurance company, limited, of London, Atlas Assurance company, limited, of London, Scottish company, Norwich Union Fire Insurance society of England.

Representative Sweeley, of Woodbury county, has decided to divide his telephone bill, which met an unfavorable reception in the committee on municipal corporations. It will be divided into three bills and he hopes to be able to secure the passage of one of them at least. The first bill will be for municipal ownership. The second will give cities the right to regulate prices charged for service. This measure is likely to pass. Many of the members of the committee who opposed the other sections are in favor of this one. A third bill will require companies to connect with each other for telephone service between towns. It is this part in which Mr. Sweeley is most interested and this is also the portion that has met with the greatest opposition from all the companies. Mr. Sweeley believes, however, that he will be able to do more with the different measures separated than with them all embodied in one bill.

The most important measure of railroad legislation which has been introduced so far in this session is the amendment to the present law offered by Senator Hogue, which in effect compels railroads to furnish as many frieght cars to shippers in this state as they may demand. Senator Hogue declares that the purpose of the bill is this very thing, that is, to force the railroads to furnish cars to every man who asks for them. This is to say that if the railroad has not the cars demanded, it must procure them. It means that a refusal to furnish cars cannot be made by a railroad company.

Senator Crossley's bill for primary elections is attracting considerable attention in the legislature and several members of the committee on elections have expressed themselves as in favor of leaving it optional as the law is at present. One great advantage of the proposed law, however, is that all political parties will be required to hold their conventions the same day.

The bill reported by the house committee on schools for the consolidation of independent school districts is along practically the same lines as suggestions made by State Superintendent Barrett. It provides for the consolidation of independent districts in the following manner: At the request of ten voters residing in each of the districts which it is proposed to join together an election is to be called, and if at this election a majority of the votes cast are in favor of uniting the districts another election is to be called to choose a board of directors for the new district. If the districts consolidated have a total population of less than 500 they are to be governed by a board of directors consisting of three members, and if more than 500, by a board consisting of five members. The bill also provides that school townships and civil townships may be organized as independent districts in the same manner. This does not apply to cities and towns which constitute districts of themselves. Another bill has been introduced providing for the transportation of pupils.

The senate committee on congressional and judicial districts killed the Payne redistricting bill, without a dissenting vote. From the expressions of members of the committee other redistricting bills are likely to meet a similar fate. The house committee will probably hold a meeting now and kill the same bill, which is before it.

The supreme court has decided the famous "Homestead" case involving the big farm journal of that name published in this city. As a result of of the opinion, the "Homestead" must be sold, but not the "Wisconsin Farmer" nor the "Live Stock Journal," a Kansas City Journal. The order of the court is that Mr. Stewart, who brought the action, is not entitled to compensation for his services while with the company as a partner. The verdict in a measure was a victory for each side of the case and both Pierce and Stewart express themselves as pleased.

The supreme court has unanimously overruled the motion of the river front adherents for a new trial in the Polk county court house litigation. This disposes of the whole matter and finally closes the litigation, it is thought.

Wigg—"What a beautiful nose she has." Wagg—"Yes, that's her scenter of attraction."

SHOULDER TO SHOULDER

ENGLAND AND JAPAN AGREE TO STAND TOGETHER.

The First Important Alliance Between a Western and an Asiatic Race.

London, Feb. 12.—An important parliamentary paper was issued last night giving the terms of a practical alliance between Great Britain and Japan for the preservation of China and Korea. The paper covers a dispatch sent by Lord Lansdowne, the secretary of state for foreign affairs, January 30, to the British minister at Tokio, Sir Claude M. MacDonald, and comprises a signed copy of the agreement.

In explanation the paper says the agreement may be regarded as an outcome of the events of the past two years. Throughout the Boxer troubles Great Britain and Japan had been in close and uninterrupted communication and actuated by similar views.

"We each desire," said Lord Lansdowne, "that the integrity and independence of the Chinese empire should be preserved and that there should be no disturbance of the territorial status quo, either in China or the adjoining regions."

The agreement was signed in London January 30. Both governments declare themselves to bee ntirely uninfluenced by any aggressive tendencies in either country.

The agreement provides, however, that in case either Great Britain or Japan, in defense of their respective interests, should become involved in a war with another power, the other contracting party will maintain strict neutrality and use its efforts to prevent other powers from joining in the hostilities against its ally.

If, in the above event, any other power or powers should join in hosulities against that ally, the other contracting party will come to its assistance and conduct war in common and make peace in mutual agreement with it.

The agreement takes effect immediately and is to remain in force for five years.

This is the first important alliance between a western and a yellow or Asiatic race and comes as a startling surprise to the public. Although the idea of an alliance with Japan is really to meet with general approval, the outcome of this sensational departure will be awaited with no little anxiety. It is regarded as a direct move against Russia, and to explain the abandonment of the colony of Wei Hai Wei.

PROF. PEARSON RESIGNS.

Voluntarily Resigns His Position In the Northwestern University.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Professor Charles W. Pearson, whose recent utterances against the infallibility of certain portions of the Bible occasioned wide comment in Methodist church circles, has resigned as professor of English literature at Northwestern university. The resignation, it was stated, was voluntary.

Prof. Pearson also asked for a letter of dismissal rom the Methodist Episcopal church. The letter was given, but afterwards recalled, as its possession by Dr. Pearson would indicate that he was in good standing in the church. The professor is to continue in charge of his class until a successor is found and his salary is to continue until January, 1903. His letter follows:

"I hereby tender my resignation as professor of English literature in Northwestern univers.ty. With the kindliness of feeling toward you all and best wishes for the future of the university to which I have given so many years of service, I am, very respectfully yours, signed, C. W. Pearson."

In a statement given out by Secretary Cradon, the trustees point out the excellence of Prof. Pearson's services during the thirty years he has been connected with the faculty, and aver that they feel great regret at the severance of relations.

In regard to his seeking a letter of dismissal from the church, Prof. Pearson said:

"I made an attempt to inaugurate a new policy, but the changes proposed, though I do not doubt they will be accepted in the very near future, are not accepted. I deemed it my duty to make my plea in the church and in the university. The plea has been rejected; it seems equally my duty to withdraw from both. I expect as opportunity offers to continue the work upon which I have entered."

TREATY SUITS AMERICA.

Anglo-Japanese Agreement Joins With Our Policy.

Washington, Feb. 14.—Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister to Washington, called at the state department and notified Secretary Hay of the signature of the treaty between Great Britain and Japan, binding the two nations to joint action to maintain the integrity of China and Korea.

The assent of the United States is not necessary to this agreement, but if it were it would probably not be withheld, for it is pointed out that the treaty is precisely in line with the aims of the state department as fully disclosed in the notes published by it from time to time. It is again stated that there has been no joint action as between the United States and the two powers named, yet it is a fact that the preamble to the new treaty might be regarded as almost a paraphrase of the position of the United States toward the Manchurian question as anunciated in Secretary Hay's note to the Russian ambassador here.

A man can be rich in relatives without being relatively rich.

Scribbs—"Do you think your new novel will sell?" Stubbs—"Sell? yes sireey I've hired a Chicago man to come forward and claim the plot."

"Have you got what they call tabedy hote dinners at this eatin' house?" asked the man in the bearskin coat. "No, sir." Stepping to the door, he beckoned to somebody on the outside: "Come in, Mandy," he said; "they eat in English here."

First Farmer—"Has that lawsuit between you and Haicede been settled yet?" Second Farmer—"Yes, and so are the lawyers." First Farmer—"How do you mean?" Second Farmer—"They're settled on our farms."

Mrs. Hirem Offen—"How long were you in your last place?" Applicant—"Oi was there just a month, ma'am." Mrs. Hirem Offen—"What was the trouble?" Applicant—"The trouble was, ma'am, that I was took sick, an' Oi couldn't get away any sooner."

Mrs. Gush—"How do you do, Manda? How did you like the reading of Browning at the club last night?" Mrs. Bluff—"Oh, pretty well. But I didn't like the way her dress hung." Mrs. Gush—"Nor I, either. And it seemed to me that she might have held the book more gracefully."

He Clinched It.

Erie, Kans., Feb. 17th.—In July of 1900, W. H. Ketchum of this place was suddenly seized with a violent pain in his back. He says he supposed it was a "stitch" and would soon pass away, but it lasted five months and caused him great soreness, so that he was barely able to get out of bed. He became alarmed and consulted a doctor which only increased his anxiety and did him no good.

A friend who had some experience advised him to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Ketchum began with six pills a day and in a week was well and the soreness all gone. However, this did not satisfy him, for he says:

"I thought I would clinch the cure with another box and I did. I have had no recurrence of the trouble since and as this is over a year ago I am thoroughly convinced that Dodd's Kidney Pills have completely cured me."

Lots of married people in the world pose as danger signals to those who are single.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 17th.—The activity at the laboratory of the Garfield Tea Co. is further evidence of the popularity of their preparations; over THREE MILLION FAMILIES used the Garfield Remedies last year! This vast public approval speaks well for the remedies. They are: Garfield Tea, Garfield Headache Powders, Garfield-Tea Syrup, Garfield Relief Plasters, Garfield Belladonna Plasters, Garfield Digestive Tablets and Garfield Cold Cure.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER

Diseases, Rheumatism, etc.

Disorders of the Kidneys and Bladder cause Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Gravel, Pain in the Back, Bladder Disorders, difficult or too frequent passing water, Dropsy, etc. For these diseases a Positive Specific Cure is found in a new botanical discovery, the wonderful Kava-Kava Shrub, called by botanists, the piper methysticum, from the Ganges River, East India. It has the extraordinary record of 1,200 hospital cures in 30 days. It acts directly on the Kidneys, and cures by draining out of the Blood the poisonous Uric Acid, Lithates, etc., which cause the disease.

Rev. John H. Watson, testifies in the New York World, that it has saved him from the edge of the grave when dying of Kidney disease and terrible suffering when passing water. Mr. James Thomas, Esq., of the Board of Review Bureau of Pensions, Washington, D. C., writes: Was cured of a usually fatal Kidney Trouble after many physicians had failed and he had given up all hope of recovery. Hon. R. C. Wood, a prominent attorey of Lowell, Ind., was cured of Chronic Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder Disease of ten years standing by Alkavis. Many ladies including Mrs. E. R. Dinsmore, South Deerfield, Mass., and Mrs. James Young, Kent, Ohio, also testify to its wonderful curative power in Kidney and allied disorders peculiar to womanhood.

That you may judge the value of this Great Discovery for yourself, we will send you One Large Case by mail Free, only asking that when cured yourself you will recommend it to others. It is a Sure Specific and can not fail. Address, The Church Kidney Cure Company, 406 Fourth Ave., New York.

WOMAN'S GENTLE NATURE CALLS FOR GENTLE TREATMENT

Delicately formed and gently reared, women will find, in all the seasons of their lives, as maids or wives or mothers, that the one simple, wholesome remedy which acts gently and pleasantly and naturally, and which may be used with truly beneficial effects, under any conditions, when the system needs a laxative—is—Syrup of Figs. It is well known to be a simple combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants with pleasant, aromatic liquids, which are agreeable and refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system when its gentle cleansing is desired.

Many of the ills from which women suffer are of a transient nature and do not come from any organic trouble and it is pleasant to know that they yield so promptly to the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs, but when anything more than a laxative is needed it is best to consult the family physician and to avoid the old-time cathartics and loudly advertised nostrums of the present day. When one needs only to remove the strain, the torpor, the congestion, or similar ills, which attend upon a constipated condition of the system, use the true and gentle remedy—Syrup of Figs—and enjoy freedom from the depression, the aches and pains, colds and headaches, which are due to inactivity of the bowels.

Only those who buy the genuine Syrup of Figs can hope to get its beneficial effects and as a guarantee of the excellence of the remedy the full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package and without it any preparation offered as Syrup of Figs is fraudulent and should be declined. To those who know the quality of this excellent laxative, the offer of any substitute, when Syrup of Figs is called for, is always resented by a transfer of patronage to some first-class drug establishment, where they do not recommend, nor sell false brands, nor imitation remedies. The genuine article may be bought of all reliable druggists everywhere at 50 cents per bottle.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Senate.—A stirring debate on the general Philippine question was precipitated in the senate late today, the principel participants being Platt, of Connecticut, and Hoar, of Massachusetts. Teller, of Colorado, nad concluded for the day his argument against the enactment of the pending Philippine tariff bill. In response to some statements he had made, Platt directed the senate's attention to the situation in the islands as he viewed it, maintaining that great progress was being made by the government in subduing the insurrection. He referred to the elections for municipal offices in various cities of the islands and to the establishment of schools for the education of Filipino children. Hoar ridiculed the statements of Platt, and in a facetious vein adverted to the efforts of the American government to control the Filipino people. The remarks of the Massachusetts senator aroused Platt, who delivered a notable speech, in the course of which he referred to Hoar in pretty sharp terms. His speech was listened to by senators on both sides of the chamber with profound attention. In conclusion he paid eloquent tribute to the efforts of the United States to carry the principles of free government to every territory where it had control. In his reply Hoar delivered an incisive criticism of the action of the Philippine commission, declaring that he had been taught to judge men rather by their actions than by their words, and by this standard he could not judge the Philippine commissioners with any degree of favor. Early in the day the senate passed a resolution submitting a constitutional amendment changing the time of the presidential inaugurations and the termination and commencement of congress from the 4th of March to the last Tuesday of April.

House.—The voting on amendments to the oleomargarine bill in the house today indicated a considerable change of sentiment since last congress, when the bill had 106 majority, and that the opposition to the measure has gained strength. While the passage of the bill is not endangered, it is not likely that the majority tomorrow, when the final vote is taken, will exceed thirty. The opposition today was strong enough in committee of the whole to adopt two important amendments, one providing that nothing in the act should be construed to prevent the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine in any state, for consumption entirely within such state, and the other to provide for the inspection and branding of renovated or process butter.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Senate.—With the exception of a sharp clash between Lodge and Patterson over the matter of admission of representatives of the press to the investigation which the Philippine committee is conducting, the discussion of the Philippine tariff bill in the senate today was quiet. The Colorado senator desired that all newspaper men be admitted to the committee hearings, declaring that as now conducted they were of a star chamber character. He said his recollection was that Lodge had suggested that the hearings be entirely secret. This drew the fire of the Massachusetts senator, who indignantly denied that he had suggested anything of the kind. He insisted that the reports made of the hearings by the three associations were accurate and fair to both sides of the controversy. A communication from the secretary of war, transmitting a memorial of the federal party of the Philippine Islands in support of American rule in the islands, called from Mr. Patterson the statement that the federal party had obtained its control in the Philippines by promising to the Filipinos that they would be admitted ultimately to statehood in the United States. Teller occupied the attention of the senate during the greater part of today's session and has not yet concluded his speech. Turner, of Washington, presented a memorial from the National Anti-Trust League enumerating certain trusts and combinations which the memorial sets forth were operating in conflict with the Sherman anti-trust law. He said that the petition stated that the existence of these so-called trusts had been called to the attention of the attorney general of the United States with a request that the machinery of the government be set in motion with the view of the destruction of the trusts, but thus far nothing had been done. The petition prayed that congress take action in vindication of its law.

House.—The house passed the oleomargarine bill. There was no division on the final passage, the real test of strength having been made on a motion to recommit, which was defeated by a majority of 34. The provision to require the inspection and branding of renovated butter, which was adopted in committee of the whole yesterday, was retained today on an aye and nay vote.

Washington. Feb. 13.—Senate.—While no definite agreement has been reached, a vote on the Philippine tariff bill seems to be in sight. It appears likely, judging from a discussion of the subject late in the day session, that the vote may be had next week, although the matter is yet involved in some uncertainty. Teller, of Colorado, concluded his speech today. He urged strongly that the Filipinos be given the fullest possible measure of self-government, the United States simply maintaining a protectorate over the island. He said he would prefer that this government should withdraw absolutely and without condition from the archipelago than that the present war should be continued. Mitchell, of Oregon, delivered a carefully prepared speech in support of his amendment to reduce the tariff duties upon Philippine products coming into the country to 50 per cent of the Dingley rates, maintaining that congress owed this concession to the Pacific coast states as well as to the Philippines themselves.

House.—The house today unanimously adopted a resolution, proposing an amendment to the constitution of the United States for the election of senators by direct popular vote. There was no demand for time to debate the resolution. This is the fourth time the house has adopted a similar resolution. Two bills of general importance were passed by the house today, the remainder of the time being devoted to minor business. One was a senate bill to provide for the payment of the claims of confederate officers and soldiers whose horses, side arms and baggage were taken from them by union soldiers, contrary to the terms of the surrender of Lee's and Johnson's armies. The amount to be paid under the bill was limited to $50,000. The other bill was to confer on the Spanish claims commission authority to send for persons and papers and to punish for contempt. Corliss, who is the author of a bill for a government cable from San Francisco to Manila, delivered a speech in opposition to the laying of such a cable by a private corporation.

Washington. Feb. 14—Senate.—A little flurry was created in the senate today over the employment, since the beginning of the session, of a score or more of extra clerks and messengers to committees. The charges of extravagance made induced the reference of the whole subject of clerical employment to a committee for investigation and report. The bill creating a permanent census office was under consideration for a time, but was not disposed of finally. After the passage of a large number of private pension bills, the senate eulogized the life and character of the late Representative Brosius, of Pennsylvania.

House.—The monotony of a private pension day of the house was enlivened today by a sensational speech from Wheeler, of Kentucky, in denunciation of what he denounced "flunkeyism" to foreign countries. He took the recent statements emanating from continental cabinets regarding the attitude of Great Britain during the Spanish war as a text for a wholesale attack upon the trend of our recent diplomacy. He severely scored Secretary Hay, and declared that if Lord Pauncefote had sought, as was alleged, to circumvent us during the war of 1898, the sooner he was across the seas the better. He also criticised the president for his reported intention to send his daughter to the coronation of King Edward, and protested against the official reception of Prince Henry. His speech aroused the house to a high pitch of excitement and elicited from Boutell, of Illinois, a spirited defense of Secretary Hay, whom he eulogized in high terms. Several other members on the republican side took a hand, and late in the afternoon Grosvenor, of Ohio, took Wheeler to task for his "inopportune protest" and rehearsed the history of the visit of the Prince of Wales to this country in 1860, and his reception by President Buchanan. During the day 125 private pension bills were passed in 37 minutes.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Senate—During the entire session of today the senate had under consideration the bill establishing a permanent census office. It was not completed, but an agreement was reached to take it up again immediately after the executive session that is to be held on Monday next for the consideration of the Danish treaty. The great contest of the day, of course, was over the transfer to the classified service of the employes of the census office who are to be retained in the permanent establishment. It envolved the entire civil service question and the debate covered much of the ground that heretofore has been gone over in congressional degates. After considerable discussion in which the whole service system was threshed over, Lodge's amendment was rejected and an amendment offered by Gallinger declaring that persons who had served as soldiers in any war in which the United States has engaged and the widows of such soldiers, shall have the preference in the matter of certification was adopted.

BOERS COMING TO AMERICA.

The Delegates Mysteriously Leave The Hague.

The Hague, Feb. 17.—The members of the Boer delegation have left The Hague, but haven't announced their destination. It is rumored that they have started for the United States.

Brussels, Feb. 17.—It is said the desire to keep secret the departure of Dr. Mueller, the former counsel of the Orange Free State in Holland, for the United States was so keen that the Boer envoy booked his passage under an assumed name.

According to information from responsible Boer quarters, Mr. Kruger's letter to President Roosevelt, of which Dr. Mueller is the bearer, does not appeal for intervention, but expresses regret that he is unable at present to personally congratulate the president on his accession to office and concludes with a gratified allusion to the numerous invitations to visit America.

Besides reorganizing the Boer propaganda in the United States, Dr. Mueller will direct his efforts principally to obtaining government prohibition of the exportation of articles regarded by the Boers as contraband of war, thus eliciting an opinion on the war by the United States government.

Dr. Mueller is supported by wealthy Boer sympathizers in Europe and has great hopes regarding the result of his mission.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN WHO ENDORSE PERUNA.

Miss Lenore Allen, 407 Dowell Street, San Francisco, Cal., writes:

"I consider Peruna an infallible remedy for catarrhal diseases. For several years I have been troubled with influenza, especially during our rainy season. I used to catch cold so easily that I was afraid to be out when the weather was the least bit inclement, or in the evening air. But since I have used Peruna I have nothing whatever the matter with me.

"I am in perfect health, and find that Peruna acts as a tonic, and seems to throw all sickness and disease out of the body. I go anywhere now and in all kinds of weather, seem to have an iron constitution and enjoy life because I enjoy perfect health." LENORE ALLEN.

Miss Mattie Douglass, 138 Thomas Ave., Memphis, Tenn., writes:

"From my early womanhood I have been troubled with occasional headaches. I took different powders and drugs, at times getting temporary relief. One of my friends advised me to try Peruna, which I did. I soon found that my general health improved, and my entire system was toned up.

"I felt a buoyancy of body and lightness of mind I had not known before, and my headaches has entirely disappeared, and I have enjoyed perfect health for over a year. I gladly endorse Peruna."

Peruna Makes Clean, Healthy Mucous Membranes — Catarrhal Diseases Disappear Permanently.

The mucous membrane is to the inside of the body what the skin is to the outside of the body. It lines every organ, duct and cavity. Catarrhal inflammation attacking one part is liable to spread to other parts. A neglected cold or slight catarrh is often the cause of lingering and dangerous catarrh.

Women are naturally more susceptible to inclemencies of the weather than men. With them a cold is often the starting point of some severe pelvic derangement, causing much pain and suffering.

Every woman needs a remedy upon which she can rely to keep her system fortified against the trying weather of winter and early spring. If Peruna is taken at the first symptom of a cold it will cure it before it develops into some annoying catarrhal derangement.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

RING WORM AND DANDRUFF.

They Are Each Caused by a Pestiferous Germ.

Ring worm and dandruff are somewhat similar in their origin; each is caused by a parasite. The germ that causes dandruff digs to the root of the hair, and saps its vitality, causing falling hair, and, finally, baldness. Without dandruff there would never be baldness, and to cure dandruff it is necesary to kill the germ. There has been no hair preparation that would do this until the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide, which positively kills the dandruff germ, allays itching instantly and makes hair glossy and soft as silk. Saved Him From Torture.

There is no more agonizing trouble than piles. The constant itching and burning make life intolerable. No position is comfortable. The torture is unceasing. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures piles at once. For skin diseases, cuts, burns, bruises, all kinds of wounds it is unequalled. J. S. Gerall, St. Paul, Ark., says: "From 1865 I suffered from the protruding, bleeding piles, and could find nothing to help me until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes completely cured me." Beware of counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

SCIENTIFIC JOTTINGS.

It is said that successful trials of telephonic apparatus without wire have been had in Italy. The instruments were installed on moving trains The details of the experiments are apparatus are meager.

One hospital in New York has adopted a camera to record minutely the action of patients, and many moving pictures have been taken, showing the movements in walking of persons afflicted with locomotor ataxia. They are produced slowly on the screen, so that physicians are enabled to study the symptoms carefully Moving pictures have been taken in Vienna showing operations being performed by great surgeons.

Barometric readings reduced to true atmospheric pressure are now required by the weather bureau, the approximate corrections for gravity being applied to all barometric readings. This correction applies to all mercurial barometers and is nearly constant at any one station. The corrected reading is a standard measure of atmospheric pressure and can be compared to similar corrected readings made at any place in the world.

Several of the largest abandoned copper mines in eastern Maine will again be operated. The Maine copper mines were in successful operation in 1879 and showed good profits while copper was quoted at 14 cents. The mines could also be operated on a paying basis with copper at 12 cents, but the crash came when the Wisconsin mines put down the price of copper to eight cents. Now that copper is so high, it will be very profitable to mine it.

A central station for the production of acetylene gas is being tested at Ta-Tavaros, Hungary, a city of 12,000 inhabitants. Five miles of pipe covers the city and furnishes gas to 158 street lights and 250 burners in houses. The generating station is located over 600 feet from the nearest house. The gas is produced in four generators by the fall of the carbide into the water. The gas for each group, on leaving the generators, passes into a cooler and then into a purifier, and finally into two gasometers of 106 cubic feet capacity. The generating plant requires the services of only two men, and the total cost of the installation was $30,000, of which $19,000 went for the pipe system.

A Legacy of the Grip

Is often a run-down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disorkered liver and kidneys often follow an attack of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters the splendid tonic, blood purifier and regulator of Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of grip. If suffering try them. Only 50c. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by Harr.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, if needful, at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent treatment for catarrh for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

News of our Neighbors

Ell Center

Special Correspondent.

Windy March is here.

Jacob Buck is our new director.

Next Monday is the Township meeting.

James Fiala has moved unto his farm near Hayfield.

John London has built a new barn on the Camp place.

G. L. Pomplin of Forest City visited friends here last Sat.

Allen Jones sold his horse and buggy to Aug. Allerman.

Tom. Marshall gave a social hop at his residence last week.

Issac Ptacek moved over near Hayfield the first of this week.

Allen Jones closed a very successful term of school in the Rice district last Friday.

Horace Lawhorn of Galena, Ill. moved into the Faila domicile the first of the week.

Jasper Kahl is again a neighbor of this place having arrived from Belmond last Saturday.

Mr. Kuskie of Dows arrived here with his family last week, and is now at home on the Gauley place.

Artel Haskins of Garner has moved onto his fathers farm. Who will keep house for him still remains to be told.

Fred Seikmeyer moved to his new home in Sac Jui Parle Co. Minn. last week and the best wishes of his many friends go with him.

A. Cummings went to his Dakota home this week. Frank Flint moved onto the Cummings place and Frank Glanville moved onto the place occupied by Mr. Flint.

C. Bert Groesbeck bade his friends adieu and started Monday night for his new home in Oregon. They will be joined by the Weeks and Siggett families at Mason City.

Now that the moving is about done we may hope for some decent roads. To have to haul a load over such roads is enough to try the patience of a saint let alone an ordinary mortal.

A pleasant evening was spent at Harry Rices home last Tuesday the occasion being a party given for the benefit of Allen Jones. The time was spent in carrom games followed by dancing. As usual a very nice supper was served and all voted it one of the happiest events of the season.

Lockjaw From Cobwebs.

Cobwebs put on a cut lately gave a woman lockjaw. Millions know that the best thing to put on a cut is Bucklin's Arnica Salve, the infallible healer of wounds, ulcers, Sores, Skin Eruptions, Burns, Scalds and Piles. It cures or no pay. Only 25c at Harr's drug store.

Goodell

From the Globe.

Gilbert Thompson of Meservey, is here assisting E. J. Bauman in the store.

Ed, Deveraux, of Wisconsin, visited from Monday evening until Tuesday afternoon with relatives and friends in Goodell.

Mrs, Geo. Duryea went to Britt Tuesday where she will visit with her sons and daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Cline, who reside north of town, are rejoicing over the arrival of a girl baby.

P. C. Lowenberg was at Belmond the latter part of last week, helping care for his mother who is very sick.

Mr. Conrad Becker of near Belmond is moving onto the farm that he recently purchased, northwest of town, formerly the Schulz farm.

Geo. Galloway, of Britt, was a business visitor in our city last Friday.

The Vice Of Nagging.

Clouds the happiness of the home, but nagging woman often needs help. She may be so nervous and run-down in health that trifles annoy her. If she is melancholy, excitable; troubled with loss of appetite, headache, sleeplessness, constipation or fainting and dizzy spells, she needs Electric Bitters the most wonderful remedy for ailing women. Thousands of sufferers from female troubles, nervous troubles, backache and weak kidneys have used it, and become healthy and happy. Try it. Only 50c. Harr guarantees satisfaction.

Kanawha

From the Record:

T. C. Landers, of Prarie City, Ill. is moving on the McGrath farm which he has purchased.

J. H, Martin will move on a farm near Wesley, March 1st. We hope big crops and big prices will meet his efforts.

Dave Zeigler and H. A. Eituier shot a white owl—that is Dave did—a few days ago. The bird measured 4 feet and 11 inches from tip to tip.

P. L. and John Brown were in the eastern part of the county this week in the interest of the formers candidacy for recorder. They found everywhere much encouragment to the Amsterdam candidate.

A. H. Eitnier has returned from a two weeks trip in northern Minnesota He speaks well of the country.

Severt Amonson and family moved this week to their new home near Ce lon, Martiu county. Minn. We wish them success.

The Cormith Hustler says there is a movement in that city to establish a local telephone system for the city and adjacent country. The name of company is the Farmers Co-operative Telephone Exchange.

Could Not Breathe.

Coughs, colds, croup, grip, bronchitis other throat and lung troubles are quickly cured by One Minute Cough Cure. One Minute Cough Cure is not a mere expectorant, which gives only temorary relief. It softens and liquifies the mucous, draws out the inflamation and removes the cause of the disease. Absolutely safe. Acts at once. "One Minute Cough Cure will do all that is claimed for it," says Justice of the Peace, J. Q. Hood, Crosby, Miss. "My wife could not get her breath and was relived by the first dose. It has been a benefit to all my family." J. L. Harr.

Can't Keep It Secret

The splendid work of Dr. King's New Life Pill is daily coming to light. No such grand remedy for Liver and Bowel troubles was ever known before. Thousands bless them for curing Constipation, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Jaundice and Indigestion. Try them. 25c at Harr's drug store.

Some of the Kansas papers are relating how at the close of the civil war, General Shafter was an applicant for a first lieutenancy in the reorganized army, and had working in his behalf a congressman whose knowledge of army affairs was very limited. One day this congressman sent the following messags: "Dear Shafter: I have just returned from a visit to the secretary of war. I find that it will be impossible to have you appointed a first lieutenant, as that rank is now full. However, the secretary is willing to appoint you a lieutenant colonel, which is the next best thing. Will that do?"

Des Moines, March 1, 1902.

Judge Spurrier will take up the Mabel Schofield case before the grand jury when it convenes early in March. That this is his intention was stated by him in an interview. "We have some good evidence and the league will not weaken in the effort to settle this question," he said. Asked if the present grand jury had refused to go into the case, Judge Spurrier said: "The present grand jury was crowded out of the case—that is, they had other new cases too important to set aside in order to take this one up, and as it promised to be of considerable duration, it is well they did not try it."

State Treasurer Gilberston has authorized a denial of the recent interview with him, in which the state treasurer was made to commit himself to the stocks and bonds method of railroad assessment in Iowa.

During the month of January Polk county received $1,191.21 as royalty on the coal mined on the county farm by the Des Moines Coal and Mining company. This is the largest amount ever received by the county in royalties for one month. The money goes into the county pauper fund.

Little or nothing is heard about the proposal now before both houses to repeal the statute for taxing the express companies by the Cheshire method and to substitute for it the same system that is used in assessing the telephone and telegraph property of the state, being a method embodied in a bill prepared by Senator Blanchard and substitutes for the Cheshire bills on the same subject in the last general assembly. The bills to repeal the Cheshire act and enact the substitute have just been introduced and have not been acted upon by the committees as yet.

Comment and reports strengthen the impression that Senator Emmert is going to be deposed from his seat for the Cass-Adair district, and that Bruce will be seated. The action of the contest committee is almost everywhere interpreted as meaning this. Senator Emmert was elected on the face of the returns by one majority and received the certificate. The contest committee has made a painstaking investigation and count, and its members declare that the report will represent their best judgment, reached as fairly as possible. They have absolutely declined to indicate their decision in advance, but senatorial rumor is that the seat will go to Bruce.

That there will be other railway assessment bills before the legislature before many days is definitely understood. There is talk that Senator Trewin may introduce one in the upper house, an inflexible stock and bond proposition, and make a contest for it in the committee. It is known that in both senate and house are members now preparing to present measures of the same character, and it will be no occasion for surprise if Representative Larrabbee introduces his measure any day. If he does, a copy of the same bill will probably be presented in the senate at the same time. Just what effect this scattering of the forces friendly to legislation may have is a good deal discussed. But that it is going to be a feature in the situation is not doubted.

The senatorial redistricting bill has made its appearance in the senate, being presented by Senator Hubbard, chairman of the committee. Instead of there being fifteen counties, having one senator each, as at present, there are only eleven. Those losing their isolation are Jasper, Marshall, Jackson and Clayton. There are no districts of more than three counties. The bill makes many changes in the districts and distributes the senators as follows: Districts one county each—Polk, Scott, Dubuque, Wapello, Mahaska, Linn, Woodbury, Lee, Des Moines, Clinton, Pottawattamie. Districts of two counties each—Dallas, Guthrie, Warren, Madison, Marshall, Harrison, Clayton, Allamakee, Story, Boone, Cass, Shelmy, Sioux, Plymouth, Cerro Gordo, Floyd, Henry, Washington, Louisa, Muscatine, Jefferson, Van Buren, Appanoose, Davis, Page, Fremont, Montgomery, Mills, Crawford, Audubon, Keokuk, Iowa, Monroe, Marion, Jones, Jackson, Johnson, Cedar, Webster, Calhoun, Poweshiek, Jasper, Delaware, Buchanan, Monona, Hardin, Wright, Hamilton, Blackhawk, Grundy, Fayette, Chickasaw, Howard, Winneshiek, Hancock, Kossuth, Tama, Benton. Districts of three counties each.—Clark, Lucas, Wayne, Decatur, Ringgold, Union, Adams, Adair, Taylor, Bremer, Bulter, Franklin, Mitchell, Winnebago, Worth, Ida, Clay, Cherokee, Palo Alto, Emmet, Dickinson, Sac, Carroll, Greene, Lyon, O'Brien, Osceola, Bunea Vista, Humboldt, Pocahontas.

The senate committee on schools decided to recommend for indefinite postponement the Hazelton bil providing for compulsory free text books in all the schools of the state. The bill was not discussed at any great length, it being the unanimous opinion of the members of the committee that such a measure was impracticable at this time. The compulsory education bill by Dunham, which passed the house, was referred to a subcommittee composed of Senators Trewin, Lister and Ball. Several representatives of the German Lutheran church appeared before the committee and expressed themselves as satisfied with the bill as it now is. Among them was the Rev. Paul Bredow, of Bremer county, who expressed his entire approbation of the measure as it stands.

IVEY TWISTS LION'S TAIL

REFUSES TO OBEY TREASURY DEPARTMENT ORDER.

Will Not Permit Canadian Vessels to Outfit at Sitka.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Some time ago the secretary of the treasury received unofficial information to the effect that J. W. Ivey, collector of customs at Sitka, had instructed his deputy at Unalaska not to permit Canadian vessels presumably about to engage in pelagic sealing to obtain supplies at that port. The collector was directed to send a statement of the facts to the department, and was informed that if such orders had been given they must be rescinded. Yesterday the department received a telegram from Ivey, saying:

"My instructions were against Canadian vessels actually engaged in pelagic sealing, which is illegal and criminal when committed within the marine jurisdiction of the United States. If there is an ancient treaty between the United States and Great Britain by which British subjects can commit depredations destroying American property and depleting our revenue of tens of thousands of dollars annually, while our citizens are denied these privileges, the sooner such treaty is abrogated the better.

"Your solicitude regarding international complications with Great Britain need cause you no uneasiness, as the poaching season has not yet opened. Your new collector will arrive in time to enforce your orders. My Americanism will not allow me to rescind an order which gives British subjects privileges within our marine jurisdiction which are denied our own people.

"There is another matter that may attract your attention. I have recently issued orders to the deputy at Skagway, a copy of which has been sent you, which have put the Canadian officers located there out of business and sent them to their own territory. You are aware of the fact that this officer became so offensive that he interfered with American officers in the discharge of their official duties, opened United States customs mail, dominated over the railway officials, discriminated in the order of shipment in favor of Canadian merchandise against that shipped from Seattle, established a Canadian quarantine at Skagway, collected moneys and performed other acts of British sovereignty in a port of the United States, such as hoisting with bravado the cross of St. George from the flagstaff of his custom house.

"I have sent the concern, bag, baggage, flag and other paraphernalia flying out of the country. You may fear the shadow of international complications and rescind this order, but a Reed, an Olney or Blaine would not."

REFORMATORY BILL PASSES.

Senate Votes to Establish a New Institution for Iowa Convicts.

Des Moines, Feb. 26.—The Iowa senate yesterday passed with only eleven dissenting votes, the bill to establish a refomatory for men in Iowa. The measure went through as originally drawn with but one important amendment to it. This is the bill fathered by Senator Emmert and endorsed by the state board of control. It was drawn up after consulting the laws of the other states, and is looked upon by lawyers of the upper body as well nigh perfect from a legal standpoint. It is practically the same bill which did not get through two years ago.

According to its provisions, as soon as the act goes into effect the state board of control will convert the penitentiary at Anamosa into a state reformatory for men, transferring to Ft. Madison all criminals over 31 years of age. Those under 31 years of age who are serving their first term in the penitentiary for any crime less than murder are to be retained in the reformatory, where skilled instructions in mechanical arts will be employed to teach them, and otherwise assist in the process of reformation it is expected to effect. After the reformatory is established it shall be the duty of the district judges to sentence all persons under the age of 31, convicted of any felony except murder, and no previously convicted, to this institution.

There is an elaborate system of parole provided by which the state board of control is to be guided, and what is considered one of the strongest features of the bill is the fact that violations of parole issued to inmates of the reformatory will send the convict to Ft. Madison to serve out the maximum penalty of his former crime without regard to previous sentence. Every effort to amend the bill failed except the striking out of the provision removal of convicts to the reformatory when the penitentiary at Ft. Madison becomes overcrowded. The bill originally provided that prisoners so transferred should be treated as other inmates of the reformatory, but it was amended to leave them subject to the same restrictions as at Fort Madison.

The bill carries an appropiation of $30,000 with which to make the transfer of the prisoners and open the reformatory.

Andy Rude, of Moorehead, who was injured in the railroad wreck at Missouri Valley on December 18, from the effects of which Frank Adams lost his life, has settled with the railroad company for injuries received at the same time, the company paying him $1,500 and transportation for one year.

In the short time that Alkavis, the Kava-Kava shrub compound, has been before the American public, its Cures of various forms of Kidney and Bladder diseases, Rheumatic and Gouty Disorders, have been numbered by the thousands. Alkavis has not been extensively advertised, through Newspapers or otherwise, but has made its way entirely on its merits, and through the fact that every sufferer can make free trial of its wonderful curative powers, and judge of its value from personal experience.

Mr. John Will, Route 3, Rural Delivery, Muncie, Ind.

The President of the Suffolk Hospital and Dispensary, Boston, Mass., established under the laws of the State, writes Sept., 18th, 1901, as follows:

"Gentlemen:—As a rule we are unwilling to endorse any preparation the formula of which is not made public to the medical profession, but the use of your product has so fully convinced us of its remedial value that our objection has been overcome. Let us say in a word that we have tested it on some chronic cases of Bladder and Rheumatic trouble, and it has Cured when old and established compounds have wholly failed. Our good words are at your disposal, for all should know of the good accomplished by its use.

James Thomas, Esq., of the Board of Review Bureau of Pensions, Washington, D. C., writes: Was cured of a usually fatal Kidney Trouble after many physicians had failed and he had given up all hope of recovery. Mr. John Will, Muncie, Ind., writes: Was told by two physicians, one being my son-in-law, that neither he nor any other doctor could cure me, but nevertheless "Alkavis" did the work. Many ladies also join in testifying to the wonderful curative powers of Alkavis in Kidney and allied diseases, and other troublesome afflictions peculiar to womanhood, which can not with propriety be described here.

That you may judge of the value of this Great Discovery for yourself, we will send you one Large Case by mail Free, only asking that when cured yourself you will recommend it to others. It is a Sure Specific Cure and can not fail. Address, The Church Kidney Cure Company, No. 406 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

TILLMAN WARNS PRESIDENT,

Says It Would Not Be Expedient for Him to Visit Charleston.

Washington, March 3.—The Times says:

Senator Benjamin R. Tillman of South Carolina was a caller on Senator Platt at the Fifth avenue hotel Saturday. One of the principle topics of conversation was the proposed visit of President Roosevelt to the Charleston exposition.

Senator Tillman is said to have been very explicit in his assertion that it would not be policy for President Roosevelt to make a visit to South Carolina, owing to the state of public feeling there over the McLaurin-Tillman incident and the withdrawal by the president of the invitation to Senator Tillman to meet Prince Henry at dinner at the White house. Senator Platt, when asked about the conversation, said: "I have had a talk with Senator Tillman. The facts which have been brought to my attention will be laid before President Roosevelt. I shall advise the president not to go to Charleston."

BURIED UNDER AVALANCHE.

Large Number of Miners Killed in Telluride Accident.

Telluride, Colo., March 1.—Fourteen dead, as many injured, and a score or more missing is the result, so far as known, of a series of snowslides which occurred yesterday in the immediate vicinity of the Liberty Bell mine, on Smuggler mountain, three and one-half miles north of Telluride. The roads between here and the Liberty Bell are almost impassable, and details of the accident are hard to obtain.

It seems that no less than four distinct slides occurred, each one claiming two or more victims. Several bodies have been recovered, but quite a number of the known dead are still buried under the tons of snow, rocks and timbers by which they were carried down. A large number of men are missing and it is thought probable that the death list will be swelled to twenty, and possibly thirty, when the bodies are taken from the snow mass.

ABSOLUTE CURE PROMISED.

Sweeping Claim of a United States Army Surgeon.

Denver, March 3.—The News prints the following from its Albuquerque, N. M., correspondent: "You may quote me as saying that we can cure consumption in every stage," said Major Appel, chief surgeon at Fort Bayard. "I have never before made that statement, but we have succeeded in demonstrating it beyond doubt." General MacArthur, who had been accompanied by Major Appel from the fort, endorsed the statement and declared he had never been so much astonished and pleased with anything in his life as the result of careful investigation of the work at the government soldiers' sanitarium at Fort Bayard. The main features of the treatment that has proven so successful in the pure air of the elevated region are life out of doors, the most carefully selected, nutritious diet, and absolute rest in the case of reduced patients.

NEW RECORD BY MARCONI.

Wireless Telegraphy a Success Up to 2,000 Miles.

New York, March 3.—Signor Marconi, who arrived on the Philadelphia from Southampton, reported a new wireless telegraph record.

"This time," said Mr. Marconi, "there can be no error. Captain Mills and Chief Officer Marsden signed each message received as witnesses. Fifteen hundred miles at sea regular messages were received from the Cornwall station and were recorded at a distance of 2,000 miles. It had been said that my Newfounland messages were due to my imagination and to atmospheric currents, so I requested the captain's signature to bear me out.

"I am not going to establish any wireless service between Cuba and the United States, as has been reported, nor have I any intention of establishing a line across the English channel."

RIOT VICTIMS NUMBER 56.

Alcalde of Barcelona Says it Is Impossible to Tell Number Hurt.

Barcelona, March 1.—The alcalde, in a statement just made public, fixes the number of persons killed during the rioting since February 17, at fifty-six. The number of wounded cannot be estimated. The iron masters have compromised with their employes on a basis of nine and one-half hours' work per day. There are fifty-seven undischarged vessels in the harbor. A majority of the business houses and mills have resumed and nearly all the street cars are running. The precautions taken for the maintainence of order have not been relaxed.

Heavy Boer Casualities.

London, March 3.—Lord Kitchener reports that the Boer casualties during the recent operation amounted to 819 men killed, or captured. In detail, the Boer losses were fifty men killed, ten men wounded and 759 unwounded men made prisoners. In addition to these, Lord Kitchener says that it is reported that over a hundred Boers, killed or wounded, were carried off after the attack on the blockhouse line, February 24. These figures, however, cannot be verified, so they are not included in the total of 819. Apart from the losses of the New Zealanders, the other British casualties were only one officer killed and four men wounded.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Senate.—The most important development today in connection with the Tillman-McLaurin episode of last Saturday was the act of Senator Frye, president pro tempore of the senate, in ordering the clerk of the senate to restore the names of the two South Carolina senators to the senate roll. If the present plan is carried out this act will be followed by the adoption by the senate of a resolution endorsing the action of the president pro tem. in ordering their names erased and suspending the two senators for some definite time. The senate adjourned within fifteen minutes after it convened.

House.—The house today passed the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. It was the fifth of the regular annual supply measures to be sent to the senate at this session. No amendments of importance were adopted. The feature of the day was the speech of Richardson, of Alabama, in reply to Corliss' speech a few days ago in favor of the construction of a Pacific cable by the government. The question of reforming the consular service was debated at some length, but no amendments on that subject were offered.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Senate.—Immediately after the senate convened Burrows, of Michigan, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, was recognized. He said that the committee was in the midst of the consideration of a very important question, a decision upon which had not been reached. By instruction of the committee he, therefore, moved that the senate adjourn. Without objection the motion was carried and the senate adjourned.

House.—The house today sent the Philippine tariff bill to conference, non-concurring in all the senate amendments. The democrats sought to amend the amendments by reducing the rate of duty and declaring the United States should relinquish all claim to the archipelago, but all propositions were defeated. Tawney, of Minnesota, made a personal explanation regarding Governor Toole, of Montana, saying that in formerly classing the governor as an opponent of Governor Van Sant in the railroad merger case he had been under a misapprehension. The ways and means committee divided on party lines today on a motion to non-concur in the senate amendments to the Philippine tariff bill, the democrats voting against the motion, which prevailed.

Washington, Feb. 28.—Senate.—After disposing of the Tillman-McLaurin resolution the senate agreed to the conference report on the consuls bill and then took up the irrigation bill.

House.—The house today broke all its records in the matter of private pension legislation by passing 159 bills in a little over three hours. The conference report on the census bill was adopted and the house adjourned until Monday.

Washington, March 1.—Senate.—Considerable important business was disposed of by the senate today. What is known as the omnibus claims bill, and the measure providing for the irrigation of public lands, were passed, the conference report on the Philippine tariff was agreed to, and the shipping bill was made the unfinished business. The irrigation measure provides that all moneys received from the sale of public lands in Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North and South Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming, beginning July 1, last, be devoted to the construction of irrigation works for the reclamation of arid lands, the work to be done and the money expended under the direction of the secretary of the interior. The bill was under discussion for several hours, but encountered no opposition and was passed without a roll call.

ENGLAND ALONE IS EXCEPTED.

Commerce With Germany Larger Than With Any Nation.

Washington, March 1.—The cordiality of the relations between the United States and Germany is shown more eloquently than by speeches and more forcibly than by the booming of cannon by the figures which show the commerce between the countries during the last few years. These figures show that the commerce of the United States with Germany exceeds that with any other country of the world except the United Kingdom, that our imports from Germany in the fiscal year 1901 were larger than those of any preceding year, with a single exception; that our exports to that country in 1901 were larger than in any preceding year, and that out total commerce with Germany in 1901 was larger than in any earlier year. This commerce has grown from less than 30 million dollars in 1865 to nearly 300 millions in 1901; or, to be more exact, from $29,878,845 in 1865 to $292,226,329 in 1901, the total for 1901 being practically ten times as great as that of 1865.

An examination of the detals shows that the percentage of increase in imports from Germany has been greater than the percentage of growth in exports to Germany, the figures being: imports into the United States from Germany, in 1865, $9,563,743; in 1901, $100,445,902. On the other hand, the exports from the United States to Germany were: in 1865, $20,615,102; in 1901, $191,780,427. Thus the imports into the United States from Germany are more than ten times as much in 1901 as in 1865, and our exports to Germany about nine and one-half times as much in 1901 as in 1865.

Somehow or other people with gout are always proud of it.

The truffle is a wonderful vegetable. It has neither roots, stems, leaves, flowers, nor seeds. It grows just below the surface of the earth, and in France is discovered by the aid of swine, which are attracted to it by the fleshy smell it emits. In England dogs are trained to search for it.

A school teacher in Frome, England, sent this to the father of one of his pupils: "I beg to inform you that in my opinion your son is suffering from myopia, and his case requires prompt attention." The next day the boy brought back this written request: "Mister please knock it all out of jim as I aint got time."

Montana's latest natural wonder is a vast cave, which has just been discovered about fifty miles east of Butte. A large river with a cataract of about 100 feet was explored for a distance of several miles without finding its source or outlet. A few articles of stone and copper utensils and some bones were picked up in one of the large apartments explored.

A Ranchman's Experience.

Lea, S. Dak., March 3d.—Wm. H. Neelen, a ranchman, whose headquarters are here, says:

"I have been afflicted with Kidney Trouble for several years. I had a very severe pain in the small of my back, so bad that I could scarcely sit in the saddle.

"I also had a frequent desire to urinate when riding and the pain and annoyance I endured was very great.

"I tried many medicines without getting any better till at last I was told to try Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I have used in all six boxes of this medicine and can say that they have done me more good than anything else I ever used.

"I have had more relief and comfort since using Dodd's Kidney Pills than I had for years before."

We are sorry to state that Klemme has a few cases of smallpox, at least that was the decision of the member of the state board of health who visited our city last Friday. If it is small pox as he states, it is an exceedingly mild form. Those who have been sick with this disease say they were hardly sick at all and some were not confined to the house more than a week. We do not anticipate that it will spread much as measures of quarantine have been adopted and an effort will be made to stop the desease right where it is. We believe it is perfectly safe to come to Klemme to trade. We are informed that there are cases of the same disease in Garner and near Goodell, but how true the report is we do not know.

A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmer Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only. Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

Homeseekers' Excursions.

Tickets to nearly all points in the United States on sale at all ticket offices of the Chicago Great Western Ry. on the first and third Tuesdays of January and February at the low rate of one fare plus $2 for the round trip. Good to return in 21 days from date of sale. For detailed information address any Chicago Great Western agent or J. P. Elmer, G. P. A. Chicago.

Would Smash the Club

If members of the "Hay Fever Association" would use Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, the club would go to pieces, for it always cures this malady,—and Asthma, the kind that baffles the doctors-it wholly drives from the system. Thousands of once hopeless sufferers from Consumption, Pneumonia, Bronchitis owe their lives and health to it. It conquers Grip, saves little ones from Croup and whooping Cough and is positively guaranteed for all Throat and Lung troubles. 50c, $1.00. Trial bottles free at Harr's.

Small-pox Talk.

In the absence of Mr. Flint we will assume to answer for him. The local Board of Health is not to be blamed by home people for doing as it has as it acted according to instructions given it by a state Board of Health officer, a Dr. Sams, of Clarion, who called it small-pox in a mild form. Presuming that his opinion is of great medical skill sand-papered with plenty experience, then, and then only Klemme has the small-pox, yet, the opinions of our Doctors and people who have nursed the disease are well worth consideration. The Garner Signal came out this week with an excuse proclaiming no intent of injury to Klemme, but, for the benefit of our southern neighbor it can be said that after a deed is done excuses will not rectify the action. The State officer quarantined 6 cases instead of 9! 14 cases all told were quarantined 6 of which have been released. Several more are on the verge of freedom. Some who were quarantined were perfectly well and were imprisoned as a cautionary measure to allow investigation. In perhaps a week more we will be as clear of illness as any town as proper laws are being enforced to satisfy all clamoring parties. No new are cases reported for this week. The disease is of a mild form, no one patient has been sick over ten days; no deaths have occured. After the flood of indignation subsides all our friends will realize the ungratefulness of their casual harshness.

One of our physicians is willing to voucher $50. that Garner has had, previous to our epidemic. and has at present the same disease so prevalent in Klemme. There it is chicken-pox. here it is small-pox! The 'small' disease must be stamped out and the other is only contagious. That's all!

BRUCE WILL WAIT AWHILE.

Meantime Emmert Will Hold Contested Seat.

Des Moines, Feb. 28.—A decided change of sentiment regarding the Bruce-Emmert contest for a seat in the senate was developed at the session of that body yesterday. Senator Emmert had gone home, satisfied that he was to be unseated. The three republicans on the contest committee had agreed on a report adverse to him and seating Bruce. The democrats in the senate, disgusted and not at all resigned, had about given up the fight. They asked only that the democrats on the contest committee be at least permitted to file an explanation of their position and have it in the journal. Because this privilege was opposed by the majority of the committee the whole case has been reopened, sent back to the committee, Senator Emmert telegraphed for to come back to his seat and the entire affair seems about as far from settlement as ever.

The question came up on the senate floor yesterday morning when the contest committee reported. The majority, composed of Crossley, Smith and Molsberry, republicans, favored seating Bruce, republican. The minority, Ball and Lyons, dissented and presented a dissenting report declaring that Pleasant township, Cass county, should have been thrown out and Emmert should have been seated. In support of this the minority, in a carefuly prepared statement written by Senator Ball, discussed the question. When the reports were filed the minority asked that its statement be printed in the journal.

The majority of the committee opposed this on the ground that the minority report was not a plain statement of dissent, but an argument and a presentation of some of the purported evidence. Against this there was a vigorous argument by Healy, Trewin, Porter, Garst, Dowell, Blanchard and others. It became evident that the disposition of the body was to give the minority a fair showing. Points of order and questions of precedence and even constitutionality were raised in rapid succession. The debate took a wide range and when it was evident that action would be almost impossible Porter moved that the whole matter be sent back to the committee. This carried viva voce and the question will not come before the senate again till next week.

WORK OF THE LEGISLATURE.

Has Already Passed a Large Number of Measures.

Des Moines, March 3.—The legislature has now been in session about seven weeks, and only twenty-eight bills have passed both houses. This is not a fair index of the amount of work done, however, as the greater part of the time has been devoted to committee work, and the calendars of both houses are well filled with bills, and a great many more will be reported out by the different committees in the next week or two. Besides the twenty-eight bills that have been passed by both houses, the senate has passed thirty bills and the house forty-seven. Altogether the senate has passed fifty-eight bills, besides two joint resolutions for woman suffrage and biennial elections. The house has passed seventy-five bills. The houses are both ready for business now, and a great many measures will be disposed of during the next few weeks.

No bills of any great importance have been passed by both houses. Perhaps the most important are the Cherokee appropriation bill, the bills changing the date of assessing railroads and express companies, the bill by Wilson, of Buena Vista, removing the $2,000 limit on the filing fees of articles of incorporation, and the bill appropriating $7,000 to replace property to be destroyed at Tama Indian reservation on account of small pox.

Thus far 350 bills have been introduced in the house and 289 in the senate. A great many have been disposed of by the committees and a great many more will be. Bills introduced from this time on unless of paramount importance, stand very little show of ever getting out of the committees to which they will be referred, and if they do will only get on the calendar in time to be swept off by the sifting committee. It is conceded by all that the legislature must work from this time on in order to get through by the middle of April.

Must Pay Ransom or Be Tortured.

Boone, Feb 28.—Engineer Tom Herecon is in receipt of a mysterious letter from Clinton in which the anonymous writer demands $2,500 under penalty of death by slow torture. The ransom is demanded at once though a significant feature of the weird proposition is that no locality is suggested as to where the money is to be placed. The address given is 1318 Third street ,Clinton, and the detectives are now making a search of that vicinity. Tom Herecon is much wrought up over the matter. He believes the writer fully intends to cary his threat into execution, and while he will not make the payment exacted, a close watch is to be kept on the matter with a view of making an arrest.

Murdered for His Money.

Onawa, March 3.—Ed Brainard, a farmer living near Preparation, Monona county, was murdered today in Harrison county while on the way to Woodbine to buy a farm. He had about two thousand dollars on his person. Sheriff Strain has just started in pursuit of the murdeers.

THE TAX BILL IS REPORTED

RAILROAD ASSESSMENT MEASURE GOES TO SENATE FLOOR.

Upper House Ways and Means Committee Finally Brings Out Its Bill.

Des Moines, March 1.—The senate ways and means committee voted yesterday to report for passage the railway taxation bill drafted by Senators Junkin, Healy, Lewis and Porter, with significant amendments offered by Senator Lewis. With these amendments the bill provides that the executive council shall determine the value of the railroad property of Iowa by taking into consideration "the market or actual value of the stocks and bonds of each railway, the gross earnings, the net earnings, the physical condition of such railway witnin the state, the information furnished by the reports required to be made, together with any other matter necessary to secure a just and equitable assessment." Originally the bill required exclusive consideration of stocks and bonds.

The present law provides that the council, in assessing the roads, shall take into consideration the gross earnings "and any and all other matters necessary to enable the council to make a just and equitable assessment."

Senator Crossley proposed in place of the committee amendment, a substitute known to meet with the approval of Lieutenant Governor John Herriott, providing that the council should first find the value of the railroads by the stocks and bonds, and, if this proved inequitable, it should discover the value of the roads by capitalizing their net earnings; and, in case this proved impossible or unfair, it should assess the roads on the basis of all the information secured. The substitute was voted down, Senators Crossley and Trewin only voting for it. The latter was absent when it was first presented, but voted for it after reading it.

Senator Trewin suggested an amendment to make clear a provision of the committee bill on the construction of which the railroads and the subcommittee—Senators Lewis, Healy, Junkin and Porter—differ. This provision is as follows, including the provisions as to the means of discovering the value of the ralroad stocks and bonds: "The executive council shall enter on its records for publication the valuation of all the stocks as thus returned and corrected and its reasons in full for any variation therefrom." This, however, was voted down.

SUFFRAGE GIVEN A BLOW.

House Committee Averse to the Joint Resolution.

Des Moines, Feb. 28.—The house committee on constitutional amendments, by a vote of 8 to 3, yesterday recommended for indefinite postponement the joint resolution for an equal suffrage amendment. The following was the vote on the motion to postpone indefinitely: Ayes—Sweet, Temple, Blakemore, Barkley, Barker, Gilchrist, Langan of Clinton and Walters, 8; nays—Fields, Black and Willett, 3; absent—Kerr, Payne and Roome. The committee devoted an hour and a half to the consideration of the resolution. It heard a number of arguments for suffrage by Mrs. Adelaide Ballard of Hull, president of the Iowa Equal Suffrage association; Mrs. Anna M. Eaworthy of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Nellie Nelson, secretary of the Iowa Equal Suffrage association; Mrs. M. J. Coggeshall of Des Moines, Senator Allyn, author of the resolution in the senate, and Judge C. C. Cole of this city. Miss Daisy Deighton, who is at the head of the suffrage legislative committee, was at the hearing. Mrs. John T. Merrill of this city spoke against suffrage.

SAFE BLOWN AT CAMBRIDGE.

Robbers Blow Open Safe in Large General Store.

Cambridge, Feb. 28.—Robbers entered C. S. Larsons store at Cambridge, Story county, and blowing open the safe took therefrom $100 in cash, with which they made their escape. A team belonging to Thomas Wilson, a resident of Cambridge, was also found to be missing and it is believed that the robbers escaped with the stolen horses. The horses are bays, slick and fat. A posse has been raised to scour the country for the robbers. Two men, one tall and light completed and the other a small man are suspected.

AWFUL CRIME IS CHARGED.

Father Accused of Maiming His Three-Year Old Son.

Sioux City, March 3.—Lee Vanseroy, a farmer of Calhoun county, has been arrested, charged with maiming his 3-year-old son. Vanseroy's wife died two years ago. His boy had the scarlet fever and refused one day to take medicine, where-upon the father secured a chisel and cut out almost all the teeth in the child's jaw, inflicting a deep wound in the roof of the mouth and breaking the jawbone. Vanzeroy is under bonds.

Historic Name Has Been Revived.

Washington, March 3.—Secretary Root has signed an order directing that the new military post to be established near Des Moines, Iowa, be called Fort Des Moines, in memory of the original fort established in 1843, at the junction of the Des Moines and Raccoon rivers, by Captain James Allen's company of First dragoons and Captain J. R. B. Gardner's company of First cavalry.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, Feb. 25.—Senate.—The Emmert bill, establishing a reformity for men at Anamosa was passed. A bill was introduced establishing a board of examiners for osteopathic physicians. There is an understanding that the state board of medical examiners will not oppose the measure. It removes osteopaths from the charge of the medical board.

House.—Cummings' bill, increasing the salaries of judges of the supreme court hereafter to be elected from $4,000 to $5,000, was taken up and passed by a vote of 80 to 8. The bill originally provided that the salaries should be raised to $6,000, but was amended by the committee on compensation of public officers. Secor's bill requiring the county auditor to furnish all blanks to permit holders and druggists to use same, was also passed. Wilson's bill, repealing the law requiring music to be taught in the public schools, was indefinitely postponed. Jenks' bill, appropriating $22 per month for nine months in the year for the maintenance of each inmate of the school for the deaf and dumb at Council Bluffs, was passed.

Des Moines, Feb. 26.—Senate.—Senator Trewin introduced a resolution memoralizing the Iowa delegation in congress to support the Nelson-Corliss bill giving the interstate commerce commission additional powers. The Iowa state senate passed a resolution for the submission of the woman suffrage amendment to the constitution, Wednesday, by a vote of 28 to 16, and without a word of debate. Senator G. S. Allyn of Ringgold county was in charge of the bill, but contented himself with moving its passage after reading the Colorado official endorsement of the measure. No other senator evidenced a desire to speak. The senate defeated the bill to abolish days of grace. Senator Healy gave notice of his motion to reconsider the passage of the reformatory bill passed Tuesday. He moved the reconsideration because the law takes the parole away from the governor and lodges it in the board of control.

House.—When the senate resolution memoralizing congress to pass and requesting the Iowa delegation in congress to vote for the Hoar bill in restriction of injunctions issued during strikes was taken up by the house Wednesday, Dunham of Delaware offered a substitute expressing confidence in the delegation and whatever action it may take with reference to this subject. An extended debate during which republican members attacked and defended Senator Hoar resulted in the adoption of the substitute by a vote of 49 to 40. Among bills passed were the following: By Furry, providing a jail sentence or a fine as one of the penalties for perjury; by Edwards, requiring telephone and telegraph companies to report to the executive council instead of to the auditor of state for purposes of taxation.

Des Moines, Feb. 27.—Senate.—The senate passed the bill to appropriate $7,000 to buy supplies for the Tama Indians, whose blankets, etc., have been burned on account of infectious disease. This money will be refunded by the general government. Senator Harper brought up the biennial elections constitutional amendment. Senator Hubbard explained that the resolution is in precisely the form it was formerly. The resolution was adopted, forty voting for and Bishop, Crossley, Hogue, Spaulding and Wilson voting against. Senator Lewis said he was opposed to biennial elections but is not opposed to submission. Senators Brighton, Emmert, Fitchpatrick, Hobart and Townsend were absent. Senator Trewin resumed his argument for reconsideration of the measure creating the reformatory at Anamosa. Following his address Courtright attacked the constitutionality of the measure.

House.—Whiting called up Hogue's bill to compel railways to furnish freight cars. This bill was passed by the senate but was recommended for definite postponement by the house committee on railroads. The bill was recommitted. The bill by Cummings increasing the salaries of district judges to $3,300 was taken up. The bill originaly placed the salary at $4,000, but was amended by the committee on compensation of public officers, making it $3,300. Cummings spoke at some length in favor of the bill. Hughes moved to amend by making the salary $3,500. The amendment carried by a vote of 37 to 33, and the bill passed. Hurn's bill giving the locad boards of health power to enforce quarantine and if necessary to remove the parties infected, forcible removal to be upon order of court, and the costs be charged to the person quarantined if financially able; if not county to pay and tax one-third to township where case existed, was passed.

Des Moines, Feb. 28.—Senate.—Both houses passed the bill changing the time of assessing the railroads from March 25 to August 1, and the time of requiring their reports from February 15 to April 1, without opposition, and Governor Cummins immediately signed it so that it became a law by publication at once. Both houses passed the express bill requiring reports to be made to the executive council instead of the auditor of state and this was signed by the governor at once and becomes a law at once. Senators Trewin, Whipple and Porter and Representatives Payne, Hamann and Barker were appointed code commissioners to superintend the codification of the session laws of the last three general assemblies. The senate passed the bill to give Cedar Rapids and Ottumwa power to improve their rivers within the city limits. The senate voted not to concur in the house substitute to the senate resolution requesting the Iowa congressmen to vote for the Hoar bill to restrict the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes. The house substitute was an expression of confidence in the declaration.

The senate railroad committee voted to report for passage the Hubbard "merger" bill. There was no opposition in the committee. The bill gives Iowa railroads power to build and own extensions and to own, control and buy other railroads and to own, buy and control the stocks of other railroads in states not adjacent to Iowa, having already the right to do these things in states adjacent to this.

House.—In addition to passing the railroad amendment and express bills, the house passed the bill which the senate had already passed appropriating $7,000 for the purchase of supplies for the Tama Indians to replace those burned on account of infectious diseases. Both houses adjourned to meet at 2 p. m. Monday.

CONFEREES HAVE AGREED

REPORT ON PHILIPPINE TARIFF BILL ARRANGED.

House Accepts All But One of Material Amendments Made by Senate.

Washington, March 3.—The conferees of the two houses of congress on the Philippine tariff bill reached an agreement after one sitting, the representatives of the house accepting all but one of the material amendments made by the senate.

The amendment which was not accepted is that imposing the tonnage taxes of the United States upon foreign vessels engaged in interisland traffic in the Philippines.

The house conferees also refused to accept the proviso connected with the senate amendment limiting the operation of the sedition laws of the Philippines, leaving that provision to declare simply that "no person in the Philippine island shall under the authority of the United States be convicted of treason by any tribunal, civil or military, unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confessions in open court."

The part stricken out exempted members of a family from punishment for failing to give information concerning the treasonable acts of one another.

The senate reduction of 25 per cent on the rate of duty is retained.

TILLMAN HIT HARDEST.

Senate Votes Censure in Which His Action is Condemned.

Washington, March 1.—The senate committee on privileges and elections yesterday agreed to report a resolution of censure in the cases of Senators Tillman and McLaurin.

Three republicans, Pritchard, McComas and Beveridge, voted against it.

Mr. Burrows presented the resolution of censure upon Senators Tillman and McLaurin.

The report of the committee read in the senate says the offense of Tillman was much greater than that of McLaurin.

Mr. Bailey presented a report of the democrats agreeing to the resolution, but dissenting from the majority that there was a difference in the gravity of the offense. They also disagreed with the views of the majority that a senator might be suspended.

Following is the full text of the resolution recommended by the committee:

"That it is the judgment of the senate that the senators from South Carolina, Benjamin R. Tillman and John L. McLaurin for disorderly behavior and flagrant violation of the rules of the senate during the open session of the senate on the 22nd day of February, deserve the censure of the senate and they are hereby so censured for their breach of privileges and dignity of this body; and from and after the adoption of this resolution the the order adjudging them in contempt of the senate shall no longer be in force and affect."

The roll was called on the adoption of the report of the majority committee on privileges and elections. Senators Beveridge, Clark (Wyo.), Deboe, Dietrich, Foster (Wash), Kittridge, Millard, Pritchard, Proctor and Scott voted "no" on the resolution. It was carried.

McLaurin (Miss.) asked to be excused from voting on account of kinship with McLaurin of South Carolina. The latter declined to vote. Tillman also declined to vote saying that "among gentlemen an apology for offenses committed in the neat of blood was sufficient."

Mr. Kean (N. J.) having voted in the affirmative, said that in view of the remark of Mr. Tillman he would change his vote.

When the result of the vote was announced Mr. Burrows demanded that Mr. Tillman's words be taken down. When the words were read, Mr. Tillman said that he did not intend that his words be offensive and if they were he would withdraw them.

"Without objection," said President Pro Tem Frye, "they will be withdrawn."

"I object," said Mr. Detrick (rep., Neb.) but in the confusion he evidently was not heard.

Mr. Hoar presented an additional rule looking to the prevention of such occurrences in the future which was referred.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Copyright, by STREET & SMITH, New York.

McGregor made a proposition to the effect that his principal should be entitled to at least one shot in practice before the affair came on the carpet—as Livermore was familiar with the handling of the firearms, he certainly had an advantage, and it would be only fair to give Overton a chance to see how the weapon upon which he was about to stake his life did its work.

To this the others readily agreed, and Jack glancing around for some mark, discovered a sparrow upon a branch fully as distant as his antagonist would be when the word came to fire.

"Ah!" he remarked, "I have found a mark almost half as large as a human heart."

He fired almost instantly, and the mangled bird fell to the ground, while the McGregor whistled a bar or two from "The Campbells Are Coming," and Livermore's second looked very serious.

Then the conditions of the duel were gone over.

The two principals were to be stationed at the posts selected, within easy pistol shot, and their backs turned toward each other.

At a given signal they were to wheel and advance directly toward each other, the privilege to fire being open from that instant.

One advantage would come to the man who got in his shot first, provided he hit his mark, but if he missed, heaven help him, for the other had the privilege of walking up as close as he pleased and delivering a murderous fire.

When these arrangements had been made the principals walked to their stations and received their weapons, together with a last word of advice from their seconds.

Then they were left alone, facing each other.

Overton could feel his heart pounding away like a miniature trip hammer, and he held out his arm with some uneasiness, but smiled to find it as firm as a rock—not a tremor or quiver of the slightest description—really it looked bad for Livermore, who perhaps had met with the most astonishing perils during his adventurous life, and finally came home to find his Sedan.

At McGregor's command the two duellists turned back to back, with the arm holding the pistol dropped down at their sides.

"Men, are ye baith ready?" he demanded, as though about to open a sprinting race or some other innocent game of sport.

"Ready!" came from the traveler, quickly.

"Ready!" echoed Overton, between his teeth.

"Then, gang awa', and the God o' battles decide the day," roared the ex-dragoon.

Both men whirled around, and the dueling pistols came up to a level.

Neither fired at once, but began to advance, while the onlookers—including an almost paralyzed rustic with a pitchfork over his shoulder, on the way to some field of labor—held their very breath in suspense.

Two, three, four paces for each—the distance had been horribly narrowed, and as yet not a shot.

It looked like murder—as though both of them must fall when the final exchange of compliments took place.

McGregor would have given all he owned for the privilege of bawling out to his man—he believed Jack was losing his best chance—that he had the other at his mercy, and was a fool not to get in the first shot; but such an act on the part of a second would have been a gross breach of the etiquette governing such affairs, and he discreetly remained silent.

Then with stunning abruptness came the sharp report of a pistol, and the McGregor groaned as he saw the smoke oozing from the barrel of the leveled weapon clutched in the rigid hand of Livermore.

CHAPTER VII.

How the Duel Ended.

With his heart in his throat the McGregor, after discovering that the shot proceeded from the pistol of the veteran traveler, flashed his eyes toward Overton. Jack turned his face for a second toward his friend—it was colorless from the intense nervous tension, but over it had shot a terrible grim smile, such as could only be born of complete triumph—he knew the life of his hated rival was in his hands.

Livermore, of course, had stood in his tracks after his fiasco. His bronzed feature gave no sign of fear, though naturally enough he had set his teeth to meet the dread summons, as became a man. He had had his chance and lost—the game was in Overton's hands, and there could be no appeal from the stern arbitrament of arms..

And Jack—a whirlwind of fancies played riot in his mind and heart—the man he hated with such bitterness, who had stolen away the girl whom he had almost looked upon as his wife forever and aye—this favorite of fortune was now in his power, and a pressure of the finger alone was needed to end his career.

Fedora would then be free and he—but, stop; suppose he killed Livermore. Would that act bridge the abyss between Fedora and himself On the contrary, would it not render it forever impassable?

His whole nature revolted at the thought of killing his rival in cold blood—this was not the kind of revenge for which his spirit yearned—and even at this dreadful moment of suspense, when angel and devil seemed to struggle within for the mastery, somehow the gentle, earnest face of little Mazette, the portrait painter, flashed before his vision.

Then suddenly, without the least warning Overton raised his arm until the pistol covered the upper branches of a tree, and, discharging the weapon, tossed it to the feet of his antagonist, whirled on his heel and walked away.

The good angel had triumphed—he refused to accept the life the gods had given him.

The McGregor, breathing out mutterings of discontent, chased after his principal. To his rather brutal soldier mind Jack was a fool to stand the fire of a man who had wronged him, and then throw away the golden opportunity for revenge which the fickle goddess of fortune had placed in his hands.

McGregor could not comprehend the delicate nature of the affair—he believed that if the doughty captain, who had perhaps bewitched Jack's sweetheart in some mysterious manner, had only been disposed of, so that he might not appear upon the stage again, Overton would have clear sailing in the matter.

Alas! the situation was far more complicated.

Overton knew a condition and not a theory confronted him—that Fedora had been dazzled by the evidences of wealth around her—that she loved dress and diamonds and luxurious ease more than she had ever loved him, even in that fool's Paradise when, like a couple of children, they had indulged in beautifully romantic dreams of the future—that evanescent Fata Morgana that appears to all sailors who venture upon the sea of love.

But one faint hope remained—would Fedora listen to the still, small voice within and thrust the temptation aside?

Strange how we cling desperately to the last straw when our boat sinks under us.

They entered the great city and finally pulled up at a chop house, where, having dismissed the chuckling cabby, they had breakfast together. Overton still had little to say, though he kept up a tremendous thinking, and when the meal was over the McGregor shook him solemnly by the hand, saying in parting:

"As I taul ye before, laddie, if ye need a braw frien' came to Donald McGregor. I'm sore afraid ye did wrang to let the gillee off, but ye knaw best. Aweel, aweel, let it gang. Nae doot I'll see ye later, mon. In peace or war, then call on the McGregor."

CHAPTER VIII.

Mazette.

Overton settled down into a rut, waiting and working by fits and starts upon his picture. During these weeks he lived from hand to mouth, selling an occasional "pot boiler" for a pittance that just managed to keep the wolf from the door.

Days glided into weeks. He worked spasmodically, wandered about London, dreamed of mighty things that he could do if invested with the touch of Midas, and sometimes spent an evening with Mazette and her aunt.

These social events always had a salutary effect upon Overton, and many times he breathed blessings upon the little miniature painter for her sisterly affection, as he was pleased to consider it, which soothed him in such a wonderful manner.

His painting was complete.

As he stood in front of it he knew it was a masterpiece that must without a doubt bring him both fortune and glory.

Oh! if she would but only wait until the day when all London echoed with his name, and it would be an honor to know him.

But the hero of many an African and Indian border foray was impatient in his wooing, since he had reached an age when a man must needs make haste if he expects to shake off the thralldom of bachelorhood and take upon himself the vows and duties of a benedict, since the older he grows the more difficult it becomes to assume new obligations.

When Overton read in the Times that the wedding was to occur on the next Thursday evening at a fashionable church he seemed turned into stone for a time. He became moody, almost sullen. He avoided those friends who had been of late such a comfort to him. Mazette chanced to meet him on the street—perhaps the use of that word can hardly be allowed, since she purposely went out of her way to pass near his lodgings in the hope of seeing him, for the article concerning Fedora's coming marriage had caught her eye, too, and she began to fear for Jack again.

When she saw him so moody and apparently at cross purposes with the whole world, she felt very bitter toward Fedora, and had it been in her power just then to remedy matters, even at the expense of pain to herself, Mazette would have only too gladly done so, for Jack married to Fedora and happy was far better than Jack miserable, despondent and devoid of ambition.

The fatal evening came.

Jack had grimly made up his mind he would by hook or crook witness the ceremony that was to darken his life and take from him the girl he had so long looked upon as his inspiration.

Knowing that a fashionable audience would fill the church, and that admission without a card would be difficult, he made friends with the organist and managed to get an invitation to occupy a seat in the loft.

Mazette insisted on accompanying him—at first he had been appalled by the thought of another witnessing his mute suffering, but she was so persistent, and her sweet presence always served to arouse his better nature, so finally he gave a reluctant consent.

When the organ pealed out the wedding march from "Lohengrin," Overton shut his teeth hard and waited the coming of the white procession that started down the aisle, flower girls strewing the way with rare blossoms.

Fedora looked like a dream—her appearance would haunt him to his dying day.

And Livermore was very handsome in his dress suit—he appeared very proud, and had eyes for no one but the beautiful woman who knelt before the chancel rail beside him and vowed to "love, honor and obey."

When Overton heard this he seemed to feel a change come over him—he knew it was false, for, loving him, how could she truthfully promise to give to her husband the affection it implied?—his faith in womankind was dead, he believed, forever, and from that hour he could never believe in the sex again.

Toward the close of the ceremony Fedora raised her hitherto downcast eyes, as if drawn by the subtle power of Jack's stern gaze, and looked into his face.

As if an arrow had pierced her heart she turned pale and shuddered, nor did she dare raise her eyes again.

Perhaps she even dreaded lest the man whom she had so cruelly jilted, whose devoted heart she had cast away after it was of no further use to her, as one might a worn-out glove, might in his righteous anger do something desperate—such things have been known ere now in high life.

Altogether those last few minutes of the ceremony that should have been the proudest and happiest in her whole life were the most miserable, and she endured a small portion of the same suffering her act had brought upon Overton.

All was over!

The wedding procession was passing down the aisle to renewed strains of joyous music. Perhaps those who were near enough to notice wondered why the happy and envied bride should turn her head and look in a half eager, half frightened way toward the altar—they could not know that remorse was already beginning to goad her heart, and that the memory of that white, set, agonized face in the organ loft would come before her with reproaches every day of her life, while the bitter accusations of a murdered conscience must many times drive her to tears when surrounded by all the beautiful things that generally go to make the sum total of a fashionable woman's happiness, and to possess which she had betrayed her own heart.

When Jack went out of the church, after the butterfly audience had rolled away in their swell turnouts, he was taciturn; but his step had an elasticity Mazette had not noticed for many a day. He accompanied Mazette to her home, but declined entering the humble abode.

Made Well and Strong by Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. Schafer, 436 Pope Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"In the early part of last year I wrote to you for advice for my daughter Alice, four years of age.

"She has been a puny, sickly, ailing child since her birth. She had convulsions and catarrhal fever. I was always doctoring until we commenced to use Peruna. She grew strong and well. Peruna is a wonderful tonic; the best medicine I have ever used."—Mrs. Schafer.

Mrs. C. E. Long, the mother of little Mina Long, writes from Atwood, Colo., as follows:

"We can never thank you enough for the change you have made in our little one's health. Before she began taking your Peruna she suffered everything in the way of cough, colds and croup, but now she has taken not quite a bottle of Peruna, and is well and strong as she has ever been in her life. She has not had the croup once since she began taking Peruna, and when she has a little cold a few doses of Peruna fixes her out all right. We can never praise it enough "—Mrs. C. E. Long.

Mrs. G. W. Heard, of Howth, Texas, writes to Dr. Hartman in regard to her baby girl, Ruth:

"My little girl had some derangement of the Bowels. She was a mere skeleton and we did not think she would ever get well. After giving her less than one bottle of Peruna she was sound and well. Now she has a good appetite and is a picture of health."

Mrs. Heard also writes in regard to her son, Carl:

"My son's ears had been affected since he was a babe only a few months old. The last year I thought he had almost lost his hearing and had a local physician treating him for about six weeks. Finally I began giving him your remedy, and after he had taken two bottles he was entirely cured. I cannot praise Peruna enough."—Mrs. G. W. Heard.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

A Doctor's Little Daughter Cured of Grip by Pe-ru-na.

Dr. R. Robbins, Physician and Surgeon of Muskogee, Indian Ter., writes:

"I have been a practicing physician for a good many years and was always slow to take hold of patent medicines, but this winter my little girl and myself were taken with the grip. I was so bad I was not able to sit up. I sent for a doctor, but he did me no good.

"Finally I sent and got a bottle of Peruna and commenced to take it. I took two bottles and my cough was gone and my lungs loosened up and my head became clear. My little girl took the same way.

"It looked as though she would die, she was so sick. I gave her medicine, but it seemed to do her little good, so I sent and got one more bottle of Peruna and commenced to give it to her. It was only a short time until she was getting along all right, so I give your medicine, Peruna, the praise for what it did for me and my dear little daughter."—Dr. R. Robbins.

Don't believe all the good things you hear of yourself.

LITTLE FALLS.

Eastern capitalists connected with the Westinghouse Electric Company lately bought the splendid Water Power at Little Falls, Minn., and are now arranging to build trolley lines east and west to tap the adjoining country. The balance of the water power, transformed into electricity, will be utilized for large mills and factories in Little Falls, and for some time to come the eyes of the whole country will be turned towards this city because of the nature and vastness of these improvements.

We own the best business property in the heart of the city, and residence lots near the mills and factories or depot and business district, farm lands in 40, 80 and 160-acre pieces, near the new trolley lines, and 2½, 5 and 10 acre garden tracts inside and adjoining the city limits. This unplatted property will shortly be reached by the city street car system, and could at any time with profit be sub-divided into city lots and blocks.

More money will be made in Little Falls real estate during the next years than in any other conservative and legitimate speculation. We acquired our holdings for little money years ago, before the Water Power was improved, and before the paper mill, flour mills and factories were built and when the Weyerhauser syndicate had not yet located here, at a time when the recent developments above referred to could not possibly be foreseen, and for this reason we can well afford to give others a chance. You can come in on the ground floor by at once addressing A. E. JOHNSON CO., 10, 12 and 14 Washington Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn., or HENNING LANDAHL, Little Falls, Minn.

Rescued in Novel Manner.

An incident showing the value of quick wit in taking advantage of the situation in an emergency occurred on the coast of England, where a number of pilot boats and fishermen, having been caught in a storm, ran for the harbor, but failing to get quite into safety made for the end of a long pier which was being erected, where there was a huge iron crane. The boats were run under it and hitched on to the tackle, when five boats and fifteen men in them were lifted bodily into port.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen: — Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

DONAHUE RESOLUTION TABLED.

House Will Not Express Sympathy for Boers in South Africa.

Des Moines, March 8.—The Donahue resolution expressing sympathy for the Boers in South Africa has been killed in the house. It was tabled by a vote of 57 to 38, the democrats and those members representing German communities voting with Donahue.

The resolution was as follows:

"Resolved, That this legislature of the great agricultural state of Iowa being duly convinced express our heartfelt sympathy for the brave Boers of South Africa in their great struggle for liberty, and it is our earnest hope that their present Valley Forge will yet bring its Yorktown."

When the resolution came up yesterday Donahue moved that it be referred to the committee on federal relations. The motion was down viva voce.

An amendment was offered and passed striking out the words "this legislature" and inserting in lieu thereof, "the house of representatives."

Hawk of Jasper took the floor against the resolution. He declared that it condemned and criticised the policy of the administration at Washington. He did not think that the house had the right to pass such a measure. He declared that the real object of the resolution was covered up, but that the resolution covertly and surrepticiously aimed at the policy of the administration. He therefore moved that the resolution be laid on the table.

Nagle, of Van Buren, seconded the motion in a short address. Donahue spoke briefly against the motion, and a vote resulted as above.

MAY NOT GET INTEREST.

Question Whether Iowa Will Recover Interest on War Claim Since 1868.

Des Moines, March 7.—Adrian Sizer, the war claim auditor which the United States government sent to Iowa to look over the outstanding civil war claim against the state government, has completed his work and returned to Washington, D. C. Capt. J. S. Lothrop, who went over the claim with the war auditor, expresses the fear that the state may not receive interest since the year 1868 when the principal of the war loan was paid back to the state by the government. Should this holding be made by the war department it will cut a large slice out of the amount that the state is seeking to recover. The auditor went over all the evidence and figures most carefully, and carried the data back to Washington with him, giving out no intimation of what position he took in regard to any feature of the claim. It is hoped that something will be heard from the government in a short time in regard to the exact figures which will be recommended for allowance in the general deficiency bill. Attorney General Mullan submitted an opinion to the governor in which he holds that the civil war bond issue of $800,000 of the special session of the Eighth general assembly did not begin to draw interest until delivered to the agent of the state to negotiate. This opinion may enter into final adjudication of the claims.

FOR UNIFORM POLICY.

Hawk Introduced Resolution Along Line of Board of Control Ideas.

Des Moines, March 8.—Hawk of Jasper, has introduced a resolution in the house which has for its object the making of appropriations for the educational institutions of Iowa on a uniform basis, and the turning over of said institutions to the board of control. Head of Green, is in sympathy with the movement, and Temple of Clarke, was reported in the morning papers to be getting ready to father the idea in the house.

The resolution went over under the rules. It reads as follows:

"Whereas, the state of Iowa is annually expending large sums of money for the extension and support of the state educational institutions without having adopted any settled policy of support or any definite plan as to their relation to, or co-ordination with each other, therefore

"Be it Resolved, That it is the sense of this house that in order to secure efficiency, uniformity, harmonious cooperation and economy the state educational institutions should all be placed under one management and that some definite policy should be adopted as to the manner of their support."

Polk County Congressional Fight.

Des Moines, March 8.—On the face of the returns it appears that John A. T. Hull has a majority of the delegates to the county convention, while, on the other hand Judge Prouty has a majority of the popular vote. Prouty claims frauds in several precincts and will carry the fight to the congressional convention. He announces that he will at once resign from the bench and carry the fight into the other counties of the district.

Budd Wins the Trophy.

Des Moines, March 7.—A dispatch from Omaha announces the victory of Charles W. Budd, of this city, in the match for the Hazard trophy, valued at $500. Mr. Budd had pitted against him Russell Klein, one of the crack shots of the country, and the news of his victory is especially gratifying to Mr. Budd's great host of friends in Des Moines. The match was for live birds, and Budd killed 95 out of 100, while his opponent bagged 94.

OMNIBUS BILL IS READY

AGREED UPON BY HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE.

Measure Carries $731,577.50, Only $38,100 Less Than Recommended by Board of Control.

Des Moines, March 10.—The house committee on appropiations, after a three hours' session Saturday, recommended for passage the omnibus bill containing the appropriations for the institutions under the board of control. The committee cut down the amounts asked by the board on a small number of items and struck out a few entirely, reducing the total that was requested by $38,100. The bill as recommended for passage carried with it a total appropriation of $731,577.50 in extraordinary appropriation. This is distinct from the amount allowed by the state in per capita support.

While the appropriations committee cut down the total asked by the board by the amount named, $38,100, it also inserted in the omnibus bill one item larger than the board asked. This is for additional room and facilities for hospital purposes at the Soldiers' Home at Marshalltown. In the biennial report the board of control recommended $8,000 for a woman's hospital, but the G. A. R. committee that inspected the home, when they appeared before the committee, urged that more hospital facilities were necessary, owing to the increasing age and infirmities of the inmates, and indicated these were more imperatively demanded than a woman's hospital. To this the board of control makes no objection, as in recommending $8,000 for a woman's hospital it followed the recommendation of Commandant Horton.

The omnibus appropriation bill as recommended does not include $138,000 already appropriated by the legislature for the hospital at Cherokee. Of the total, $144,000 is for the purchase of additional land. For additional land at the Soldiers' Orphans' Home at Davenport, $25,000 is appropriated; for Glenwood, $25,000; for Mt. Pleasant, $25,000; for Independence, $39,000; for Clarinda, $30,000.

The senate committee has not yet acted on the omnibus bill. It is known Senator Garst is in favor of little cutting down of the board of control recommendations. The action of the house committee, backed up as it will probably be by the house, leaves little doubt an increased levy will have to be made, inasmuch as the board of control appropriations, as fixed by this bill, will more than consume the amount reported by the treasurer and auditor as available in the biennial period for extraordinary appropriations.

HINCHMAN'S SUPERB GIFT.

Munificent Offer to the Des Moines Baptist College.

Council Bluffs, March 8.—Joseph V. Hinchman of Glenwood has just announced a magnificent gift for the Baptist college of Des Moines. He has stated his willingness to give $40,000 to that institution if an additional $15,000 is raised. He has already given something like $50,000 to the college in years past and the present gift, he intends, shall be used for the construction of a new administration building, the $15,000 additional to be used in fitting up the building in the most approved manner. Rev. Mr. Adams, president of the college, has been in the western part of the state during the past week in the interest of the college and says there will be little trouble experienced in raising the required $15,000. Mr. Hinchman is a retired banker of Glenwood and is said to be the wealthiest man in Mills county, so that he is amply able to give of his riches for the education of the young people of the state. He still has large real estate holdings in Mills and other counties of the state, is president of a national bank at Hawarden and has large blocks of stocks in other banking institutions.

HILLARD IS FOUND GUILTY.

Supervisor Convicted of Mispapropriation of County Bridge Funds.

Council Bluffs, March 10.—The case of the state vs. Charles Hillard, a member of the Harrison county board of supervisors, which has been on trial in the district court at Logan for the past two weeks, came to a close, when the jury, after being out but a few minutes, returned a verbict of guilty as charged. This is the first of the cases that were brought against the entire board, and will probably have a very decided effect on the trial of other members which is to follow. The charge was malfeasance in office and the misappropriation of the bridge funds of the county. An argument will be made for a new trial at the session of the court today, and, failing to secure one, it is said that the case will be carried to the supreme court. The source of the trouble seems to be a fight between the cities of Logan and Missouri Valley over the location of the county's poor farm.

Held Up By Masked Men.

Webster City, March 6.—J. L. Henkel, traveling saleman for the W. H. Roehl Cigar firm of Clinton, was held up in Eagle Grove about 8:30 p. m., by two masked robbers near the Northwestern depot. They secured $125. The trains and yards were searched, but no clues obtained.

Mrs. Linhoff is Sentenced.

Mason City, March 7.—Mrs. Linhoff was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for killing Ed. Bromley, August 30, 1901, in a quarrel between Mr. and Mrs. Linhoff on one side and Mr. and Mrs. Bromley on the other.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, March 4.—Senate.—The senate resumed consideration of the Anamosa reformatory bill. It was ordered engrossed. An amendment offered by Healy replaces in the hands of the governor the full paroling power, which the bill sought to place in the hands of the board of control. Among bills passed were the following: By Hubbard, for the punishment of persons receiving stolen goods or buying them from persons under 18 years of age; giving boards of health the power to control the payment of expenses in case of quarantine. Several bills by the code commission were also passed.

House.—Stuckslager's bill to permit the unexpended Shiloh balance to be used to defray dedicating expenses was passed. The bill to increase the levy for the state university from one-tenth to one-fifth of a mill was defeated by a vote of 42 to 42. The Blanchard bill extending the provision for a 5 per cent levy in aid of the construction of railroads, to trolley and electric railways was passed. The following bills were also passed: Providing that any person found to have burglar's tools in his possession shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; providing for the admission of feeble minded women to the institution at Glenwood; changing the bushel weight of millet and Hungarian seen from 44 to 50 pounds. Cummings, Edwards and Springer were appointed a special committee to consider the Torrens land bill by Hawk.

Des Moines, March 5.—Senate.—The bill to increase the State University special tax levy from one-tenth of a mill was taken up as a special order. Senators Ball, Junkin and Crossley spoke in favor of the bill, while Porter, Trewin and Lewis made addresses in opposition to it. It went over till Thursday. The senate insurance committee voted to report out without recommendation the valued policy bill. Six of the nine members of the committee present were against the bill, but the interests which favor the measure pleaded for a chance to fight it out on the floor.

House.—The house refused to recede from its declination to concur in the senate resolution memorializing congress to pass the Hoar bill in restriction of the issuance of injunctions. A conference committee will be appointed. The house passed the collateral inheritance recodification bill with amendments which seriously affect the measure. One amendment exempts the estates under $5,000 bequeathed to brothers and sisters. Another amendment fixes the date at which interest shall begin at a date relative to the time the administrator is appointed. The house took up H. F. 20, by Warren, appropriating $50,000 to create an additional state normal school in the state institution formerly occupied as the industrial school for the blind at Knoxville. The reports of the normal school and appropriation committees recommending the bill for passage were read and adopted. Addresses were made in favor of the bill by Warren, Furry, Nagle and Hawk, while Clarke, Stratton, Pipher and Head opposed it. The bill was defeated 26 to 62. Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson visited the legislature and addressed the house.

Des Moines, March 6.—Senate.—The State University tax bill came up and an amendment by Craig requiring the expenditure of the money raised by the proposed fifth mill tax for the State University under direction for the state board of control, was defeated. Another by Trewin, striking out the provision giving the regents the right to buy equipment, was adopted. Senator Trewin offered another amendment providing that the general assembly and not the board of regents should decide what buildings shall be erected out of the proceeds of the tax. Senators Ball, Healy, Lister, Garst and Harriman made addresses in opposition to the amendment, and Brooks, Molesberry and Trewin made addresses favoring it. A vote was not reached.

House.—Representative Timothy Doane of O'Brien county introduced a resolution expressing sympathy with the Boers in their struggle against Great Britain's aggressive oppression. The house committee on cities reported for indefinite postponement the Sweeney bill to authorize cities to own and operate telephone lines and voted to report for passage the bill giving cities the power to regulate the rates of telephone companies. Among bills passed were the following: By Lyman, prescribing a penalty of $100 or thirty days in jail for jumping on and off trains, while in motion; by Hughes, providing that surety companies may give bond for holders of mulct licenses; by Barker, providing for the refund to administrators and executors any surplus they have paid to the treasurer of state as collateral inheritance tax in excess of that legally due; by Keagy, providing that in counties containing a township of 35,000 inhabitants and having seven supervisors, the county shall be divided into six supervisor districts, the township of 35,000 to be one district and have two supervisors.

Des Moines, March 7.—Senate.—The senate passed the bills granting a one-fifth of a mill tax to the State University and the State Agricultural college Friday. The vote on the university tax was 30 for 15 against. There were but seven votes against the agricultural college appropriation. The senate put over consideration of the railway tax statute until Tuesday morning. The vote was 29 to 18. It is taken as indication of the attitude of the senate with respect to the measure which suits neither the conservatives nor the radicals.

House.—The house killed the Boer sympathy resolution and the resolution requesting the Iowa delegation to support certain swamp land legislation in the United States congress. A proposition for the creation of a board of control for the state educational institutions was introduced. Representatives of the St. Louis exposition appeared before the Iowa house Friday and addressed the members in the interests of a large Iowa exhibit at the world's fair.

Des Moines, March 8.—The senate passed a resolution memorializng congress to pass an act strengthening the interstate commerce commission. There was no opposition. The bill creating a fire and ponce commission to govern these departments on a nonpartisan basis in Des Moines was also passed. Crawford's bill taking the appointment of water works trustees in cities of the first class out of the hands of the judiciary and placing it in the hands of the mayor was passed This bill applies to the cities of Dubuque and Sioux City, and is passed as a result of the recent supreme court decision holding the old law unconstitutional. Blanchard's bill providing for the condemnation of a fish way and its erection in the Bonaparte dam was passed. It was amended so as to provide for the governor's approval of the award agreed upon with Meek Bros., owners of the dam, in the condemnation proceedings before the contract of the fish way is binding on the state. Courtright's bill providing for a uniform bond for all public officers was passed. The bill by Ball, giving the City of Iowa City authority to construct a dam across the Iowa river near the State University and to convert the tract of land just across the river from the university into a park, passed without opposition. Adjourned till Tuesday.

House.—The house passed a large number of bills of minor importance. Adjourned till Monday.

AMERICAN PLAN IS COPIED

REORGANIZATION OF BRITISH ARMY SYSTEM.

Pay of Volunteers Increased Until They Are Better Off Than Agricultural Laborers.

London, March 10.—The new army regulations proposed by the war secretary, Mr. Broderick, providing for increased pay and other reforms which have created so much comment appear to have been directly copied from the United States. Major Arthur Lee, M. P., formerly British military attache at Washington, said to a representative of the Associated Press:

"At last we have taken out a leaf from your excellent book, though I do not believe we have gone quite so far in that direction as we might, or hope we may. Under Mr. Broderick's proposed changes, a private in the British infantry now receives almost as much as a private in the United States army. With this change which I advocate we hope to get a complement of recruits similar to those secured in America. Under the old pay we were gradually lowering the physical standard, yet still finding it hard to get men, while our desertion percentage was increasing at a rate which showed there was something radically wrong with the system. The American army was the only other voluntarily enlisted body in the world with which we could make serviceable comparisons, the continental armies, owing to conscription and other causes, being perfectly worthless as examples. A year ago Mr. Broderick pooh-poohed the idea of copying the United States. Now he has changed his mind and has done what the majority of the members of the house, regardless of party, believe to be the very best thing that could have happened to the army since Mr. Cardwell (in 1872) effected his sweeping reforms. For the first time 'Tommy,' with everything found and higher pay, will be in a better position than his agricultural brother, and from that class we ought now to get the best instead of the worst. Yes, it may hurt the agricultural interest, or what is left of it in England, but I do not believe that this damage will be as serious as the evils which the change will correct. Not only is it interesting to note the influence of the American system in these sweeping changes, but they will have a tremendous negative importance. Last year the government clearly indicated its fears that it might have to resort to conscription. The last move banishes the probability of this, and I believe we are willing to go farther, and by liberal finance build up the standard of the army. The increase in pay means an additional annual cost of about $10,000,000, but I maintain that it will be a direct saving of money, for the better class of men secured means fewer men in the hospitals and prisons, as well as obviating other forms of wastage, and will quickly make up for the additional outlay. Some day, perhaps, we may be able to adopt the sensible plan of the United States of paying the enlisted men of all arms at the same rate. But traditions die hard."

Another Schley Resolution.

Washington, March 10.—Representative Pearre introduced a resolution extending the thanks of congress to Admiral Schley for his services in the battle of Santiago July 3, 1898. He presented also a joint resolution of the Maryland general assembly requesting the senators and representatives to use their utmost endeavors to secure such legislation.

"No; I have business that requires my attention, and I am anxious to be at it. Don't looked worried, little friend; God bless you, I haven't fotgotten my promise. This last act of the drama blots the whole thing out of my life. Fedora now belongs to another, and under no conditions could ever again be the queen of my heart. I have cast her out as unworthy, and closed the doors forever—hermetically sealed them, I trust. I could not if I tried tell you how much good you have done me. When I go hence—for I shall soon leave England behind me—I will carry the remembrance of your friendship with me to the end. Mazette, good-night, and heaven bless you, child!"

He went straight home to his attic studio. One set purpose governed his every move now, and this to put Fedora, fair and false, out of his mind forever.

Since through a woman's hand this night had witnessed the sacrifice of his hopes, his aims, it might as well be complete.

In this bitter spirit he entered the humble attic that served him as a studio, while a cot in a corner granted him a bed.

Lighting a lamp, he first of all built a little fire upon the hearth, for, strange to say, the upper room was possessed of a fireplace.

It was not because the night was cool that he did this, but with quite another definite object in view.

Finally he walked over to the easel and snatched away the cloth that covered it.

Long and earnestly Overton surveyed the magical work of his hands—so perfect had been the witchery that guided his love-inspired brush that the very breath of life seemed to have been infused into the canvas, and one could almost expect Fedora to step down from the easel, creature of flesh and blood, as Galatea, of sculptor fame, had done of old.

At length the artist heaved a heavy sigh.

It required all the determination of his nature to carry out the desperate resolve he had made, but, though it seemed like slaying his love anew, he did not falter.Human eyes should never again behold this work of his genius—conceived in adoration, and worked out through the days when her love hung over him like a benison, it must cease to exist on this black night when the last spark of his affection was extinguished and the bonds uniting him to the happy past were severed forever.

He took up his pallette knife and approached the canvas—his hand was firm, though his face appeared very pallid in the flickering light.

Suddenly, as the rush of emotion became too great to be longer withstood, he dashed the blade through the canvas, splitting it from top to bottom most ruthlessly.

The first stroke seemed to loosen the passion which had been so long restrained, and with savage, almost brutal emphasis, he cut and slashed furiously right and left, up and down.

Thus in a very brief space of time all that represented his many months of weary yet loving labor, into which he had put his very life, so to speak, was a wooden frame from which dangled dozens of streamers.

The masterpiece was as utterly destroyed as his own ambition.

Not content, he ground the frame into pieces under his heel and cast the wreck upon the fire that had been purposely started upon the hearth to receive it.

"Burn," he said, bitterly, as the flames greedily seized upon the fragments; "burn out as my love has done, leaving nothing but bitetr, cold ashes. Henceforth I live but to seek power and wealth. The past shall be a ghastly blank—the future I will build by the power of brain and brawn, until the hour comes for my revenge. Something tells me it will sooner or later reach me—that to him who waits and works everything is given. And now to begin to live a new existence."

Two days later a sailing vessel left London bound for the old Spanish Main, and among those who shipped before the mast, thanks to his early yachting training, was Jack Overton, gone to follow the beckoning finger of fortune.

CHAPTER IX.

In the Land of Revolution.

San Jose, the capital of that sturdy little republic of Central America which has through its sudden revolutions made Gautarica famous in history—San Jose was in its periodical state of eruption.

Of course, a revolution was in progress. There was probably no very heavy loss of life during each actual upheaval, though a few men might be accidentally killed—the Gautaricans, like all people of mixed blood, being partly Spanish and Indian halfbreeds, love spectacular display, and while these battles always create a great racket, there was little blood actually split, the party that was outnumbered usually yielding up the palm and retiring to recuperate, while the victors, instead of following up the advantage, calmly settled down to enjoy the fruits of their labor, amid much merriment and feasting.

There was one man in San Jose on this particular day, who, while a noncombatant, had resolved to see the whole business as far as possible. So Jack Overton sallied forth, after arming himself and endeavored to gain an idea as to how much progress the revolution was making.

He found the soldiers of Roblado, the president, holding their own well.

After moving around from one quarter to another and seeing that the whole affair was on the guerilla order, Overton was forced to sit down and laugh at the ludicrous aspect of the "battle" by means of which the fate of a republic was to be settled.

Evidently Montejo had overrated the strength of his backing, for the wearers of the green cockade were outclassed, and already several of their number had been stretched hors de combat.

There was something in the clamor and the occasional whistle of a bullet over his head that just suited Overton's present mood.

He was even rash on several occasions, and had narrow escapes, but the little cherub that sat up aloft watching over his fortunes seemed to exercise those would-be fatal bullets so that they always just fell a little short and in matetrs of this sort a miss is considered as good as a mile.

The day was near its end, and plainly the laurels of victory rested with the followers of the dynasty already entrenched in authority—their shouts had been more vociferous than the others, and in all probability they had fired two shots against one from the revolutionists. This inspired them with new confidence, and the red cockade began to grow bolder, even advancing, as though determined to chase their enemies out of town ere the sun dropped into the western sea, over whose bosom he hung like a globe of fire.

It was about this time when Montejo and his sympathizers were making their last stand while awaiting the friendly shades of night to cover their hasty retreat, that Overton found himself, somewhat unexpectedly to be sure, drawn into the affair at issue.

It chanced that in their eagerness to chase the invaders out beyond the town limits ere dusk set in—by mutual consent this feature seemed to be the manner of deciding which side had won—the section of government forces led by General Barrajo rather overdid the matter.

At any rate the first, last and only hand-to-hand conflict of the day occurred under Jack's own eyes, when a detachment of the green cockades suddenly appearing, surrounded the valorous general and demanded his surrender.

Although Barrajo was a most fierce-looking type of a Central American general, with his mustache curled up like two simitars, and his left breast covered with gorgous medals and decorations, Jack had been wont to look upon him pretty much in the light of a modern Bombastes Furioso, and could hardly believe there was anything of a game spirit back of this assumed ferocity.

To his surprise and delight the general proved quite equal to the occasion.

He faced his enemies, waving his sword like a knight of old, and, launching forth a volley of Spanish expletives that should have paralyzed their craven hearts, but failed to do so.

Then came the crash of battle.

The general's lone companion was spitted upon a sword after bringing down a couple of the enemy, and Barrajo himself was sorely pressed by those who, recognizing in him the real head and brains of the present dynasty, were grimly determined to get rid of him, so that the next revolution might prove a success.

It was cut and thrust, slash and parry, and machete against sword.

As they stood three to one, with little hope of the general's followers reaching the scene in time to take a hand in the tragic affair, it began to look as though Barrajo had reached the end of his rope, like all men do sooner or later, with weapons in their hands, in Central America.

Jack's love of fair play, not to speak of his friendship for the general, urged him to shy his castor into the ring.

He little dreamed how fortune was dealing out the cards to him just then, and what a marvelous "jack pot" he would eventually sweep in with the results of this day's good work.

Having resolved to lend Barrajo a helping hand, he dashed forward with his revolver, aiming to wound rather than slay.

Thus beset in the rear, and threatened with the whirling blade of the soldier in front, the three wearers of the green cockade became utterly demoralized, and in a panic fled, two of them bearing wounds to remind them of the day's doings.

When Jack rushed up to congratulate the general on his victor, the noble Gautarican, who had counted himself as good as a dead man, threw both arms around his deliverer and fell upon his breast, swearing in purest Castilian that his life henceforth belonged to the valiant American, and that he would lie awake nights seeking to repay the great debt he owed him.

The revolution having ended at sunset, and the defeated invaders of Gautarican territory being on the run for friendly hiding places upon neighboring soil, the capital was given over to a spasm of mad rejoicing, and every one, man, woman and child, seemed to believe it depended wholly upon their individual efforts to make the affair a success.

This aspect of the Central American character struck Overton even more forcibly than the peculiar tactics of the day's battle. As an artist he could appreciate anything that bordered upon the bizarre and remarkable, and hence quickly determined to accept the warm invitation of his friend, General Barrajo, to visit the public hall, in order to see still more of the singular habits and customs of this hot-blooded people, with whom he had, at least for the time being, cast his fortunes.

There are times in the lives of all men when they appear to be mere creatures of circumstances, buffeted upon a sea of chance, and yet, upon looking back, one can say that all these events were not links in a chain that bour his fortunes, and the absence of any one would mean the wreck of his ship.

Overton believed—indeed, he often swore the fact over and over again to himself—that his heart was dead so far as the fair sex was concerned—be that as it might, it forced no barrier to the instinct that bade him as an artist look a second and a third time at the queen of the dance, about whom the attention of the multitude seemed to breathlessly center.

She was a magnificent creature, this daughter of the south, of graceful mien and dazzling loveliness, formed in the most voluptuous mold of Iberian beauty, whose complexion showed every violet vein through its veil of luscious brown. Her hair was "such as Athene herself might have envied" for tint, and mass, and ripple. Her eyes blazed like diamonds from a cavern, while her lips pouted of themselves, by habit, or nature, into a perpetual kiss. The excitement of the dance had called the carmine into her cheeks until it put to blush the crimson flowers of the grenadine with which her black hair was wreathed. Her eyes blazed with a fire bred of the fierce measures and the ardent passions of the tropics.

More than once her dusky orbs met the admiring glance of the artist, and he could see the invitation extended in the impassioned look she gave him, but each time he shook his head and smiled.

As the dance went on, the crowd about the estrada resolved itself into two factions, each led by a richly dressed young patrician, both of whom were evidently aspirants for the hand of the bewitching Circe. The women dancing upon the estrada chattered among themselves evidently jealous of the attention paid to Dona Juanita, the beautiful one, who, proud and palpitating, clearly felt the power which made her the beauty queen of the fiesta. The rival lovers, from their places on opposite sides of the estrada, scowled ominously, and spoke slightingly of each other's bravery and courage. Thei radherents caught up the refrain until taunts and jeers were freely bandied between them. It was apparent that the storm was about to burst, when suddenly the music stopped and there came a cry of:

"Chammara y Machete!" (Sash and sword.)

It soon came.

Big Order for Watches.

The largest single order ever given for watches was received by an American manufacturer from a London firm, last year, the former agreeing to deliver to his customer 2,000,000 timepieces within twelve months.

The following letter was received by a teacher in a Texas public school: "Sir: Will you in the future give my son easier somes to do at nites? This is what he's brought hoam two or three nites back: 'If fore gallins of beer will fill thirty to pint bottles, how many pints and half bottles will nine gallins of beer fil?' Well, we tried and could make nothin' of it at all, and my boy cried and laughed and sed he didn't dare to go back in the mornin' without doin' it. So I had to go and buy a nine gallin keg of beer, which I could ill afford to do, and then we went and borrowed a lot of wine and brandy bottles. We filled them, and my boy put the number down for an answer. I don't know whether it is right or not as we spilt some while doin' it. P. S.—Please let the next be water, as I am not able to buy more beer."

A jolly gentleman in Eaton, O., while on a spree, gave expression to his hilarity by breaking plate glass windows valued at $5,000. His only comfort in jail is in the perusal of a letter from the glass trust thanking him for his exploit, with the hope that when he emerges from imprisonment he will continue his antics.

Kangaroo farming is an important industry in Australia. The hides are valuable, and the tendons extremely fine; indeed, they are the best thing known to surgeons for sewing up wounds, and especially for holding broken bones together, being much finer and tougher than catgut.

LITTLE FALLS.

Eastern capitalists connected with the Westinghouse Electric Company lately bought the splendid Water Power at Little Falls, Minn., and are now arranging to build trolley lines east and west to tap the adjoining country. The balance of the water power, transformed into electricity, will be utilized for large mills and factories in Little Falls, and for some time to come the eyes of the whole country will be turned towards this city because of the nature and vastness of these improvements.

We own the best business property in the heart of the city, and residence lots near the mills and factories or depot and business district, farm lands in 40, 80 and 160-acre pieces, near the new trolley lines, and 2½, 5 and 10 acre garden tracts inside and adjoining the city limits. This unplatted property will shortly be reached by the city street car system, and could at any time with profit be sub-divided into city lots and blocks.

More money will be made in Little Falls real estate during the next years than in any other conservative and legitimate speculation. We acquired our holdings for little money years ago, before the Water Power was improved, and before the paper mill, flour mills and factories were built and when the Weyerhauser syndicate had not yet located here, at a time when the recent developments above referred to could not possibly be foreseen, and for this reason we can well afford to give others a chance. You can come in on the ground floor by at once addressing A. E. JOHNSON Co., 10, 12 and 14 Washington Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn., or HENNING LANDAHL, Little Falls, Minn.

Some experts have little ability and much confidence.

The demand for sincerity is far in excess of the visiole supply.

Disorders of the Kidneys and Bladder cause Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Gravel, Pain in the Back, Bladder Disorders, difficult or too frequent passing of water, Dropsy, etc. For these diseases a Positive Specific Cure is found in a new botanical discovery, the wonderful Kava-Kava Shrub, called by botanists the piper methysticum, from the Ganges River, East India. It has the extraordinary record of 1,200 hospital cures in 30 days. It acts directly on the Kidneys, and cures by draining out of the Blood the poisonous Uric Acid, Lithates, etc., which cause the disease.

James Thomas, Esq., of the Board of Review Bureau of Pensions, Washington, D. C., was cured after many physicians failed and he had given up all hope of recovery. Nathaniel Anderson, Esq., of Greenwood, S. C., writes: Was a sufferer of Kidney and Bladder troubles, which caused two hemorrhages of the Kidneys; had to urinate every few minutes; physicians told him his case was incurable, but was completely cured by Alkavis. Alvin D. Lane, Auburn, Me., writes: Was cured of Rheumatism, which was so severe as to cause him to use crutches. Hundreds of similar testimonials can be produced if desired. Many ladies, including Miss Viola Dearing, Petersburg, Ind., Mrs. E. R. Dinsmore, South Deerfield, Mass., also testify as to its wonderful curative powers in Kidney diseases and other disorders peculiar to women.

That you may judge of the value of this Great Discovery for yourself, we will send you one Large Case by mail Free, only asking that when cured yourself you will recommend it to others. It is a Sure Specific and can not fail. Address, The Church Kidney Cure Company; No. 406 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

Des Moines, March 8, 1902.

The rapidity with which the bill changing the date of assessing railway and express companies from March until July passed both houses of the legislature, is taken as an indication that the members of the legislature are in favor of giving the executive council all the opportunity possible to make equitable assessments. The council will now have the returns from the assessment of real estate before it in making the railway assessment, whereas in the past it has always been compelled to make estimates from the assessment of the previous year. Both Governor Shaw and Governor Cummins earnestly recommended the passage of such a law, and its reasonableness was appreciated by every member of the legislature, as there was not a vote against it in either house. Only one small question arose in the consideration of the bill, and that was relative to the working out of the road tax. It was thought for a time that the road tax had to be worked out by September 1, but upon closer examination it was found that the date was November 1. This gives ample time for the railroads to work out their road tax after the assessment is made, if they desire.

Secretary Davison of the executive council has received the report of the Chicago, St. Paul & Omaha road, allied with the Northwestern system. It is the first of the roads to make a complete report on the list of supplemental questions propounded by the executive council on the different classes of gross earnings and other matters. All the formalities prerequisite to the enactment of the laws extending to the second Monday in July the time for fixing the railway and express assessment have been complied with. The measures have been published and are now laws.

The auditor of the state has made the annual apportionment of the interest on the school fund, and it has been certified to county auditors. With the statement there has been sent an order on each county treasurer to make the necessary transfer of the excess or deficiency. If there is an excess it will be transferred to the state revenues, and if there is a deficiency there will be a transfer from the state revenue to the school fund interest account sufficient to make it good. The total of the school fund is $4,752,955.21. The apportionment of the interest on this among the 735,159 childern shown to be of school age by the school census allows each child 14 and 56-100 cents, slightly less than the amount of last year, owing to the reduction in the interest rate. Winnebago county, according to the figures of the auditor, had the largest amount of the school fund on hand, a total of $207,000. Scott and Clinton had none. Polk county held $27,564.08. A number of the large counties heid but little, Linn county, for instance, having but $815.

Governor Cummins has signed the bill making an appropriation of $7,000 for the fumigation of the reservation of the Tama tribe and for the replacement of tepees and other property that will have to be burned in order to destroy the small pox germs. In addition to this, the governor sent a message to W. A. Jones of Washington, commissioner of Indian affairs, stating the action taken by the Iowa authorities.

The woman suffragists are not going to give up their efforts to secure the passage of the joint resolution by the house. Mrs. Nelson, state secretary of the Iowa Equal Suffrage association, when asked about the matter, said: "We intend to keep right on working, just as if the house committee on constitutional amendments had reported the resolution favorably, and, although the action of this committee was not altogether pleasing or favorable to us, we do not believe that it has wholly prejudiced the house against our cause. In fact, a good many members have told us that they disapproved of the action of the committee, and, while they are opposed to suffrage, they do not favor a few men trying to control the situation. With these parties we believe the action of the committee has helped us rather than hurt us. It is not usual for a committee in the house to so unceremoniously dispose of a message from the senate. We believe that we still stand a show of getting the resolution through the house this session."

The house committee on industrial schools decided to recommend for passage the Warren bil, giving the governor power to parole inmates of industrial schools.

The house committee on suppression of intemperance is drafting a substitute for the Lyman bill, limiting mulct petitions of consent to five years. This bill will be recommended for passage as soon as it is completed and will no doubt create considerable discussion if it ever actually comes before the house.

H. F. 37, by Furry, providing for the enforcement of bonds given by saloon keepers, and providing for perpetual injunctions for maintaining a nuisance, was recommended for passage.

The senate committee on judiciary decided to recommend for passage the Harper bill, to prevent the sale of stocks of goods in fraud of creditors. The bill making it a crime to sell property on which there is a landlord's lien, without the written consent of the landlord, was also recommended for passage.

Libraries of the World.

The "Anthological Society" says that Europe contains three great libraries First, the Bibliotheque Nationale of Paris, with three million printed books; second, the British Museum, containing over two million literary works; third, the German National Library, with 1,500,000 volumes and over 25,000 manuscripts, many of priceless value. Taken together, and including the library of Congress at Washington they contain practically all the printed and written literature which exists in the world to-day.

Aged Historian Retires.

Edmund Idle, the oldest librarian in England, who has been connected with Messrs. Mudie's establishment for more than half a century, has retired. Mr Idle, whose singular surname was delightfully inappropriate, joined the staff of the late Charles Mudie soon after he founded his famous library. He was also closely associated for thirty years with the religious and philanthropic work of Dr. Guinness Rogers at Clapham.

The Largest Gold Coin.

The largest gold coin now in circulation is the gold ingot or "loof" of Annam, a French colony in Eastern Asia. It is a flat round gold piece, and on it is written in Indian ink its value, which is about $325. The next sized coin to this valuable but extremely awkward one is the "obang" of Japan, which is worth about $50, and next comes the "benda" of Ashantee, which represents a value of about $45.

The Process Was Easy.

She—"I often wonder how you manage to dash off those exquisite little poems of yours. And what a lot of money you must make." The Poet—"Oh, it's very easy. I sit down, say in January, and think until about August or September. Then in November or December when the poem is completed I sell it for $5, or sometimes as high as $10."—Life.

How Mosquitoes Live.

The great majority of mosquitoes never taste either human blood or that of any animal, not having the opportunity. They live upon vegetable juices and decomposing animal and vegetable matter, found in the localities where they are most numerous and thus perform a valuable service as nature's scavengers.

Has Liking for Black.

Hon. Lilah Constance Cavendish, the 17-year-old daughter of Lord Chesham is the owner and manager of a black farm near her father's estate, in Buckinghamshire. Here she keeps black cattle, black horses, black sheep goats, black dog, black cat, black rabbitt—black everything that is to be seen on a farm.

An Old Southern Town.

Charleston, S. C., has a population of 55,000. It is one of the oldest cities in the United States, the first settlement having been made 200 years ago by English colonists. One hundred years ago Charleston's population was 18,000, exceeded only by Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore and Boston.

Marble Bust of Victoria.

A marble bust of the late Queen Victoria has been discovered built up in a wall at Windsor Castle, where, according to a long-lived tradition among the castle servants, it was hidden away by order of the late queen herself soon after the death of the prince consort.

New Use for Phonograph.

It is suggested that by placing phonographs at intervals of say 100 miles in long-distance telephone lines much smaller, and therefore much cheaper, wire can be used. The phonograph receives and transmits the sound waves without loss to their force.

A Warm Retort.

After a church conference, held a few weeks ago, two brother ministers had, says the Outlook, a friendly tilt regarding the meaning of a certain passage in one of Shakespeare's plays They could not come to an understanding, and one of them remarked jokingly: "Oh, well, brother, I will ask Shakespeare when I meet him in heaven." "But supposing Shakespeare did not go to heaven?" retorted the other. "Then you can ask him about it," was the quick reply.

Literal, Quite So.

An attorney named Else, rather diminutive in stature, and not particularly respectable in his character, once met Joseph Jekyll, the noted English wit and solicitor-general. "Sir," said he, "I hear you have called me a petti fogging scoundred! Have you done so sir?" "Sir," said Jekyll, with a look of contempt, "I never said you were a pettifogger or a scoundrel, but I said you were 'little Else.'"

Italy Honors Japanese Statesman.

The bestowal by the Italian government upon Marquis Ita of the collar of the Order of the Anunziata caused a sensation in official diplomatic circles since the Anunziata, which is the highest Italian decoration, has hitherto been reserved for European princes and statesmen of the highest rank and carries the honorary rank of cousin to the head of the house of Savoy.

Era of the Maccabees.

The "Era of the Maccabees" began B C. 166, when Judas Maccabaeus assumed the leadership of the Jews who had determined to throw off the yoke of Antiochus Epiphanes. The revolt was successful, and the Asmonean kings ruled Judea until its conquest by the Romans. The Jews styled the Maccabees era the "Era of Kings."

Friend of the Veterans.

The Rev Dr. Henry Hopkins, the newly-elected president of Williams college, was appointed a field chaplain by President Lincoln before that office was created by law, and since the war he has been instrumental in securing considerable legislation for national soldiers' cemeteries.

New Table Decorations.

The newest arrangement in flowers especially for table decoration, is a la Japonais; that is, in branches or sprigs singly. Several small vases, with these single stems of blossoms are placed at judicious intervals all over a dining table, instead of in a big cluster in the center.

Warning to Officeholders.

Concerning the presents Prince Henry will make to some fifty persons in this country, the New York Herald points out that the acceptance of such gifts by public office-holders without the consent of congress is explicitly forbidden by the constitution.

Writing of "David Copperfield."

Dickens says in the introduction to "David Copperfield" that he spent two years in the composition of that novel. He did not usually require so long a time, many of his novels being finished in less than a year, and most of his shorter stories in a few days.

Of Interest to Druggists.

A druggist is held in a recent decision in Pennsylvania not to be guilty of negligence in selling to customers proprietary medicines in the packages and under the label of the proprietor or patentee without making an analysis of the contents.

Historian to Have Monument.

The German emperor has consented to the erection of a statue in front of the Berlin university to the late Prof. Von Trietschke, the historian, who by his indiscriminating admirers has been called the "Macaulay of Germany."

Holland Artist Honored.

Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, who celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday the other day, is the third artist from Holland to be honored by an English knighthood, the others being Rubens and Van Dyck.

Gross Exaggeration.

The Goodell Globe last week devoted a whole column of its valuable(?) space to Klemme and smallpox, and to say the least, the report was exaggerated and contorted in such a manner that the facts were nearly all twisted out. The Globe first speaks of the eruptive disease which has been prevalent in our town. and then emits the following:

Nearly two weeks ago the health physician of Goodell suggested to some of the Klemme people that some measures should be taken to prevent the wholesale spreading of the epidemic, for up to this time, improbable as it may seem, not the most simple precautionary measures had been adopted. The suggestion was not only disregarded but scornfully rejected.

The Globe does very well to put in the word "people" in the above paragraph, although we are unable to find the "people" to whom the Goodell physician made the suggestion.

The Goodell physician seen a case of this eruptive disease in Klemme two or three weeks ago. Shortly afterwards cards were gotten out quarantining Goodell against Klemme, and on these cards it was stated that Klemme had an eruptive disease that had been "pronounced smallpox," while at that time it had not been pronounced smallpox unless the Goodell physician himself pronounced it thus. If he found a case of smallpox here, why didn't he report it to the Klemme authorities, and why did he afterwards write to certain parties here to the effect that he did not wish to be understood as calling this disease smallpox?

We do not intend to devote any further time or space to the discussion of this subject with the Globe genius, or whoever it was who so ably(?) wrote us up last week.

If the Goodell killer neglected Klemme, surely the killer of quibblers, exaggerators, prevaricators, etc. missed a few in Goodell.

J. J. Suckow has resigned his position as principal of the Klemme school to accept a position in E. L. Schaub's store. F. S. Gawe, we believe, from Hutchins, has been elected as principal.

While Klemme has its cases of smallpox, she is not alone. Garner has several cases. The Goodell Globe says their school down there has been closed, so we infer that they may have a few cases.

At the school election Monday 60 votes were cast. Wm. Becker was elected treasurer for the term of two years to succeed himself, and S. B. Day was elected director for term of three years to succeed H. E. Pietzke.

We wish to take this opportunity to thank our many friends and patrons for their liberal patronage during the years we have been in business in Klemme. We have always tried to do business on honest business principles. New members will continue the business under the old firm name. # CONGRESS.

Washington, March 4.—Senate.—The ship subsidy bill was further discussed in the senate today by Frye. His remarks were directed principally to the republican senators, and he gave further expression to his views that the subsidy bill was a logical response to the demands and principles of the republican party and that in its preparation he had obviated the objections entertained by senators friendly to the measure. No other senators desiring to speak today, the bill was laid aside and a number of bills of minor importance were passed. When the senate convened the credentials of Allison and Dolliver, both of Iowa, were presented to the senate. The latter's credentials were for a term of six years, beginning March 4, 1901. In response to an inquiry the president pro tem, Frye, announced that it would be necessary for Dolliver again to take the oath of office. Allison's present term will not expire until March 4, 1903. He entered the senate on March 4, 1876, and has been a member of the body continuously since that time. The new term for which he has been elected will extend for six years, from March 4, 1903. Allison escorted his colleague to the desk of the president pro tem, where the oath was administered by Frye.

House.—The house spent the day in the discussion of the rural free delivery service bill and to place the carriers under the contract system. No vote was reached, and it is doubtful whether one will be had tomorrow, as the list of speakers is still large. The fate of the bill is in doubt, although the impression prevailing is that it will be defeated. The speakers today were Smith of Kentucky, Gardner of New Jersey, and Williams of Mississippi, in favor of, and Landis of Indiana, Maddox of Georgia and Hill of Connecticut against the measure. Before the debate began the conference report on the Philippine tariff bill was adopted. The vote was on party lines, except that McCall of Massachusetts, Littlefield of Maine, and Heatwole of Minnesota, voted with the democrats against adopting the report.

Washington, March 5.—Senate.—It appears likely now that the senate will reach a vote on the pending shipping bill one week from next Monday. When Frye, in charge of the measure, endeavored today to secure an agreement for the time of taking a vote, that date was mentioned as being satisfactory to the minority members of the commerce committee. Clay, of Georgia, addressed the senate today in opposition to the bill, and had not concluded when the senate adjourned. He made a forceful and interesting argument, which was given careful attention by his colleagues. Early in the session Frye, in charge of the pending shipping bill, obtained an agreement that the senate should vote on the measure and all pending amendments at 3 p. m. Monday, March 17, that time being entirely satisfactory to those opposed to the bill.

Before consideration of the shipping bill was resumed, an extended debate occurred on the measure providing for the protection of the president of the United States. Bacon, of Georgia, took the ground that in its present shape the bill was an invasion of the jurisdiction of the states and that it ought to be amended radically. Patterson, of Colorado, while he agreed with the general propositions of the bill, thought that it ought not to pass in its present form. No action on the bill was taken.

House.—The house devoted another day to debate on the bill to classify the rural free delivery service and to place the carriers under contract. Little interest was manifested in the discussion.

Washington, March 7.—Senate.—On account of the indisposition of Vest, of Missouri, and Mallory, of Florida who expected to speak today on the pending ship subsidy bill, that measure was not considered by the senate today. The diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was passed, and then the senate took up the measure for the protection of the president of the United States. Bacon, of Georgia, continued his speech, begun yesterday, in opposition to the bill, making an extended constitutional argument against it. The senate agreed to make the bill unfinished business at the conclusion of consideration of the ship subsidy bill. Soon after the senate convened a joint resolution authorizing the president to invite the government of Canada to join in the formation of an international commission to examine and report on the diversion of the waters that are the boundaries of the two countries was reported favorably from the committee on commerce. Hoar, of Massachusetts, urged that the measure ought to be considered by the foreign relations committee, as it opened "a very important and a very delicate question,' involving diplomatic procedure. On his motion it was referred the committee on foreign relations.

House.—The bill to classify the rural free delivery service and to place the carriers under the contract system held the floor in the house today. By an amicable arrangement general debate will be concluded tomorrow and the bill will be considered under the five minute rule Monday. Bills were passed as follows: To extend the time for the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi river at Burlington Ia.; to ratify the act of the legislative assembly of Arizona providing for an exhibit at the St. Louis exposition; to print 99,000 copies of the special report on the diseases of cattle and 200 copies of the report on the diseases of the horse, two-thirds for the use of the house and one-third for the use of the senate.

Washington, March 8.—House.—The house today closed the general debate upon the bill to classify the rural free delivery service and place the carriers under the contract system. It is expected the vote will be taken on Monday.

CATTLE FEEDING EXPERIMENT.

Stock Foods and Bye Products of Corn, Etc., Will Be Tested.

Ames, March 10.—In response to the many hundred inquiries received by the animal husbandry department of the Iowa experiment station relative to the feeding value of stock foods and bye products of corn, flaxseed and cottonseed for cattle feeding purposes, Prof. W. J. Kennedy, through the cooperation of Mr. Albert E. Cook of Odebolt has inauguarted an experiment which should produce results of great value to cattle feeders all over the country. The work is being conducted on a scale that should warrant reliable results. Eleven lots of twenty head each are on feed. A uniform bunch of hogs is following each lot. The steers are from 2½ to 3 years of age, and are high grade Shorthorns, Hereford and Angus, purchased by Mr. Cook in Western Nebraska. Hay and straw will be used for roughage and crushed snapped corn, to be followed by corncob meal, will form the corn part of the grain ration.

Lot 1 is being fed crushed corn and cob and roughage.

Lot 2, crushed corn and cob, oil meal and roughage.

Lot 3, crushed corn and cob, cottonseed meal and roughage.

Lot 4, crushed corn and cob, gluten meal and roughage.

Lot 5, crushed corn and cob, Buffalo gluten feed and roughage.

Lot 6, crushed corn and cob germ oil meal and roughage.

Lot 7, crushed corn and cob, dried blood and roughage.

Lot 8, crushed corn and cob, Iowa stock food and roughage.

Lot 9, crushed corn and cob, standard stock food and roughage.

Lot 10, crushed corn and cob, international stock food and roughage.

Lot 11, crushed corn and cob and roughage; this lot to be grazed on a good blue grass pasture as soon as grass season arrives; to be fed in comparison with lot 1, which will be fed dry feed for roughage.

The feeding period will be of five or six months' duration. F. R. Marshall, assistant in animal husbandry, selected the cattle out of a bunch of 700 and made the final division. Mr. B. J. Kinzer, of the department of animal husbandry, will do the feeding. The results of this experiment will be published in a bulletin about the first of September next. This experiment should furnish some valuable data in regard to the effect of cottonseed meal, when fed to cattle in moderate quantities, on the hogs which follow the cattle.

AT WISCONSIN'S METROPOLIS.

Prince Henry Greeted by Many Former German Subjects.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 5.—Milwaukee was host to Prince Henry of Prussia for six hours last evening and gave him a reception that was highly enthusiastic and an entertainment that was unique. His special train came at 4 o'clock, and at 10 was away again on the long run to Niagara Falls and New England. The intervening time was all given over to the reception and entertainment of the royal visitor. It began with a drive through business and residence districts in review before a crowd that numbered 200,000. Then there was a public reception, at which Governor LaFollette and Mayor Rose voiced the official welcomes, and the united singing societies raised their voices in mighty chorus. There was also a splendid illumination and a thrilling night run of the Milwaukee fire department. Later there was a banquet, at which the prince met the leading citizens of the city and state.

Church news and gambling terms are curiously commingled in the following item, which appears in the religious column of a paper in Hutchinson, Kan.: "The Baptist church at Leoti will lose its pastor because another church has raised the ante. The Leoti people refuse to call the raise, and will stay out and draw another pastor."

Judge Craig Biddle was escorting a visitor to Philadelphia over the city, and as they passed the penitentiary the visitor inquired blandly: "Judge, is that a new distillery?" "Not exactly," answered the judge, "but it is a rectifying plant."

A trotting horse in Bloomfield, N. J., named Tattler, has made a record. While housed in Theodore F. Maxfield's stable, in Franklin street, he succeeded in getting his right hind hoof in his mouth. ## ANOTHER GRAND REPORT.

From His Majesty's Dockyard, Portsmouth, England, Where Upwards of 16,000 Men Are Constantly Employed.

Some time ago the Portsmouth Times and Naval Gazette published a most thrilling and remarkable experience of the wife of Mr. Frederick Payne, himself connected with the Portsmouth dockyard for many years. The report produced a great sensation, not only in Portsmouth, but throughout the country, being considered of sufficient importance for reproduction and editorial comment by the leading metropolitan and provincial press of England, as showing the marvelous power which St. Jacobs Oil possesses as a cure for Rheumatism, its application having effected a perfect cure in the case of Mrs. Payne, after having been a helpless cripple and given up by several physicians.

We have now further evidence of its intrinsic value as a Pain Conqueror. Our readers will do well to follow the intelligent and highly interesting details as given in Mrs. Rabbets own words:

"To the Proprietors St. Jacobs Oil—

"Gentlemen: My husband, who is a shipwright in His Majesty's dockyard, met with an accident to his ankle and leg, spraining both so badly that his leg turned black from his knee to his toes. The doctor said it would be months before he could put his foot to the ground, and it was doubtful whether he would ever get proper use of his leg again.

"A few days after the accident I had a book left at the door telling about St. Jacob's Oil, so I procured a bottle from our chemist, Mr. Arthur Creswell, 379 Commercial Road. I began to use St. Jacob's Oil, and you may guess my surprise when in about another week from that date my husband could not only stand, but could even walk about. and in three weeks from the time I first used the Oil my husband was back at work, and everybody talking about his wonderful recovery. This is not all. Seeing what St. Jacob's Oil could do gave me faith in your Vogeler's Curative Compound, also favorably mentioned in the book left at my house. I determined to try the compound on my little girl, who was suffering from a dreadful skin disease, the treatment of which has cost me large sums of money in going from one doctor to another with her, all to no purpose.

She has taken two bottles of Vogeler's Curative Compound, and one would now hardly take her for the same child. Her skin has such a nice healthy color after the sallow look she has always had.

"I shall never cease to be thankful for the immense benefit we have derived from these two great remedies of yours. I think it a duty to recommend these medicines now I have proved their value.

(Signed.) "Elizabeth S. Rabbets,

"93 Grafton Street, Mile End,

"Landport, Portsmouth, England."

A liberal free sample of Vogeler's Compound will be sent by addressing St. Jacob's Oil, Ltd., Baltimore.

The above honest, straightforward statement of Mrs. Rabbets evidence is stronger and far more convincing than pages of paid advertisements, which, though in themselves attractive, yet lack that convincing proof which Mrs. Rabbets' description of her own experience supplies. St. Jacob's Oil has a larger sale throughout the world than that of all other remedies for outward application combined, and this can only be accounted for from the fact of its superiority over all others.

AMERICA ABROAD.

United States Products in Favor Throughout the Old World.

Bread is baked in Palistine from flour made in Minneapolis. American windmills are working east of the Jordan and in the land of Bashan. Phonographs are making a conquest of all tongues. The chrysanthemum banner of Japan floats from the palace of the Mikado on a flagstaff cut from a Washington forest, as does the banner of St. George from Windsor castle. The American typesetting machines are used by foreign newspapers, and our cash registers keep accounts for scores of nations. America makes sewing machines for the world. Our bicycles are standards of excellence everywhere. Our typewriters are winning their way wherever a written language is used. In all kinds of electrical appliances we bave become the foremost producer. In many European cities American dynamos light streets and operate railways. Much of the machinery that is to electrify London tram lines is now being built in Pittsburg. The American shoe has captured the favor of all Europe, and the foreign makers are hastening to import our machinery that they may compete with our makers. In the far east, in the capital of Corea, the Hermit Nation, there was recently inaugurated, with noisy music and flying banners, an electric railway built of American material by a San Francisco engineer and now it is operated by American motormen.—Scribner's.

THEY CONTROL THE COUNTRY.

How the Railroad Kings Have the Land Parceled Out Among Them.

Here, then, is a vast continent belted and banded and criss-crossed with 200,000 miles of railroads. Many of the roads are great independent lines, and some are systems controlled by groups of men outside the five large syndicates. But practically half the stupendous network, affecting in one way or another every inhabitant in the country, is in possession of five little bodies of men with headquarters in New York.

A strip of land hundreds of miles wide, beginning at the Washington ports in the northwest and sweeping east of the lakes, is practically an industrial field of Mr. Hill and Mr. Morgan. ## A PIG[illegible]H.

Eighty Acres Devo[illegible]to the Rearing of the Birds.

What is said to be the only pigeon ranch in the world is near Los Angeles, Cal. It covers about eight acres of sandy, gravelly ground in the bed of the Los Angeles river, where there is an abundance of water. Here stands an enormous ark-shaped loft, or pigeon house, whose crudities of architecture are concealed by the thousands of pigeons upon the roof. Fifteen thousand birds fairly cover the ground and loft, so that at times from a distance it appears as though some of the snow from the neighboring Sierras had been dropped upon the roof. The increase of this gigantic flock is enormous. If the market should fail the owner would be utterly unable to feed his birds, as in less than two years he would by calculation have a million birds on his hands. Fortunately the demand is better than the supply and the pigeon ranch sends about 40,000 squabs a year to the market.

The statistics of this unique ranch are interesting. The estimated output for the month is 3,000, the gross income being about $9,000 a year. The average price per dozen for the birds is about $3, sometimes ranging up to $10. The expense of maintaining such an enormous flock is considerable. The birds are fed three times a day, each meal costing approximately for all $5, so the annual food bill is about $5,500. The food consists mainly of wheat, screenings, boiled meal and stale bread. The daily consumption is about twelve sacks of screenings, eight sacks of wheat and many gallons of boiled meal. The bread is an additional fattener given during the week.

Curious Mix-Up in Hungary.

Two brothers married two sisters a year or two ago at Sandorfalva, in Hungary. It is necessary in Hungary that a civil marriage should precede the ceremony in the church. At the civil ceremony Emmerick Tanks was married to Katieza Patay and Francis Tanks to Mary Patay. Then the young couples went to the church for the final ceremony. At the altar the brides somehow changed places, eventually leaving the church married to the wrong husbands. The bridegrooms appealed to the priest for advice, but he said the bride's father could settle the matter. That gentleman agreed to give his decision at the termination of the wedding feast. By that time, however, he had drunk not wisely but too well, and was incapable of anything. The matter had to be brought before the courts, which decided to give the brides to the men they loved.

Never Discard Uniform.

The Russian emperor and all members of the imperial family, being officers of the army, are always dressed in uniform, with their trousers inside their top-boots.

For Her Sister's Sake.

Stendal, Ind., Mar. 10th.—Mrs. Sarah A. Shrode of this place says:

"I suffered much as many other women do with Kidney and Bladder Troubles. I tried many medicines but got no relief until I used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Nine boxes of this remedy cured me completely and I feel it my duty to my fellow women to make this statement.

"I can heartily recommend them to any woman suffering with Kidney and Bladder Ailments."

The words of Mrs. Shrode will be good news to many of her suffering sisters. Dodd's Kidney Pills have proven themselves to be sick women's best friend for they are as effectual in all cases of Female Weakness as in Bladder and Kidney Disease.

CONGRESSMAN HOWARD.

Of National Reputation Are the Men Who Recommend Pe-ru-na to Fellow Sufferers.

A Remarkable Case Reported From the State of New York.

CONGRESSMAN HOWARD, OF ALABAMA.

House of Representatives, Washington, Feb. 4, 1899.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen:—"I have taken Peruna now for two weeks, and find I am very much relieved. I feel that my cure will be permanent. I have also taken it for la grippe, and I take pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy to all fellow sufferers."

M. W. HOWARD.

MOST people think catarrh is a disease confined to the head and nose. Nothing is farther from the truth. It may be that the nose and throat is the oftenest affected by catarrh, but if this is so it is so only because these parts are more exposed to the vicissitudes of the climate than the other parts of the body.

Every organ, every duct, every cavity of the human body is liable to catarrh. A multitude of ailments depend on catarrh. This is true winter and summer. Catarrh causes many cases of chronic disease, where the victim has not the slightest suspicion that catarrh has anything to do with it.

The following letter which gives the experience of Mr. A. C. Lockhart is a case in point:

Mr. A. C. Lockhart, corner Cottage St. and Thurston Road, Rochester, N. Y., in a letter written to Dr. Hartman, says the following of Peruna:

"About fifteen years ago I commenced to be ailing, and consulted a physician. He pronounced my trouble a species of dyspepsia and advised me, after he had treated me about six months, to get a leave of absence from my business and go into the country. I did so and got temporary relief. I went back to work again, but was taken with very distressing pains in my stomach.

"I seldom had a passage of the bowels naturally. I consulted another physician with no better results. The disease kept growing on me until I had exhausted the ability of sixteen of Rochester's best physicians. The last physician advised me to give up my work and go south after he had treated me for one year.

"I was given a thorough examination with the X-ray. They would not even determine what my trouble was. Some of your testimonials in the Rochester papers seemed to me worthy of consideration, and I made up my mind to try a bottle of Peruna. Before the bottle was half gone I noticed a change for the better. I am now on the fifth bottle, and have not an ache or pain anywhere. My bowels move regularly every day, and I have taken on eighteen pounds of flesh. I have recommended Peruna to a great many and they recommend it very highly. I have told several people that if they would take a bottle of Peruna, and could then candidly say that it had not benefited them, I would pay for the medicine."

Mr. W. P. Peterson, of Morris, Ill., says:

"I was nearly dead with catarrhal dyspepsia and am now a well man, better, in fact, than I have been for twenty years or more.

"Since I got cured by your Peruna I have been consulted by a great many people."—W. B. Peterson.

Rescued in Novel Manner.

An incident showing the value of quick wit in taking advantage of the situation in an emergency occurred on the coast of England, where a number of pilot boats and fishermen, having been caught in a storm, ran for the harbor, but failing to get quite into safety made for the end of a long pier which was being erected, where there was a huge iron crane. The boats were run under it and hitched on to the tackle, when five boats and fifteen men in them were lifted bodily into port.

Where's Rudyard ?

They have a ping-pong tournament at the Aquarium in London, where able-bodied men played for championships. Ping-pong is a sort of table tennis, requiring a little less activity than battledore and shuttlecock and a little more judgment than marbles. Athletic Britons must be amused, however, and, in addition to struggles for ping-pong laurels, crap tournaments and ringers might be tried for variety's sake.

For Employers to Ponder Over.

The employer who would turn off a man who has been in his service for years just because he was old, would kick a baby to death if nobody was looking. If anybody is to be turned off, turn off the young ones. They can land on their feet. They have a lifetime before them in which to earn the right to be retained by some one. Keep the old ones, if there is any mercy in your heart.—New York Press.

Historical Remains Found.

When the nave of the Church of St. Mary, Chatham, was being pulled down the other day some beautiful old Norman arches were brought to light. These interesting remains will be preserved. It is believed that the church dates back to 1130 A. D. The Norman church, of which it formed part, was standing in the second half of the eighteenth century.

Will Swim Long Distance.

Carlisle D. Graham, who has won considerable fame as a daring and long distance swimmer, has declared that he will swim through the whirlpool rapids to Youngstown, thence to Toronto, and down Lake Ontario and through the rapids of the St. Lawrence river to Montreal, a distance of about 300 miles, in thirty days.

The Champion Smoker.

The champion smoker of the British army, a private in the third battalion, Royal Warwickshire Regiment, had from his youth up regularly consumed one and a half pounds of tobacco every week until his regiment was drafted out to South Africa, when the curtailment of his supply almost broke his heart.

Railway in Upper Kongo.

The Kongo government has approved the contract for the new railway of the upper Kongo district and the charter of the company which will build it. The capital of the new company amounts to $5,000,000. It will take ten years to build the 1,000 miles of railway contemplated.

One Cause of Drunkenness.

Dr. David Paulson, a Chicago nerve specialist, declares that much drunkenness, especially in young men is caused by highly spiced food and the use by cooks of pepper, mustard and similar relishes. To this also the doctor attributes the cigarette habit.

Novel Reason for Opposition.

Opponents of the confirmation by the Senate of President Roosevelt's appointment of Benjamin Daniels as United States marshal for Arizona, allege that he has an interest in a faro bank. Daniels was one of Col. Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

Aerolite Falls in Switzerland.

An aerolite fell near Chatillens, Switzerland, the other day. The stone was triangular in shape, of a dark-gray color, about eleven ounces in weight. This is only the second meteoric stone that is known to have fallen in Switzerland.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

Kanawha

From the Record:

Chris Peterson has moved to Minnesota where he is engaged in the real estate business.

Miss Susie Scott arrived safely at Chicago. The doctors report an amputation will be necessary.

Jesse Green is moving to Galt. His father has bought a hardware store there and Mr. Green will manage it.

Geo. Nicholson, of Corwith, has been given a term of one year's imprisonment in the penitentiary for embezzlement. He was taken to Anamosa last Thursday.

Died. at her home five miles northeast of Kanawha, on Saturday, March 8, 1902, Mrs. Karoline Sophia Schroeder, wife of Wm. D. Schroeder.

We can now state with considerable certainty that city and rural phones will be installed in the near future. Sufficient capital is behind the enterprise to insure a complete and reliable system, with connections to the long distance line now in operation, which is a valuable feature.

The Vice Of Nagging.

If she is melancholy, excitable; troubled with loss of appetite. headache, sleeplessness, constipation or fainting and dizzy spells, she needs Electric Bitters the most wonderful remedy for ailing women. Thousands of sufferers from female troubles, nervous troubles, backache and weak kidneys have used it, and become healthy and happy. Try it. Only 50c. Harr guarantees satisfaction.

Corwith

From the Hustler.

Frank Dietrich, of Sandwich, Ill., has moved near Corwith.

G. A. Miller has recently moved from Illinois onto the old Monroe farm just east of the Wilhite school house.

F. H Latham and family left for Spokane, Washington, yesterday. They are old settlers in this town and we wish them well in their new home.

F. Lindsey has bought a finely improved quarter section near Adaza, Greene Co., and will move at once. He has made a success farming in Hancock county and no doubt will succeed as well in Greene.

In the tearing down of the F. M. Daniels hay barn, another old land mark disappears. W. P. Chambers will convert the lumber into a machinery building. When Corwith was a hay town this barn was the center of an immense industry.

MAY LOSE STATE UNIVERSITY.

Larrabee Introduces Resolution for That Purpose.

Des Moines, March 15.—A joint resolution was introduced by Larrabee in the house yesterday proposing an amendment to the constitution, by striking out the last clause of section 8, permanently locating the state university at Iowa City. The object as explained by the author is to infuse into Iowa City blood the proper amount of enthusiasm and pride in the university. The resolution was referred to the committee on constitutional amendments.

The permanency of the location of the State university at Iowa City dates from the time when the state capitol was removed from that city to Des Moines. There was a soreness with Iowa Cityans that was only appeased by the insertion in the constitution, following the creation of Des Moines as the seat of government, the provision that the university should be located at Iowa City. Since that time the charge has been frequently made that while Iowa City was proud of this great institution, the city had not done all in its power to better its condition. One of the arguments is that the grounds are insufficient and it is necessary now for the purchase of many additional acres.

It is not believed the author, who is a graduate of the university, has any idea that the school will ever be removed from Iowa City, but that he desires to stir the city to do something. The amendment to become operative would have to pass two sessions of the legislature and be voted upon by the people at a general election.

NAMED BY THE GOVERNOR.

Judge Kinne Reappointed to Board of Control

Des Moines, March 17.—In a sealed communication to the senate Saturday, Governor Cummins appointed Judge L. G. Kinne of Des Moines, as a member of the board of control to succeed himself and T. W. McCurdy of Buchanan county, as custodian, to succeed J. D. McGarraugh of Des Moines. Governor Cummins in the course of the day also appointed Dr. P. O. Koto of Winnebago county, as state veterinarian, to succeed Dr. J. A. Gibson of Denison, and made known his selections for the three state mine inspectors. John Verner of Oskaloosa, was reappointed as inspector for the Second district and James W. Miller, of Des Moines, was reappointed for the Third district. Edward Sweeny of Swan, was appointed inspector for the First district, to succeed James A. Campbell of Ottumwa.

According to law the senate is required to confirm the appointments for the board of control and custodian, in executive session.

NEW CHARLES CITY ROAD.

Electric Line to Powersville Is Now Assured.

Charles City, March 15.—The Charles City and Powersville electric project will be a reality. Over $50,000 in stock was signed at a largely attended and enthusiastic railroad meeting held in the Hildreth opera house. High art in building railways was vigorously discussed and the project is assumed an assured success. One hundred thousand dollars in stock is required for complete organization. Twenty thousand dollars of the old subscription and $15,000 will be taken at Clarksville, making a total of $85,800. The remaining $14,200 will be taken by interested parties here and on the line south. The money for active construction is assured from the bonds to be issued by the company on the basis of a bona fide stock subscription of $100,000. This stock will all be taken by monied and active business people and property holders, giving it a solid and tangible basis.

CASHIER DISAPPEARS.

John Hisuinius in Trouble Over Forged Check.

Cedar Rapids, March 15.—John Hisuinius, cashier of the State bank of Stout, has disappeared under mysterious circumstances. He recently had an encounter with a customer relative to a check which the patron charged as a forgery. The charge was resented and the two men had a schuffle during which time the cashier is said to have tried to get possession of the instrument in controversy. Failing in this he immediately disappeared and has not been heard of since. His father is one of the wealthiest men in Grundy county and a stockholder in the bank.

LOOKS LIKE MURDER.

J. E. Brainard Had Nearly $3,000 With Him When He Was Killed.

Missouri Valley, March 17.—After an investigation of nearly two weeks the coroner's jury has rendered a verdict in the Brainard case. The verdict is to the effect that Brainard was murdered on the morning of March 1, in Missouri Valley or vicinity, by a person or persons unknown. Brainard was undoubtedly killed for his money, as he had nearly $3,000 with him at the time. While officers have been working hard to apprehend the guilty person or persons, no arrests have as yet been made.

Chid Burned to Death.

Iowa Falls, March 17—While playing around a bonfire Alice, 3-year-old daughter of Henry C. Adams, fell in the fire, igniting her clothing, and before help could reach her she was so badly burned that she died four hours later.

MOLSBERRY BILL PASSES.

Only Seven Votes Cast Against Railroad Indebtedness Measure.

Des Moines, March 14.—The Molsberry bill removing the limit of indebtedness of railroad corporations in Iowa went through the senate yesterday morning with only seven votes against it. The vote stood 38 yeas and 7 nays. Those voting against the measure were Crossley, Dowell, Garst, Healy, Porter, Wilson and Winne. The debate on the measure was continued for an hour or more before a vote was reached.

Harriman made an extended speech in support of the measure, appealing to the members not to become prejudiced against the bill just because it had the word "railroad" in it. He said the Iowa law limiting the bonded indebtedness of railways to two-thirds of their capital stock was passed fifty years ago, and the same rule was then made to apply to other corporations except insurance companies. Since then times and conditions have changed. When the law was first passed the railroads of the state were new and needed restrictions placed about them.

Molsberry closed debate on the bill by proposing an amendment to take the place of the one pending by Healy. The Healy amendment provided that nothing in the bill should be held to authorize the creation of an indebtedness in excess of the limit now fixed by law for the purpose of acquiring, cancelling or withdrawing the stock of such corporations, or for the purpose of acquiring the stock or indebtedness of any other corporation. Molsberry proposed instead to amend the bill providing that the two-thirds limit of indebtedness shall not be exceeded except when the articles of incorporation originally provide therefor or are amended to include such provision.

He thought this amendment would meet the contingency feared by Healy that bonds might be issued to squeeze out minority stockholders, and not embarrass the railroads at any time. Healy contended that the Molsberry amendment did not cover the ground he sought to cover. The Healy amendment was voted down, however, and the Molsberry amendment adopted, and then the bill went to a vote. This is the bill which has been accused of being one of the first steps toward the location of the new Burlington company in Iowa in furtherance of the Northern Securities company merger plan.

SOLONS AT AMES.

Ames College Proved a Delightful Host for the Legislators.

Ames, March 14.—Members of the legislature were entertained royally at the agricultural college. Practical illustrations were made of what is being done at college, even to the cooking, the raising of prime beef, the making of excellent butter and cheese. It was one of the best junkets the state has ever known. The day was fine, the college officials and the students genial and attentive, there was something worth while to see.

One of the favorite places of the visitors was the cow barns were the great prize winners of the Chicago stock show and other thoroughbred animals were kept. Another place was the creamery and the cheese factory. Here the visitors were served buttermilk, wafers and cheese. The program was carried out as planned. The speakers were most of them present and substitutes were uncessary. One of the pleasant affairs was the program of silent toasts at the dairy lunch in the dining hall. Judge Stevens of Boone, presiding and calling upon various members of the general assembly for speeches. The topics were well selected and gave opportunity for the display of wit and humor.

In addition to visiting buildings where the different courses of study are taught, where the practical illustrations are made and where the stock is kept, where faculty and student life reside and many other places of interest, the visitors went to an immense tent on the campus for a conference of acquaintanceship. It was there the speeches were made.

The addresses were pertinent to the situation. President Beardshear talked about appropriations, but only in a manner pleasing and wholly justifiable. He explained the workings of the college, and the future. Then others talked, including Governor Cummins, Lieut. Governor Herriott and Representative Temple. Preceding the speeches was a program, interspersed with college yells of a novel and fetching caharacter.

New Iowa Lines of Railroads.

Chicago, March 17.—Contract for the construction of the Iowa & St. Louis railway from Elmer, Mo., on the Santa Fe, to a connection with the Iowa Central near Centerville, Ia., and the Chicago & Northwestern near Buxton, Iowa, was today let here to William Knefick of Kansas City, Mo. The contract calls for the completion of the line not later than August 1. The road is being built by the Gates-Lambert-Mitchell interests.

Will Cost Company Dearly.

Oskaloosa, March 17—If the relatives of the twenty men killed in the mine explosion at Lost Creek bring suit against the coal company for the same amount that the administratrix of the estate of Samuel Humphrey asks, and each recovers judgment, it will cost the Lost Creek Fuel Company $200,000.

Hand Torn Completely Off.

Ottumwa, March 15.—A gun bursting in the hands of Fred Lane of Keosauqua, tore one of the members completely off and injured the young man otherwise.

Aged Man Takes Own Life.

Ottumwa, March 15.—William Morris, aged 66, who resided near Eddyville, hung himself to a rafter in the barn. To ill health is attributed the act.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, March 11.—Senate.—By a vote of 33 to 9 the senate passed the ways and means committee bill for the taxation of railroad property on a basis of stocks and bonds, net and gross earnings and physical condition. The measure requires publicity of the records of the executive council in making the assessment and its reasons for reaching results. Senator Porter moved to substitute the Nichols stocks and bonds law of Ohio, but this was defeated 112 to 33. He then moved to amend to make the provision relating to the clause to compel the council to publish the valuation of stocks and bonds and its reasons for diviation therefrom in making the assessment. It was lost by viva voce vote after refusal of the subcommittee to explain the language of the bill. Senator Porter's amendment to require the council to publish the assessed value per mile of each road, the value per mile on the different bases—gross and net earnings, physical condition and stocks and bonds bases—was lost by a viva voce vote. Senator Hayward proposed an amendment, which was lost, to strike out the section relating to ascertaining the stocks and bonds value. Addresses in favor of the committee's measure was made by Senators Lewis, Hubbard and Junkin.

House.—Representative Timothy Donahue, of O'Brien county, proposed a resolution of sympathy for the English in their defeat last Friday and the capture of General Methuen by the Boers. This resolution followed upon the heels of the defeat of the author's resolution of sympathy for the Boers. The house committee on railroads voted to report for passage the Carter bill reducing the passenger fare on railroads in Iowa to 2 cents a mile, and to report without recommendation the Donahue bill to require railroads to furnish all public officials with passes. The house defeated a bill to eliminate the circle from the top of tickets on the official ballot at Iowa elections. A bill passed the house creating a board of examiners for opticians. Black's bill, providing for the election of supervisors by the whole county and abolishing supervisor districts, was taken up. The committee substitute for the bill provided that 25 per cent of the votes in each district must petition for the change. Sweeley offered an amendment giving 25 per cent of the people of the entire county the power to compel an election. Wise offered an amendment to the amendment providing that 25 per cent of the voters in a majority of the districts may demand an election. Wise's amendment was lost. Sweeley's amendment was lost. The committee substitute passed.

Des Moines, March 12.—Senate.—The senate took up the Molesberry bill, giving Iowa railway companies the right to issue bonds in excess of two-thirds of their capital stock. This bill has been discussed among the senators for several days. The bill permits to be done legally whatever has and is being done by sufferance and based on a favorable decision of the supreme court, declaring that bonds issued were valid, even though they might be in excess of two- thirds of the capital stock. The bill was opposed by Senator Healy, and was discussed at some length, but did not come to a vote. Healy proposed an amendment providing that the bonds shall not be sold to acquire stock in other corporations or to cancel stock in the corporation. The bill to require railroads to keep posted bulletins giving the time or arrival and departure of trains in all depots was amended to require the bulletins to show whether trains are late or on time, and passed.

House.—The house passed the bill giving the state board of health power to enforce its regulations in places where the local boards refuse or neglect to do so. The bill will now become a law, having been passed by both houses. Hawk introduced a bill providing for the appointment of a commission to make a study of the different methods of recording and registering land titles. The commission is to report to the next legislature. Hawk was the author of the Torrens land bill, and his belief is that the commission will report in favor of it. Edwards' bill requiring railroad companies to file plats of all lines owned or operated in the several counties of the state with county auditors, was passed.

Des Moines, March 13.—Senate.—Consideration of the Molsberry bill to remove the limit of indebtedness which the law theoretically provides for railroad companies, was resumed and after addresses by Harriman, Molsberry and Healy, the bill was passed. Courtright's bill to increase the state subsidy of the farmers' institutes from $50 to $100 was passed. Senator Hayward called up the bill which makes the orphans in the Davenport home state wards. The soldiers' orphans are now state wards. There are fifty children in poor houses in the state. Children are sent to the industrial schools instead of to the Davenport home because the former are county charges and not state wards. The bill was not disposed of. The Bruce-Emmert contested election case was debated at length, but not disposed of.

House.—A quietus was given woman suffrage by the lower house of the Iowa general assembly today. By a vote of 56 to 38 the resolution for the submission of a constitutional amendment for equal suffrage was defeated. Not a word was said in debate. The report of the committee recommending indefinite postponement of the resolution was read by the clerk, Chairman Sweet, of the committee on amendments and suffrage, moved its adoption, the speaker waited two minutes for remarks and ordered the roll called. Among bills passed were the following: By Payne, requiring county auditors to compile and prepare a financial report of the county; by Langan of Clinton, providing for the establishment of a barbers' examining board to regulate the practice of barbering and to issue licenses to barbers; the bill provides for a commission of three, their salaries to be paid wholly from fees; by Sweet, amending section 2522, requiring milk dealers and operators of creameries to make reports to the dairy commission and providing a penalty for their failure to do so.

Des Moines, March 14.—Senate.—Senator Molsberry forced to a vote the Lewis motion to reconsider the vote by which the Molsberry bill in aid of the Burlington "merger" was passed Thursday. The motion was tabled by a vote of 30 to 14. The senate seated James E. Bruce, of Atlantic, in the seat occupied by J. M. Emmert, of the Cass-Shelby district. The vote was 34 to 9. The democrats supported Dr. Emmert and insisted that a deciding precinct vote should be eliminated from the returns, not disputing that Bruce had a popular majority of the votes cast. Senator Bruce was sworn in and will receive pay for the entire session. Hayward's bill to make all inmates of the soldiers' orphaps' home at Davenport state charges, was defeated. Senator Hogue introduced a bill providing for the issuance of certificates by the state board of educational examiners to persons completing courses of normal training to be established and approved by the board in all of the higher schools of the state. This law is designed to eliminate the necessity for additional state normal schools, making the work of training teachers incidental to the course of the colleges and advanced high schools of the state.

House.—The house indefinitely postponed the Hogue bill, which passed the senate, compelling railroad companies to furnish freight cars to shippers without discrimination, and also the Carter 2-cent fare bill. Among bills passed were the following: By Hurn, requiring the clerk and treasurer of cities and towns to keep books showing the funds of municipal corporations and providing for the publication of an annual statement of the same; by Warren, providing that the board of control may at any time parole inmates of the industrial schools; by Calderwood, to give the board of control power to remove children from poor houses to the Davenport institution and charge their support to the counties. Representative Larrabee introduced a resolution in the house providing for a constitutional amendment to strike out the clause therein locating the State University at Iowa City.

Des Moines, March 15.—Senate—The conference committee reported a substitute concurrent resolution memorializing congress to pass the Hoar bill in restriction of the issuance of injunctions by federal courts during strikes. The new resolution expresses the belief that the Hoar bill is a good one and that the legislature has abundant confidence in the Iowa delegation in congress. It is a compromise which it is said will be adopted without dissent. A message was received from the governor suggesting the passage of a general statute transferring the jurisdiction over grounds on which the government will erect buildings to the federal authorities. Heretofore this has been effected by special acts. Governor Cummins suggested that a draft of law which he transmitted be adopted. The matter went to the committee on judiciary.

Among bills passed were the following: To prohibit the sale of cocaine except on prescription of a physician; to permit persons moving from one voting precinct to another after registration to register on election day and vote; to permit supervisors to repair river levees in emergency without waiting for a meeting of the board; to change the weight of millet and Hungarian seed from 48 to 50 pounds to the bushel; giving the board of control power to detain girls at the Industrial school at Mitchellville until they are 21; to apply the fish protection law to the Big Sioux river; to punish kidnaping for ransom by imprisonment for any term of years from ten years to life.

House.—Sweeping amendments to the proposed law for the creation of a board of control to govern the state educational institutions were introduced and the whole business was again sent to the committee of judiciary, a motion to refer to a special committee being defeated. The amendments add the governor and superintendent of instruction to the board and modify its powers in the matter of hiring professors. Cummins of Black Hawk, chairman of the committee to which the Torrens land register bill was referred, reported in favor of the bill, but with the recommendation that it be not further considered at this time, but that it be referred to a commission to report to the next general assembly. Hawk of Jasper the author of the bill, has already introduced a bill providing for such a commission. A bill providing for five days' notice before assessing the mulct tax against property was passed.

Admiral Sampson's Prize Money.

Washington, March 17.—The transcript of the record in the case of the United States vs. Admiral Sampson and others, which has been appealed from the decision of the supreme court of the district, has been filed in the United States supreme court. The case involves the question as to whether prize money should be allowed men of the North Atlantic squadron, owing to the vessels and supplies captured in the battle off Santiago, July 3, 1898.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Copyright, by STREET & SMITH, New York.

As the musicians struck the first low wailing notes a shout of universal applause greeted the fair dancer. Slowly the mandolins sounded the measures of the dance, and with tranquil, almost hesitating steps, the young girl interpreted the rhythm and time with her tiny feet. Gradually the chords quickened and became livelier, and the slow-moving Circe merged into a radiant Terpsichore. Her eyes, hitherto bent timidly upon the floor, were now proudly raised and swept the crowd with half coquettish, half inquiring glances. They seemed to say: "Are there none brave enough to risk being [illegible]?"

One of the young fellows thus interpreting the look, and perhaps eager to show his courage, quickly advanced to the estrada, and, uncovering, presented his gay sombrero with its garniture of silver and lace for the acceptance of the bewitching dancer. Receiving it with a smile, without pausing for an instant in the evolutions in which she was engaged, she placed it coquettishly upon her head. A prolonged viva gretted this act, while the pleased gallant, who had thus been conceded the floor, placed himself opposite to her and joined in the dance. It continued for a time, when, at the cry of "Chammara!" by the spectators, the young gallant, bowing gracefully to the girl, retired to give place to the second aspirant. Placing himself opposite Circe, the new partner went through the same series of evolutions as his predecessor, ending by unwinding the crimson China crape sash from his waist, which he fashioned into a rosette and hung from one of the bare shoulders of the girl.

This act constituted a challenge to all comers, while by permitting it to remain the girl signified her acceptance of him until such time as another should present a better caim. It could only be answered in one way—by the knife. From the crowd arose the cry of "Machete! machete!" and in prompt response the rival lover sprang into the estrade, and, with a graceful bow, presented himself to the girl. A slight nod told him that he, too, was welcome to the honor of bestowing his favors; and, drawing his long, glittering cuchillo from its sheath, he suspended it by its bow of purple ribbons from the right shoulder of the girl, already carrying the sash of his rival upon her left. A new pas de deux now began, carried on as before, though with many extemporized variations. Every now and then a chorus of vivas and bravos greeted the execution of some more than usually difficult step, or suggestive figure.

Suddenly a strident voice in the crowd shouted "Bomba!" and the dance was at an end. The women, now that the dancing was over, took themselves out of harm's way. The two factions, occupying opposite sides of the estrada, clamored for the fight.

Dona Juanita, proud and radiant, stood in the center of the estrada awaiting the final ceremony with a tranquillity which went far to prove her indifference to the claim of either aspirant. But the pledges were still to be redeemed, and, with a practical eye to the business features of the play, she waited with extended hand. The usual fee of each pledge is a silver half real, but the two gallants, advancing one after another, filled both her hands with silver coins, amid the murmurs of applause which such prodigality excited.

The estrada was now cleared for the fight, which nothing could now avert. The sylvan temple, so lately the scene of gayety and pleasure, was converted into a gladiatorial arena. Into its midst one of the gallants advanced, and, first tracing a rude circle in the hard-beat sand of the floor, planted his knife in its center. The second promptly followed and placed his long blade close beside that of his rival, while both courteously uncovered. A polite altercation then ensued as to who should first place his hat upon his head, each claiming an honor which, granted by either, would make him the superior in point of courtesy. The difficulty was, however, decided by both contestants covering at the same time. The spectators were then relegated to the outside of the estrada, the combatants placed face to face, and the signal given.

The combatants stood each with his long blade grasped in his right hand, and with his left hand and arm wrapped in the folds of his manga by way of shield. At the word the combat began. The Gautaricans know nothing of scientific fencing, and rely wholly upon strength and agility of body. The blows were furiously given, but were far from dexterous. On both sides it was only a series of quick thrusts and clumsy parries, of sudden lunges and hasty retreats. Their long knives struck one another with a metallic clang, or cut the air with a mournful sough. But there was a ferocity and determination about the men which resulted in much bloodshed and mutual hacking of flesh. They swayed to and fro upon the floor, the tumultuous crowd closing about them as they were successively displaced. Thus it continued for ten minutes, when, wounded and bleeding, both men came to the floor, and were carried off by their more intimate followers.

It was when the barbarous duel in the public square had been brought to a termination that Overton, indulging in a little bitter reflection regarding the evil that befalls man through his natural love for woman, felt a hand plucking his sleeve, and knew from the whiff of villainous tobacco smoke that his new Jonathan, the general, stood at his elbow, his face wreathed in smiles and his portly frame swelling with the importance of the communication he bore.

CHAPTER X.

The Maker of Presidents.

As soon as his eyes fell upon the smiling countenance of General Barrajo, Jack knew the latter carried a message—he seemed so pleased with himself, so desirous of doing some favor to the brave Senor Overton, who had saved his precious life, and made him overwhelmingly his debtor.

When, however, the verbal communication was delivered Jack's face took on a frown and he bit his lip. For the stout general bore a message that Dona Juanita desired to meet the American at once; and he also gave Jack to understand that this summons was to be considered a great honor, about which, however, that worthy had his doubts.

He concluded to meet Dona Juanita.

He found the senorita not far away, and her manner of receiving him was peculiarly coy for one who had shown herself so bold when the rival young gallants were vieing with each other for the privilege of her smiles. Jack, had he known these hot-blooded creatures of Gautarica better, would have taken warning from this very fact and studiously avoided the senorita, for it was quite patent to the astute general she had conceived a sudden and overpowering admiration for the American that was very apt to blossom presently into a passion.

Jack carried on a spirited conversation with the belle of San Jose, and could not but note the deep satisfaction shown by the general. In the goodness of his heart, no doubt he wanted the man who had saved his life to have all the prizes there were in the lottery, and the senorita, in his mind, came within that category.

So he worked the strings.

Had Jack suspected his philanthropical design, he might have deeply regretted running those three revolutionists off when they had the general cornered.

As it was, having in mind a sketch of some mythical goddess, which the senorita as he had seen her dancing so alluringly before her many admirers would fill to perfection, he studied her while thus engaging her in conversation.

Doubtless he forgot that in thus exerting himself, with the purpose in view of drawing her out, he at the same time accomplished a double object, and appeared unusually attractive in her eyes.

That was where the boomerang came in.

It chanced that after this night they met frequently—not so much through his inclination as an apparent combination of circumstances.

The lovely daughter of the tropics had taken a great fancy for Senor Overton, and his indifference piqued her, since she was so accustomed to having gallants go mad for an iota of the favor she bestowed upon Jack. Sometimes it appears as great a crime to be diffident as to show egotism—it may not push one into hot water as often, but there are occasions when it counts as much.

And the wily general looked on, and behind Jack's back rubbed his hands, very much as a miser might over his gold.

It was his purpose to devote his life to showering blessings on his noble deliverer—love, power, wealth, all should be his, and he would bless the day when he first met Pedro Alphonso Barrajo—indeed, it would be a red-letter day in the affairs of the little republic as well.

Overton had never taken the general into his confidence, to tell him the bitter story of his past and how he had become a full-fledged woman hater, pledged to remain forever a bachelor.

He had found a means of engaging in business. Such energy as he possessed was a new element in San Juan, and from the way in which he started it was evident that in due course of time, say, ten years, if nothing happened to overturn matters—something is always occurring in these torrid little republics—he bade fair to own the whole community, which shows what push and enterprise may accomplish when properly applied.

Ten years was a long time to wait—he had calculated on half that period when he could go back to London and pay up old scores.

And then it occurred to Jack to partially take his friend the general into his confidence, and tell him how necessary it was that he should roll the ball of fortune faster, in order that the result should be hastened.

Brave Barrajo had met danger when it appeared about to overwhelm him with a steady front and a flashing blade.

He was equal to the occasion now.

Slapping Jack most heartily on the back, he winked his left eye mysteriously, and, looking cautiously around to see that they were alone, whispered hoarsely:

"Carramba! Make your mind easy, senor—it is all arranged—the train is laid and at the proper time the match will be applied—then comes the explosion, and, pouf! there you are in a jump! One thing tell me, Senor Jack, how long you have been in San Jose—on Gautarican soil?"

Jack figured it out. "Just six months to-morrow—how time has flown, and I have only made a start," he said slowly.

The general rubbed his hands together in almost delirious joy.

"Six months—it is quite enough. You shall be made a citizen to-morrow."

"Is it positively necessary?" dubiously.

"Undoubtedly so," came the prompt reply.

"Then I submit—any sacrifice so that I may attain the end to which I aspire."

"Madre do Dios! You will not call it a sacrifice, Senor Jack, when you learn what a feast of good things is being prepared for you. Never was a man more favored by fortune, I swear."

Jack smiled and shook his head.

"Ah! you speak in enigmas, general."

"Soon—soon all will be made plain. Wait, have patience; your loftiest dream of pomp and power could not attain to what awaits the friend and preserver of Pedro Barrajo. I do not forget—I can never forget!" with a gesture of vehemence.

"Well, I place myself in your hands, my general," Overton felt compelled to say, having concluded to go the whole thing, once started.

"Aha! you are wise—you will bless me to your dying day. Love, power, fortune, all shall be yours. The vow is recorded. One thing I must beg of you, Senor Jack. It is this. If, some night, after tomorrow, you should hear a commotion in San Jose, shots fired and loud cheers from the army, pray do not show yourself upon the street until I call upon you."

"Ah! prospects of another revolution, I suppose?"

"Hush! Not so loud, please. Roblado's spies may be about—they suspect something is in the wind. No, it is not Montejo this time—he is a dead herring in Gautarican politics now. Ask no more questions, only wait and see; great events are on the eve of transpiring. You promise—good! Go your way, my dear friend, and prepare for a grand surprise. Silence!" and with his finger on his lips the remarkable general bowed, and mounting his horse galloped toward the barracks, leaving Overton a badly puzzled man.

After that mysterious warning from Barrajo, Jack was exceedingly careful how he strayed from his domicile after old Helios dipped his glowing face in the western sea and the black pall of night descended upon gay San Jose. For he placed great confidence in the general, and that worthy's directions had been so very direct and explicit they could not be mistaken.

His reward came.

It was the fourth night after the flower procession, and San Jose had in a measure calmed down—that is, resumed the normal condition that marked the passing of early evening.

The gay crowds still lingered in the plaza near by, as though having some inkling of the tremendous epoch in Cautarica's history that was on the eve of occurring.

Overton wondered how it came that the sounds of merriment had long since died away, while the throng still remained abroad.

He had not known so strange a thing to happen before, and he had been half a year in San Jose, too.

He had just completed his task of writing, and, utterly fagged out, filled his pipe for a comfortable smoke before retiring, when the sound of a sudden shot electrified him.

The vegetable dealer is apt to get into a peck of trouble when his measure falls short of the standard.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, March 15, 1902.

Members of the legislature who watched the campaign in Polk county are of the opinion that the result will be an increase in the sentiment in favor of the primary election bill now pending in both houses. This bill was introduced by Senator Crossley, with a view of restricting the primaries to each party, and for this purpose it is provided that all of the parties shall hold their primaries on the same day. It has been amended to some extent by the committee and has been recommended for passage in the house.

Among the bills acted on by the house committee on agriculture last week was one by Caldwell intended to give each farmers' institute the right to send a delegate to the annual state convention. It was recommended for passage. It is expected the bill will encounter some opposition on the floor for the reason it contemplates an important change in the composition of the agriculture convention Some of the farmers hold the convention is too largely under the sway of the politicians. If this bill goes through it will send to the annual convention delegates from farmers' institutes from sixty or more counties in the state. One of the objections urged to the bill is that it will enable institutes to organized suddenly in order to hurry delegates to the convention in the interest of some person or measure. In order to prevent this the bill has been amended so as to provide that in order for an institute to be eligible to select a delegate it must have been organized a year. Another amendment provides for an annual report to the secretary of agriculture November 15. At the present time farmers' institutes are not represented in the annual agricultural convention. Each county and district fair association is entitled to a delegate, and in counties where no delegate is sent from a fair association the board of supervisors may select a delegate to represent the county. It is not the intent of the bill to cut off any delegates already provided for by law. If there is more than one properly organized institute in a county, each will be entitled to a delegate. Guthrie county now has two institutes.

The city auditor, John B. Lucas has been served with papers informing him that at the May term of the district court the case for an injunction against the city restraining it from loaning $50,000 from the water works fund to the Des Moines Water company will be argued. This case has been brought out by J. M. Work, one of the prominent socialists of the city, who is now a candidate for mayor on the socialist ticket. The move is against the army post, socialistic leaders in the city being opposed to it. They believe that the army post project can be defeated if the loan is foiled.

The Interurban Railway company, of which H. H. Polk is president, and W. I. Haskit secretary, has filed a trust deed with the county recorder conveying its property, tracks, right of way, equipment, etc., to the American Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, and Frank H. Jones, trustee. The consideration is $475,000 in bonds of $1,000 each to run for a period of twenty years, and to bear 5 per cent interest, payable semi-annually from the date of the filing. The property conveyed to the Chicago bank to be held in trust comprises the lines to Colfax and to the proposed site of the army post. It is described as a fifty-foot strip of land between the south and east limit of Des Moines to the army post site and to Colfax in Jasper county, four four-wheeled cars to be used on the lines, rails and other equipment necessary to an interurban line.

The Industrial school committee recommended for indefinite postponement the bill to create a woman's reformatory building of the abandoned industrial school for the blind at Knoxville. The ways and means committee recommended for passage the bill to levy one-fifth of a mill tax for the State Agricultural college at Ames, and the State University at Iowa City, and one-tenth mill tax to aid the State Normal school at Cedar Falls.

Chairman Dunham of the house committee on schools and text books presented to the house a statement from Hon. R. C. Barrett, superintendent of public instruction, which report was ordered printed in the journal without reading. The statement is in reference to needed legislation for the common schools and the importance of this as compared with the legislation for other schools. Among otner things the statement shows the cost of common schools is about eight and one-half millions annually, while other classes of education aggregate ony about one-quarter that amount.

The senate message reporting the passage of the railroad assessment bill was read in the house and the bill was at once referred to the committee on ways and means. It is believed the committee will make some changes before reporting the bill for passage, but it is difficult to ascertain the character of the probable alterations. The passage of the bill in the senate was accomplished so much sooner than had been expected, and at a time which gave the house members no opportunity to listen to the discussions and form their opinions relative to the merits of the taxation system evolved.

"Yes, a sign blew down and hit him, and he got fifteen hundred dollars damages." "Quite a windfall, wan't it?"

In the Philippines.

"The moonlight nights are wonderfully beautiful here and the air is balmy beyond belief. It is little wonder that Cupid gets in his work on such nights. The Filipino mother does not have to call out to Perfecta, seated on the balcony with Angel. to come in and get her wrap. The nights are so warm that she is bare headed, bare shouldered, and even barefooted, save for the Filipino sandals which protect the bottoms of her dainty feet, and when she and her lover finally set off for the Lunetta or to some grand church 'flesta" under the influence of the balmy zephers from the Pacific, the entrancing strains of music from the native band (the Filipinos are born musicians) and the witchery of Perfecta's plump, bare shoulders and arms, it is not surprising that Angel soon succumbs and in about two months' time Padre Pedro has a job, for which he charges all the way from 200 'pesos according to the length of the ceremony and the number of candles burned. Such is the tale of love in the Philippines Oh! there is nothing the matter with the climate. Come out, Frank, and you, who have lived in Iowa for 30 years without mating will in six months' time be a married man if you follow my directions. There are any number of fine looking "mestizas" here, and middling white too, who have money and are looking for American husbands The chances are if you went to the provinces you would have an offer from the father of the girl or even from the girl herself, after you have been here three months, as actually happened to one of the teachers. I repeat, the climate of the Philippines is all right."

Wou'd Do His Part.

A preacher, raising his eyes from the pulpit in the midst of his sermon, pas paralyzed with amazement to see his son in the gallery pelting his hearers with horse chestnuts. But while the good man was preparing a frown of reproof, the young hopeful cried out "You tend to your preaching, daddy, and I'll keep 'em awake."—Ex.

In this issue appear the announcements of John Hammill, of Britt, for county attorney, and J. H. Mulkins, of Goodell, for supervisor from the Third District. We believe both these gentlemen are well qualified for the offices to which they aspire.

We are glad to be able to state that all the smallpox patients are well on the road to recovery and that no new cases have developed this week. It is gratifying to note these facts, and we hope and trust that no more cases will develop.

It didn't take Bro. Brackett long to find out that we had smallpox in Klemme and he published it as soon as he found it out, but he hasn't yet discovered that they have the same disease in Garner, at least 'nary' a word does he say about it. Perhaps he was so busy preparing that sermon that the little smallpox news item escaped him, eh, Doctor? Consistency, etc.

Klemme feels indignant and is inclined to say harsh things of the health officer, Dr. Sams, who ordered a quarantine of their infested houses, but if the first case had been properly diagnosed and quarantined the disease would probably have been confined to that case. Every town in Iowa of any size has had its smallpox experience, but it has only become a contagion where the ignorance or criminal negligence of the local physicians permitted it to spread. The Iowa smallpox is evidently a very mild form of the disease but it is terrible contagious, and bad cases are proportionately more frequent as they become more numerous, so the health officer should be commended and sustained and aided instead of criticized and opposed. The quarantine regulations at times seem harsh in their severity, but they are none too much so. Self preservation demands their rigid enforcement.— Clarion Democrat.

Bro. Elder is simply laboring under a delusion, probably caused by the reports printed by such papers as the Belmond Press and the Goodell Gimlet. We do not hear anyone saying any harsh things about Dr. Sams. Klemme is not inhabited by a tribe of Indians. The smallpox patients are all quarantined, and all the kicking we hear is being done by the newspapers of neighboring towns.

CONGRESS.

Washington, March 11.—Senate.—For several hours today the senate had the ship subsidy bill under consideration. Mallory, of Florida, made an extended speech in opposition to the measure. He analyzed the bill carefully and held that there was no good reason for its enactment into law, saying he believed it would not accomplish the results hoped for it by its promoters. His opposition was based chiefly on the ground that it would extend the favor of the United States treasury to private individuals and corporations without a just return for the expenditure. "Congress never in its history," Mallory said, "passed a measure of this character. It has passed many laws to advance private gains under the pretence of public policy, but never one so absolutely bald and bold in its advancement of private purposes as this measure." He would go as far as any senator to put the American merchant marine on a footing of equality with that of other nations, but he could not endorse a measure so at variance with every public [illegible] and justice. Frye referred to the fact that it had been claimed that the clause in section 6 of the ship subsidy bill, which directs payment to the owner of vessels "duly registered by a citizen of the Unted States," would place under the provisions of the bill the four ships that had been admitted to an American register. He therefore submitted an amendment, which was adopted, making the clause read "hereafter built and registered in the United States or now duly registered."

House.—The house today entered into consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill, as usual during general debate on an appropriation bill, the members who spoke devoted themselves to everything except the bill before the house. Early in the day Thayer, of Massachusetts, attempted to take advantage of the division among the republicans on the subject of reciprocity by bringing forward a resolution to investigate reports that the sugar trust would be the chief beneficiary of Cuban reciprocity. He tried to overturn a decision of the speaker in order to secure action on his solution, but the republicans came up solidly against such a course and he was checkmated. Brantley, a Georgia democrat, made a speech in favor of Cuban reciprocity, and Meyer, a Louisiana democrat, against it. Hill, of Connecticut, made some remarks on his monetary bill. The feature of the day, however, was a speech by Burleson, of Texas, attacking Secretary Hay for declining to request the British authorities to furnish passports to go through the British lines to Rev. Hiram W. Thomas and wife, who desire to go to South Africa to distribute Boer relief funds collected in Illinois.

Washington, March 12.—Senate.—Again today the ship subsidy bill occupied practically the entire time of the senate. McCumber presented a carefully prepared argument, in which, as a representative of an agricultural state, he favored the bill on the ground of its protective features. Depew, one of the members of the committee on commerce, delivered an elaborate speech, in which he analyzed the arguments both for and against the proposition to pay subsidies to the shipping industries. Both as an argument and as an oratorical effort the speech was brilliant and was listened to attentively by senators and by throngs in the galleries. His peroration, in which he pictured in glowing language the result of the operation of the bill, elicited hearty applause from the galleries. A few bills were passed, including one providing for the redemption of Hawaiian silver coins and the substitution therefor of American silver coins.

House.—General debate on postoffice appropriation bill continued in the house today, a number of topics being discussed. The proceedings was enlivened by a clash between Corliss, of Michigan, and Richardson, of Alabama, on the subject of the Pacific cable. This is the second time the two members have locked horns on the cable question. Sims, of Tennessee, devoted some time to showing how the house had been "buncoed," he considered, in connection with the permanent census bill. Dougherty, of Missouri, discussed rural free delivery; Jackson, of Kansas, the government ownership of telegraphs, and Greene, of Pennsylvania, the Philippine situation. The latter argued that if we would proclaim our purpose to grant independence to the Filipinos the insurrection would cease instantly.

Washington, March 13.—Senate.—After the passage of a considerable number of unobjected bills today the senate resumed consideration of the ship subsidy measure. Berry, of Arkansas, a member of the commerce committee, which reported the bill, made a vigorous argument in opposition to it. He charged that the bill would foster trusts and monopolies in the shipping industry, and that already J. Pierpont Morgan and associates were forming a syndicate for the control of the shipping of the Atlantic. In this connection, he became involved in a colloquy with Hanna, of Ohio, who maintained that the ships acquired by Morgan from foreign countries could not participate in the subsidies provided by the pending measure. Perkins, of California, another member of the commerce committee, delivered a carefully prepared speech in support of the bill, maintaining that it would add to the prosperity of the entire country. Wellington, of Maryland, presented the credentials of Arthur Pue Gorman, elected a senator from Maryland for a term of six years, beginning on March 4, 1903. They were read and filed. Hale, of Maine, presented the conference report on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. The report was agreed to without comment. In presenting the Hepburn bill for the construction of an isthmian canal, without amendment, and with a recommendation that it pass, Morgan, of Alabama, said the report of the committee would be ready in a day or two.

House.—The house today closed general debate on the postoffice appropriation bill and completed consideration of twelve of the twenty-seven pages of the bill. No amendments were adopted. The principal portion of the general debate today was devoted to the discussion of the appropriations for rural mail facilities. Jenkins, of Wisconsin, presented a detailed statement of his reasons for his theory that Cuba is now under the sovereignty of the United States, which sovereignty, he contends, can not be alienated without an act of congress. Jenkins' views attracted considerable attention.

Washington, March 14.—Senate.—today the ship subsidy bill was under consideration. The measure was discussed by Foraker of Ohio, McLaurin of Mississippi and Harris of Kansas. Foraker supported the bill, although he admitted that he would have preferred to build up the American merchant marine by the levying of discriminating duties. He was willing, however, to defer to the judgment of the majority that the pending measure embodied the better plan. Both McLaurin and Harris opposed the measure on the ground that, in their judgment, it was not constitutional. They maintained that it was class legislation, which amounted to little short of robbery of the people for the benefit of a few ship owners. Harris made the point that the United States now was paying more to the American line for the carrying of ocean mails than was paid to foreign ships for greater service.

House.—The house today passed the postoffice appropriation bill. The only amendment of importance adopted was one to incorporate in the bill the provision to classify the rural free delivery service, passed a few days ago. The Burleson resolution calling on the secretary of state for the facts relative to the case of Dr. Thomas and wife, who desired to go to South Africa to distribute relief funds, was adopted after a short debate, in the course of which Mr. Hitt, chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, introduced a letter from Secretary Hay, explaining what the department of state had done in the premises. Today was private bill day in the house, under the rules, but by agreement the regular order was postponed until tomorrow, in order that the house might proceed with the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill. A resolution was adopted to authorize the secretary of war to loan tents to the Texas Confederate Reunion association, which meets at Dallas on April 22. The conference report on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was adopted.

Washington, March 15.—Senate—Differences of opinion on the republican side appeared in the senate debate on the ship subsidy bill today. Allison of Iowa indicated that he was not quite satisfied with the measure as it now stands, and gave notice of amendments he proposed to offer to it, limiting the time of its operation and limiting the amount of money annually to be paid from the treasury on account of it. He was followed by Spooner, of Wisconsin, who took exception to some provisions of the measure. He was not at all certain that the bill would accomplish the great results which its advocates claimed for it, and he urged that before its enactment into law, definite information upon that point ough to be furnished congress. He did not care to vote for a measure making an appropriation that not only would not accomplish definite results, but which might be simply a largess to ship owners. He gave notice of an amendment which he proposed to offer providing that the bill might be amended or repealed by congress without, however, impairing any contract made under its provisions. This amendment would be a notice, he said, that the subsidy would not be a safe foundation upon which to build largely. Earlier in the day Teller, of Colorado, made a speech in opposition to the measure, and was followed by Mr. Elkins, of West Virginia, with a brief address in support of it, although the West Virginia senator admitted that he would much prefer the adoption of the policy of discriminating duties.

House.—The house devoted today to private pension bills, passing 229 bills and clearing the calendar. This is the largest number of pension bills ever passed by the house at one session. Earlier in the day a resolution was adopted calling upon the war department for information concerning the government transport service between San Francisco and the Philippines.

REVOLUTIONISTS WIN.

Are in Absolute Control Outside Two Big Towns.

New York, March 14.—The revolutionists now hold all interior provinces of the isthmus outside of Panama and Colon, cables the correspondent of the Herald. The Ecuadorean government, the dispatch says, has sent special orders to the local authorities in Guayaquil to make the visit of the United States cruiser Philadelphia as pleasant as possible. Formal protest has been made by the Colombian minister to Quito against the Ecuadorean expedition on the eastern frontier. The protest is based on the tripartitie convention signed in Lima, Peru, in 1894.

VICTORY FOR THE BOERS

BRITISH GENERAL CAPTURED BY DELAREY'S FORCE.

The Casualities Include Several of the British Royal Artillery Killed at the Guns.

London, March 11.—The text of Lord Kitchener's dispatch announcing the capture of General Methuen is as follows:

"Pretoria, Saturday, March 8.—I greatly regret to have to send you bad news of Methuen. He was moving with 900 mounted men, under Major Paris, and 300 infantry, four guns and pompom, from Wynburg to Lichtenburg, and was to meet Grenfell, with 1,300 mounted men at Rovirainesford today. Yesterday morning early he was attacked by Delarey's force, between Twe-Bosch and Palmieteknill. The Boers charged on three sides.

"Five hundred and fifty men have come in at Maribogs and Kraaipan. They were pursued by the Boers four miles from the scene of the action. They report that Methuen and Paris, captured [illegible] baggage, etc., were when last seen, was a prisoner. I have no details of the casualities, and suggest delaying publication until I can send dennite news. I think this sudden revival on the part of Delarey is to draw off the troops pressing Dewet."

In a second dispatch dated Sunday, March 9, Lord Kitchener says: "Paris has come in at Kraaipan, with the remainder of the men. He reports that the column was moving in two parties. One, with the ox-wagons, left Twe-Bosch at 3 a. m. The other with the mule wagons, started an hour later.

"Just before dawn the Boers attacked. Before reinforcements could reach them the rear guard broke. In the meantime a large number of Boers galloped up on both flanks. These at first were checked by the flank parties but the panic and stampede of the mules had begun and all the mule wagons, with a terrible mixture of mounted men, rushed past the ox-wagons. All efforts to check them were unavailing. Major Paris collected forty men and occupied a position a mile in frout of the ox-wagons, which were then halted. After a gallant but useless defense the enemy rushed into the ox-wagons and Methuen was wounded in the thigh. Paris, being surrounded, surrendered at 10 a. m. Methuen is still in the Boer camp."

Then follows the number of casualties as already cabled. The killed include Lieutenants G. R. Venning and T. P. W. Nesham of the Royal Artillery, who were both killed while serving their guns with case-shot.

As Lord Kitchener announced that Major Paris had surrendered, and also telegraphed that he had reached Kraaipan with the remainder of the men, it may be inferred that the Boers released the major and his companions.

London, March 11.—General Delarey's victory is generally admitted to be one of the worst reverses the British have had throughout the war. The newspaper correspondents in South Africa have not yet been allowed to describe the affair. The only additional details available are contained in a further dispatch from Lord Kitchener, which Mr. Broderick, the secretary for war, read just as parliament was adjourning. This dispatch shows that the first confusion was caused by native boys with led horses, who galloped through the mule convoy as the latter was endeavoring, by Lord Methuen's direction, to close on the ox convoy. The disorder among the mules communicated itself to the mounted troops, and the Boers, dressed in khaki and riding alongside the wagons, frustrated all the attempts of the British officers to rally their forces. Great confusion ensued among this portion of the mounted troops, they and the mule wagons galloping three miles beyond the ox wagons, where they were cut off. The force under General Delarey was almost entirely dressed in British uniforms. This made it impossible for the infantry to distinguish between their own men and the enemy when the mounted troops were driven on them. In a private telegram just received here Lord Kitchener says: "I find Methuen has a fractured thigh, but he is reported to be doing well." It is feared that Lord Kitchener's incomplete accounts have not told the worst, but among the newspapers and the public there is a tendency to accept Mr. Broderick's advice to suspend judgment pending the receipt of details. The morning papers fully admit the extreme gravity, and even the humiliation to British prestige abroad, involved in such a reverse inflicted by a body of Boers of equal numerical strength. It is recognized that, although the damage is more moral than material, it will certainly have the effect of prolonging Boer resistance for many months.

Danish West Indies.

Copenhagen, March 10.—The treaty providing for the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States, was discussed in the folkething Saturday. The premier and foreign minister, Dr. Deuntzee made a long speech, which created an excellent impression. Only Johan Ottesen and a few others spoke against the sale of the islands. Ottesen demanded a plebiscite. The question will come up again today. The session was not an open one. There will be two readings of the treaty in open session.

"The principal ingredient in all these patent medicines is the same." "It must be a powerful drug. What is it?" "Printer's ink."

EX-GOV. ALTGELD DEAD.

Death Said to Be Due to Cerebral Hemorrhage.

Joliet, Ill., March 13.—Former Governor John P. Altgeld died in Room 58, Hotel Monroe, yesterday morning at 7:30 o'clock. He had been unconscious since midnight.

Mr. Altgeld was the principal speaker at a pro-Boer meeting Tuesday night in the Joliet theater.

Just at the close of his speech, a sudden dizziness seized him and he was assisted from the stage. The meeting proceeded, the audience not realizing what had happened. Mr. Altgeld was taken to the door of the theater where several vomiting spells seized him. This continued for nearly an hour and was so pronounced he could not be removed to the hotel.

Physicians were instantly summoned and Mr. Altgeld was carried to the hotel across the street. He retained consciouness and urged the newspaper men to keep the affair quiet for fear of alarming his wife. Shortly before midnight he became unconscious.

He remained in this condition until death. At 3:41 in the morning it was thought he had died, but he revived and from that time until shortly before the end showed wonderful vitality, although he made no move.

The medical men here had a banquet that night at which Dr. J. B. Herrick of the Rush Medical college of Chicago delivered a lecture on heart disease. He and other physicians were called from the banquet to attend the patient. They remained with him the balance of the night. When the end came they worked his arms vigourously to revive respiration, but all to no purpose. The cause of death is given as cerebral hemorrhage, there having been apopletic seizure of the brain.

John Peter Altgeld, ex-governor of Illinois, was born in Germany in December, 1847. He was brought to the United States when three years old, settling with his parents at Mansfield, Ohio. He was educated in the public schools and was still attending when the war broke out. Although only sixteen years of age, he enlisted and fought to the close of the war. After the war he taught school in Missouri and studied law, being admitted to the bar in 1869. He was elected state's attorney of Andrew county, Missouri, in 1874 and resigned in 1875 to go to Chicago, where he took up the practice of law. He was unsuccessful as a candidate for congress in 1884, but was elected judge of the superior court of Chicago, serving from 1886 to 1891. He was elected governor of Illinois on the democratic ticket and served from 1893-1895. During his term he pardoned Fielden, Schwab and Neebe, known as the anarchists, and his act caused widespread comment at the time. He was a prominent advocate of the free coinage of silver during the Bryan campaign.

NO WAIT FOR PANAMA BILL.

Senate Committee Satisfied With Nicaragua Canal Route.

Washington, March 13.—The senate committee on isthmian canals yesterday decided by a vote of 7 to 4 to report the Hepburn bill providing for the construction of an isthmian canal via the Nicaraguan route. The action of the committee was taken at a called meeting held during the afternoon, and came after a brief report by Senator Morgan, chairman of the committee, detailing the result of a conference with Secretary Hay as to the status of diplomatic negotiations with the Central American republics concerning the canal. He stated tnat the secretary had told him that there are no negotiations in progress between the United States and Colombia concerning the Panama route, and that the new minister from Colombia had not even presented his credentials; but that on the other hand the representatives of this country and those of Nicaragua and Costa Rica had been in consultation and had agreed upon practically all the points to be covered in concession treaties, nothing really being left in that connection but to put the agreements in writing. He said that the governments of those two countries had manifested a disposition to make all the concessions the United States could ask to aid in the construction of a canal, and that among these concessions is one of perpetual right of way.

Friar Lands in Philippines.

Washington, March 13.—Contrary to published reports, it was authoritatively stated that the president had not appointed any one to negotiate for the sale of the friar lands in the Philippines to the United States. The president, however, has the matter under consideration, and as soon as Governor Taft can arrange for a conference with the president the whole matter will be discussed, with the probability that a commission will be appointed to see what can be done toward acquiring these lands.

Bring Back Carter's Pals.

Washington, March 12.—The officials of the department of justice will make every effort to secure the extradition from Canada of Gaynor and Green, who are charged with complicity in the Savannah frauds for which Captain Oberlin M. Carter was sent to the penitentiary. The officials are looking up the law and the treaty bearing on the subject and as soon as this is completed they will ask the state department to take steps to secure the extradition of the men.

General Methuen Released.

London, March 13.—The following dispatch, dated Pretoria, March 13 has been received from Lord Kitchener: "General Methuen was brought to Klerksdorf today. He is doing well Everything possible is being done for him."

THE INDIAN IN MODERN ADVERTISING.

Along the line of the Santa Fe through Oklahoma, Indian Territory, New Mexico and Arizona are found many tribes of peaceful Indians, whose strange costumes and unique mode of life are very interesting to tourists. The Pueblo Indians of New Mexico and Arizona, including the roving Navajos, are perhaps the best known and most frequently visited. The Moki Snake Dances and the various feasts of the Indians along the Rio Grande river have a national reputation.

In fact, the Indian is now somewhat of a fad, and of late years his blankets, pottery, baskets and silver ornaments have been eagerly sought after by collectors.

Recognizing the advertising value of the Indian, the Santa Fe has recently placed in the windows of its offices at Kansas City, Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Atlanta, some very fine collections of Indian curios. It is also decorating many of its offices with paintings of Indian subjects. Grant, in the belief that announcement of it in newspapers and magazines is obvious, draws attention thereto by the pictorial attractive window dressing.

It is expected removes the cold-winter arrangement Absolutely safe for the giving of what is claimed for Indian dances at Fe line of the Peace, J. Q. being in Arizona stopped ss. Champion, Mich., March 17th, Mrs. A. Wellett, wife of a local photographer, has had a remarkable experience recently.

Mrs. Wellett tells the story this way: "I could not sleep, my feet were cold, my limbs cramped. I had an awful hard pain across my back. I had to get up three or four times every night. I was very nervous and fearfully despondent, I had very little appetitie.

LITTLE FALLS.

Eastern capitalists connected with the Westinghouse Electric Company lately bought the splendid Water Power at Little Falls, Minn., and are now arranging to build trolley lines east and west to tap the adjoining country. The balance of the water power, transformed into electricity, will be utilized for large mills and factories in Little Falls, and for some time to come the eyes of the whole country will be turned towards this city because of the nature and vastness of these improvements.

We own the best business property in the heart of the city, and residence lots near the mills and factories or depot and business district, farm lands in 40, 80 and 160-acre pieces, near the new trolley lines, and 2½, 5 and 10 acre garden tracts inside and adjoining the city limits. This unplatted property will shortly be reached by the city street car system, and could at any time with profit be sub-divided into city lots and blocks.

More money will be made in Little Falls real estate during the next years than in any other conservative and legitimate speculation. We acquired our holdings for little money years ago, before the Water Power was improved, and before the paper mill, flour mills and factories were built and when the Weyerhauser syndicate had not yet located here, at a time when the recent developments above referred to could not possibly be foreseen, and for this reason we can well afford to give others a chance. You can come in on the ground floor by at once addressing A. E. JOHNSON Co., 10, 12 and 14 Washington Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn., or HENNING LANDAHL, Little Falls, Minn.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Men of Affairs

One may sail the seas and visit every land and everywhere will find, that men of affairs, who are well informed, have neither the time nor the inclination, whether on pleasure bent or business, to use those medicines which cause excessive purgation and then leave the internal organs in a constipated condition. Syrup of Figs is not built on those lines. It acts naturally, acts effectively, cleanses, sweetens and strengthens the internal organs and leaves them in a healthy condition.

If in need of a laxative remedy the most excellent is Syrup of Figs, but when anything more than a laxative is required the safe and scientific plan is to consult a competent physician and not to resort to those medicines which claim to cure all manner of diseases.

The California Fig Syrup Co. was the first to manufacture a laxative remedy which would give satisfaction to all; a laxative which physicians could sanction and one friend recommend to another; so that today its sales probably exceed all other laxatives combined. In some places considerable quantities of old-time cathartics and modern imitations are still sold, but with the general diffusion of knowledge, as to the best medicinal agents, Syrup of Figs has come into general use with the well-informed, because it is a remedy of known value and ever beneficial action.

The quality of Syrup of Figs is due not only to the excellent combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants, known to act most beneficially on the system, with agreeable and refreshing aromatic liquids, but also to the orginal method of manufacture. In order to get the genuine and its beneficial effects one should always note the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

Des Moines, March 21.—Appropriations amounting to $1,527,963 have been practically agreed upon by the legislative committees. This does not include $145,000 of the Vicksburg and $30,000 of the Lookout Mountain soldiers' monument appropriations, which will be expended in the next biennial period. Following are the items which go to make up the $1,527,963 extraordinary appropriations decided on:

|---|---|
| Capital improvement | $ 62,500.00 |
| Cherokee, (already passed) | 138,000.00 |
| Extra support Vinton, (passed) | 5,692.00 |
| Extra support C. Bluffs, (passed) | 7,770.00 |
| Trasporting patients to Cherokee | 21,6000.00 |
| Custodian employes, March | 1,620.00 |
| Inaugural (passed) | 1,260.86 |
| Express( etc. (passed) | 1,943.61 |
| Historical society Iowa City | 12,500.00 |
| Assembly employes (passed) | 4,500.00 |
| Indian reservation passed | 7,000.00 |
| Fish and game | 15,000.00 |
| McFarland suit expenses | 230.00 |
| Traveling library | 4,000.00 |
| State University | 96,500.00 |
| Agricultural College | 135,000.00 |
| Normal School | 65,269.35 |
| Board of Control bill | 731,577.50 |
| Vicksburg monument (150,000) | 5,000.00 |
| Lookout mountain (35,000) | 5,000.00 |
| Supreme court judges additional | 12,000.00 |
| District court judges, additional | 53,000.00 |
| Marshalltown employes, additional, | 18,000.00 |
| State Pavilion | 37,000.00 |
| Babies Home | 11,000.00 |
| St. Louis Exposition | 75,000.00 |
| Total | $1,527,963.42 |

This the committees figures, will leave an apparent deficit of $515,963.65 for the biennial period, having figured that the present surplus and the 3 mill levy contemplated—out of which the senate will get small benefit for the satisfaction of appropriations made by this assembly—yields $1,012,000 available for expenditure. Actually however, $200,000 of this is appropriated so that the apparent total deficit will be $751,963.65, if appropriations are made as contemplated by the figures given in the foregoing. Against this however, may be put the $450,000 war claim, the increases in income from corporations of one kind or another, the increase in the collateral inheritance tax, etc.

SHOOTING AFFAIR AT AMES.

Student Angered at Being Hazed Wounds One of His Tormentors.

Ames, March 21.—J. R. Campbell of Webster City, a student at the State Agricultural college, shot a fellow student, J. A. Lawrence, through the shoulder. Lawrence had hazed Campbell and otherwise aroused his anger. The shot struck Lawrence full in the breast, glanced on a pocket comb and passed through the shoulder.

Webster City, March 21.—J. R. Campbell, the young student at the State Agriculturtl college at Ames who shot a fellow student, J. A. Lawrence, through the shoulder, resides three miles northeast of this city. He bears a good reputation among the younger society set of the city, to whom he is well known. Lawrence had hazed Campbell and otherwise roused his anger to a point where Campbell, his physical inferior, shot him upon coming face to face with him on the campus. The shot struck him full in the breast, glanced on a pocket comb, and thus diverted, passed through the shoulder. Campbell's friends here are much surprised at his rash action. His parents have been notified, but as yet no action has been taken looking toward a prosecution other than the confinement of Campbell.

WAR CLAIM TO BE REDUCED.

Government Agent Sizer Makes Recommendation.

Des Moines, March 21.—The state of Iowa will not get over $100,000 from the United States on its war claims. This is the estimate of the limit placed by Auditor Sizer of the treasury department, when he was here going over the records with Captain Lothrop who had been employed by the state to assist in the work.

Mr. Sizer went through the accounts very carefully. He contended that the payments of the government to the state as made from time to time during the war and immediately afterwards, should have been applied by the state to the payment of the bonds of the state on which the money was borrowed and to the payment of interest then due. In fact, the earliest payments were turned direct into the state's war funds. If the position taken by Mr. Sizer is maintained then Iowa will not get more than $100,000 at the outside and may not get that much.

Carnegie's Gift Accepted.

Cedar Falls, March 22.—Word has been received from Andrew Carnegie that he will give a library building to Cedar Falls on the usual terms, which will be accepted. The officers have been in correspondence with Mr. Carnegie for some time past.

Aged Lady Fatally Burned.

Clinton, March 24.—Mrs. Betsy Bailey, an old lady of Maquoketa, was burned to death at the home of her brother in that place. Mrs. Bailey was alone in her room and it is thought her clothing caught fire from the stove.

JOINT SESSION ASKED.

Legislature Asks Board of Control to Show Where Money is to Go.

Des Moines, March 24.—Hamann of Scott has introduced in the house the following concurrent resolution providing for a joint session of the house and senate, and requesting the board on control to appear before the same and explain in detail the appropriations demanded for the support of the penal and charitable institutions of the state. The resolution is self-explanatory and reads:

"Be it resolved, by the house of representatives, the senate concurring, That the members of the board of control be invited to appear before a joint meeting of the house and senate to discuss before it the appropriations asked of the Twenty-Ninth general assembly for the state institutions under the control of the board, and that the house and senate convene in joint session at 7:30 oclock p. m. on March 26, 1902, for that purpose."

Hamann said that his idea in presenting the resolution was to have the whole legislature know something of where this money was to go, and the needs for such money, rather than simply the appropriations committees. He stated that the general assembly itself was entitled to the honor or blame in this matter rather than two committees.

This action is the first display of an undercurrent prevailing in both houses to cut down the amounts allowed the board of control institutions and add to the amount to be given to the educational institutions.

SUNDAY BASE BALL IS HIT.

Prohibited by Action of The House of Representatives.

Des Moines, March 21.—The house yesterday passed a bill by Nagle of Van Buren, which includes baseball and football in the list of games and amusements which are not to be played on Sunday. The violation of this statute is a misdemeanor, and is punishable by a fine of not less than $1 or more than $5 for each offense.

The effect of the bill, if it passes the senate and becomes a law, will be to do away with ball games in small towns on Sunday. These games are usually attended with profanity, much noise, and more or less drunkenness, and there being no efficient police regulations in small towns, the peaceable and law abiding citizens of the communities are unable to secure protection, many times the games being played on vacant lots within a short distance of residences, and even under the very doors of the churches and Sunday schools.

In Des Moines and in other towns where league baseball games are played, the statute will have very little or no effect, for the reason that its enforcement will be simply a mulct or license upon the management. In Des Moines, for instance, where the Sunday attendance is from 3,000 to 4,000, and the receipts of a single game from $1,500 to $2,000, the management would simply pay the fines of the players, which would probably be the minimum, therefore making the mulct or license for a Sunday ball game $22.

DAM BILL IS PASSED.

House Gives State Game Warden Power to Condemn Fishway.

Des Moines, March 24.—The house passed the bill providing for the condemnation of a fishway, and for the erection of a fishway in the Bonaparte dam, and making an appropriation for the expenses thereof, and prescribing penalties for injuring or destroying such fishways.

The bill was called up by Sweeley of Woodbury, and by consent was considered without reference to the committee on appropriations. The cost of constructing such a fishway is estimated at from $400 to $2,000.

The Bonaparte dam has been an eye-sore to the sportsmen of the state for a quarter of a century. Actions were begun to compel the Meeks Bros., owners of the property, to construct a fishway, and the cases carried to the supreme court only to be won by the owners of the property.

Four years ago the Meeks had a bill pending before the legislature to condemn the property, paying therefor nearly $25,000. The bill just passed removes forever, unless legal complication arise, the objection of the sportsmen of the state to the impediment, blocking the northward passage of fish from the Mississippi to the smaller streams of the state tributary to it through the Des Moines river.

IOWA LEADS ALL STATES.

New York, March 22.—A list made public for the first time of the late library endowments by Andrew Carnegie shows the fabulous amount of $900,000 in all. The list comprises forty-two cities, spread all over the country.

Iowa is plainly the most fortunate of the states, no less than seven of her cities being made gifts ranging from $10,000 to $25,000. Iowa City heads the list with this top figure. Oskaloosa comes next with $15,000, then comes Atlantic with $12,500; Denison, Hampton and Maquoketa falling in with $10,000 each. In all the gifts amount up in Iowa alone over the one hundred thousand dollar mark.

The city holding the largest single gift in the whole list in Denver, Colo. This city received the very neat present of $200,000.

Killed by a Train.

Marshalltown, March 22.—Henry Rockenfield, of Chelsea, was struck by a Northwestern train here and instantly killed. He stepped from the track to avoid one train and was struck by another. He was about 60 years of age and quite well dressed. The body was badly mangled.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, March 18.—Senate.—The senate passed the bill to amend the road laws so as to conform them to the new statute extending the time of assessing railroads from March to July. S. F. 127, was passed. It turns over to the state board of health half the fees collected from itinerant doctors. Originally it also provided that certificates of doctors could be revoked by the state board of medical examiners without the vote of all the schools represented. The senate also passed a bill providing that children under 14 years of age shall not be employed in mines, factories and workshops to exceed six hours a day.

House.—The house passed the Vicksburg monument bill without an opposing vote. It appropriated $150,000 for Iowa monuments on the Vicksburg field. Of this, $10,000 is to be expended during this biennial period. Representatives E. J. Bealer, Nate E. Kendall and others made eloquent speeches in favor of the measure. The Des Moines fire and police commission bill passed the house, after the publication clause had been stricken off so that it cannot become a law until July 4, if the senate concurs in the amendment. This gives the incoming mayor the appointive power over the policemen and firemen who will be in office when it becomes operative.

The house passed the resolution to adjourn April 3, but the senate has decided not to pass the resolution, until it is plain that adjournment can be taken that day. It is thought adjournment will not come until April 10.

Des Moines, March 19.—Senate.—The senate debated the Emmert bill to create a reformatory for men at the penitentiary at Anamosa and appropriate $30,000 therefor at great length, amended it so persons convicted of rape, arson, burglary, or murder shall not have the advantages of the reformatory, and defeated it. Senators Courtright, Dowell, Fitchpatrick, Garst, Harper, Hubbard Lyons, Maytag, Townsend voted for it, only. Among bills passed were the following: By Edwards, requiring telegraph and telephone companies to file maps and schedules of their lines with county auditors; by Courtright to allow notice of election on granting public franchises in municipalities to be punished by posting when no newspapers are published within the corporation; by Courtright, providing that the right of inheritance from parents and children by adoption shall be the same as between parents and children born in lawful wedlock; repealing the law discriminating against foreign insurance companies in the matter of taxes, fixing their tax at 2.5 per cent, or the same as the companies of the United States outside of Iowa pay. In executive session the senate confirmed the appointment of L. G. Kinne to succeed himself as member of the board of control and of T. E. McCurdy to succeed J. D. McGarraugh as custodian of the capitol. Senator Harriman voted against McCurdy.

House.—The Crossley primary election bill failed to pass the house Wednesday, there being only 48 votes for it to 51 against. A motion to reconsider was filed and the bill will be called up again. The general provisions of the bill are as follows: All parties shall hold their primaries on the same day; these primaries are to be governed by practically the same rules as govern the general election, the judges and clerks to be the same; delegates selected at the primaries are instructed to vote for the candidates receiving the largest vote in their respective precincts. All returns are to be made to the county auditor, who is to certify them to the conventions of the respective parties. Senator Crossley, Representative Greene and others interested in the bill are engaged in amending it to some extent and another attempt will be made to secure its passage. The biennial election amendment passed the house Wednesday with only sixteen votes against it. It has already passed the senate and will now be referred to the next general assembly, by which it must be passed before it can be submitted to the people. It has been properly recorded in the journal of each house so as to insure its constitutionality on this score. The bill appropriating $37,500 for a stock pavilion at the state fair grounds was passed.

Des Moines, March 20.—Senate.—The senate passed the Hamann house bill, with amendments, granting the right of eminent domain to interurban trolley lines, allowing them to use the highways, applying to them all of the laws relating to railroad corporations, but prohibiting them from entering cities as street car lines for purposes of transporting freight. That is, they may operate within cities as street car lines for the transportation of passengers, mail and baggage, but if they haul freight they must use the streets as railroads and pay abutting property owners damage, getting in return perpetual franchises. The senate concurred in the house amendments to the bill creating a fire and police commission to superintend these departments in the city of Des Moines and the bill now awaits the signature of the governor to become a law. The bill to require telephone companies to file profiles of their lines and make annual reports to county auditors and to report to the executive council instead of the auditor of state, was defeated.

House.—The house passed the Molesberry bill removing the limit of bonded indebtedness which Iowa railroad companies may incur. The vote was 65 to 13. The bill has passed the senate and awaits the signature of the governor. Clarke called up H. F. 351, establishing a law regarding negotiable instruments uniform with the laws of other states and repealing sections 3043, 3045, 3049, 3050, 3051, 3052, 3054 and 3055. He explained the measure at some length, stating that it had been adopted by a number of foreign countries, by nineteen states of the union, and that there was a great necessity for such a law in this state. The bill he stated was simply a codification of the law and decisions on the subject to conform to similar laws in other states. After a short debate the bill pased. Among bills passed were the following: Prohibiting baseball and football on Sunday; placing cat fish on the ilst of protected fish; providing that hoisting engineers must have two years' experience before certificates of competency are issued to them. The house adopted by a narrow margin the conference report recommending a substitute for the former resolution endorsing the Hoar bill in restriction of injunctions, but did not vote on the resolution itself. The house committee on insurance has voted to recommend for passage the Merriam bill for the creation of a department of insurance, separate from the office of the auditor of state, who has superintended insurance business in Iowa.

Des Moines, March 21.—Senate.—The senate spent all of the day in debate upon the bill fixing the salaries of sheriffs in the counties of this state at about present figures, but providing that whether sufficient fees are earned or not the legal salaries to sheriffs and deputies must be paid by the supervisors. The bill was passed. A bill to require county superintendents to report county institute expenditures was also passed.

House.—The house failed to adopt the resolution endorsing the Hoar bill, proposed by the conference committee, Friday morning. The vote was a tie, being 45 to 45. After the vote Temple moved to appoint a new committee and the motion prevailed. By a vote of 36 to 57 the house defeated the bill to create a reformatory at Knoxville to occupy the abandoned home for the blind.

Des Moines, March 22.—Senate.—Among bills passed were the following: Defining sodomy; the Harper bill to authorize the drawing of petit and grand juries in 1906 if the biennial elections constitutional amendment passes; to authorize communities which have voted taxes to aid in building bridges to vote more taxes to buy them; to regulate the sale of gasoline lamps, and to permit the generation of the gas from gasoline within as well as without buildings.

House.—The house passed the bill authorizing the fish commissioner to build a fishway in Bonaparte dam, in the Des Moines river, over which the state and the owners of the property have been in controversy for a quarter of a century. Among other bills passed were the following: To prohibit and punish the secret or unlawful tapping of water mains and electric light wires; to protect the property of public libraries and reading rooms against vandalism; to authorize cities which have voted taxes to aid any corporation organized under the laws of this state for the construction of a highway or combination bridge across navigable rivers to vote additional taxes for the purchase of such bridge. This bill applies to Clinton.

CHINESE OUTBREAK SERIOUS.

European Powers Decide to Maintain Garrisons at Shanghai.

Victoria, B. C., March 24.—According to advices received from the Oriental liners which arrived, the reformers are at the back of the big revolution in southern China, which is a widespread and serious movement. Coincidantilly the report comes from Kan Su and Monolia in the northwest of outbreaks fomented by Tung Fu Hzin, the ex-Boxer, aided by Mongolian princes. The correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury says that 10,000 rebels have massed there to move on Kwang Si towns. From Shanghai comes news of excitement over the decision of Germany to maintain her garrison there, which means that France, Great Britain and Japan will also be obliged to have garrisons there and Shanghai will become an international garrison town.

A terrible accident is reported from West Japan, where an avalanche slid down upon a petroleum works beneath a high hill, February 18, causing the death of over a hundred Japanese. About eighty bodies were taken out.

Warehouses, offices and dwellings were crushed, and in parts not entirely buried fire started, and all the buildings, with the entombed people, were burned.

The Shanghai Mercury says that before his death Li Hung Chang surrendered full privileges to Russia in Manchuria, and the present negotiations now going on are said to be a blind to hoodwink rival powers. The Mercury says that had Li not died, his adhesion to Russia's policy would have involved China in war.

THREAT BY GEN. MILES.

Washington, March 21.—General Nelson A. Miles yesterday told the senate committee on military affairs that if the bill introduced by Senator Hawley at the instance of the war department for the organization of a general staff for the army should become a law he would decline to longer hold his commission. The reason that he gave for the statement is that the bill is utterly subversive of the interests of the military establishment and he said that he would not be a party to such a proceeding to the extent even of continuing to hold his place.

The statement was made in the course of a prolonged hearing by the committee which was conducted behind closed doors, and in which Gen. Miles touched upon a variety of subjects connected with the army.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Copyright, by STREET & SMITH, New York.

Not that shots were uncommon in San Jose by any means, for where men carry arms continually it is only natural that an occasional explosion occurs.

But there was something peculiar about this discharge—it came in the midst of silence, and seemed, as indeed it must be, a signal.

Jack struck a match and lit his pipe. It was none of his funeral, any way, and if on the morrow the good people of Gautarica woke up under another dynasty, why that was their lookout. The recollection of Barrajo gave Jack something of a shock, for he remembered the expressed determination of the general that he should be made a full-fledged citizen of the stormy little republic, with all the rights and privileges that citizenship implied.

Could that mean duties, too?"

Would he be expected to sally forth and join in the game of hide and seek, of shooting at one who wore the rival colors, whether in arms or endeavoring to escape?

He guessed not. Still he dared not go to sleep—who would care to do so when a volcano was in eruption all around?—and the night gradually wore away.

The clamor died away a dozen times, only to break out afresh.

At last, dawn.

Jack Overton was jolly glad to see it arrive through the little window.

He devoutly prayed he might not pass another such night for a long time to come.

Somehow, he could not but speculate as to the complexion of the new dynasty, and what effect, if any, the change might have on his fortunes.

Then came a heavy rap on the door—a rap he knew full well could proceed from no other than Barrajo. So Overton, pipe still in hand, stepped over to the door and opened it.

He had no sooner done so than a mighty cheer went up from more than two score of throats.

Jack stared in amazement, for he realized that the whole army of the republic was represented in that double line of shouting and gesticulating troops, some of them barefooted, others most gorgeously appareled, and all carrying arms.

General Barrajo stood there, smiling and bowing.

To say that Overton was surprised, would be expressing it mildly—he could not for the life of him understand why the general wanted to marshal his ragtag and bobtail army before his little domicile in order to tell him who was "in" and who was "out" at the palace. To Barrajo he must look for an explanation, and when a wave of that hero's sword again brought silence upon the scene, Jack hastened to ask:

"What does this mean, general?"

"They want a speech, Senor Overton—it is customary."

"Then why don't you give it to them?"

"Por Dios! It is not Barrajo they wish to hear. Every day I make them a speech and swear at them in six languages. It is you, senor, you alone, they clamor to hear."

"Good heavens! why should I address your old army?" demanded Jack, aghast, and with growing uneasiness.

"Because, Senor Overton, you have been appointed to rule over us—last night you ceased to be a plain citizen and became the President of Gautarica Republic!"

CHAPTER XI.

Jack Moves On the Palace.

You could almost have knocked Jack Overton down with a feather when he heard Barrajo make this astounding declaration—in fact he was tempted to pinch himself, in order to discover whether he were awake or sleeping.

It was not Jack's habit to appear distressed—whether the announcement were a huge canard, or given in dead earnest, he did not mean these men of Gautarica should see him staggered, so he quickly pulled himself together and, laughing, said:

"Ah! indeed! Thank you for the honor, but tell me, how did this little event transpire?"

"In the natural course of events, your excellency. The noble army had grown weary of Roblado, whose promises of reform were never kept. They liked Montejo no better, and, as usual, elected me dictator, with the power to choose their next President."

A wave of the sword brought out another blast of cheers and whistles and vivas—then silence.

It was wonderful.

"But, see here, I am an alien!" protested Jack, weakly.

"Not so—you have been a full-fledged citizen of the republic for two days, and, as such, as eligible to the presidency as any man among us," declared the general, smiling blandly.

"Then I can't decline?" dubiously.

"It is too late—presidents die and run away, but they never decline."

"Well, in that case, I might as well make the best of a bad bargain and go in. Only I warn you, general, I shall really be the president, and the reforms you have heard me speak of must engage our immediate attention."

Now, few men could have adapted themselves to the situation in that masterly manner!

"Are you ready to take the oath of office?"

"At any time," was the nonchalant reply.

Some people might have thought such a solemn ceremony necessitated pomp and full dress—they might even have been horrified at the sight of the new president standing in his shirt sleeves within the doorway of his adobe domicile, with his pipe between his teeth, holding up his right hand and repeating in Spanish the oath of office, which Barrajo uttered for perhaps the thirteenth time in his long-held capacity as dictator.

Thus it was done.

The general called for a farewell round of cheers, and they were given with as much good will as the husky and parched throats that had been in positive evidence all night could muster.

Then the rabble betook itself off, much to Jack's relief, the general not forgetting to give the highly entertaining military salute due to the exalted office his friend and protege now occupied.

Having once embarked upon the sea of adventure, Jack had become quite reckless as to what port he brought up at.

There was at least a chance that this astonishing change in his fortunes might mean a material advance in the line of his dream, for he had never yet heard of a president of a Central American republic who had not managed by some means or other, fair or foul, to amass wealth by virtue of his position.

Book Two.

The Modern Argonauts.

Two years had flown since Senor Jack was duly installed in office as president of the republic—such a period Gautarica had never seen before, and would hardly witness again in the next decade. It would be impossible to narrate the many successes and failures Jack made during those two years, nor shall I attempt it, since more important events await our attention.

About the only cloud in Jack's sky was Dona Juanita, who had become passionately enamored of him. Barrajo, who dearly desired to see him settled down, advised him to marry her, and cast his fortunes for all time with the people of his adoption.

Whereupon Jack felt compelled to narrate the whole story of his past, and Barrajo was so affected by it that he fell upon his neck and wept tears of sympathy, generous old soul that he was.

But Barrajo was fearful of the revenge Dona Juanita might take if her love were openly repulsed, and finally confided to Jack the plan he had for the advancement of their fortunes. Briefly it was this:

When Cortez, with fire and sword, scourged the fair land of the Montezumas to the north, and his savage soldiers dealt out death with a lavish hand whenever the people failed to respond to their stern orders for more treasure, a reign of terror had swept over the whole of Mexico.

Then it was that thousands fled to the unknown southland, led by their priests, seeking new homes amid the forest-clad wilderness of Central America.

Since the object of Cortez's brutal soldiers' decree was to gain possession of what riches the country possessed, these guardians of the temples, before indulging in flight, despoiled them of the golden images and jewel-studded altars, which vast treasures they carried with them, determined that, come what might, these bearded barbarians from over the sea should not succeed in accomplishing their boasted object.

History tells of the wonderful booty secured by the Spanish conquistadors; indeed, the imagination is appalled at the extent of the riches they secured. In Peru, the people, hoping to ransom their captive Inca, Atahuallpa, from the cruel hands of Pizarro, had readily filled a room seventeen feet square and as high as a man could reach with gold in the shape of ingots and statues from the temples and palaces, and history likewise declares that the quantity of treasure conveyed away and concealed forever from the covetous eyes of the Europeans "was said to have infinitely surpassed that which they had secured."

As in Peru, so it was also in Mexico, richest of all the native countries of the new world—there fugitive priests carried with them to the new land to the south probably the most astounding collection of treasure ever gathered together since the world began.

This was the bee that for years had buzzed in the bonnet of old General Barrajo—he had never let it get out of his mind day or night in all that time.

"And, Senor Jack," he now declared, triumphantly, slapping the president familiarly on the back, "success has crowned my long search. Yes, por Dios, senor, I believe I have found the treasure."

CHAPTER XII.

A Sentinel of the Centuries.

When he heard what General Barrajo had to say Jack Overton found some difficulty in restraining his delight. Should this enormous fortune fall into their hands how his sanguine dreams would be realized, and what wonderful things he could accomplish.

Barrajo disclosed a rude parchment map, supposed to have been drawn by an Indian many scores of years before.

Overton, with that readiness characteristic of the enterprising American, at once made a duplicate copy of the same.

Then they talked over the wonderful matter in a most serious way, arranging their plans even down to the most minute details.

The crisis was coming none too soon, Jack concluded, for unless something happened to get him out of the country there must presently be an explosion.

He had feared it of late, for Dona Juanita was beaming love upon him every time they met, and from more than one quarter he found black looks bent upon him by the jealous-minded young gallants of San Juan.

Many a conqueror of kingdoms has met his fate finally through the vengeful hand of a woman whose love he has treated lightly.

Overton cursed the hour when he first saw this dark-eyed houri luring her two rivals to meet in deadly combat so that the public ball might wind up in its usual blaze of glory.

Here then came old Barrajo, just in the nick of time, it seemed, with a grand project which, if successful, would open up an avenue of escape.

Thus Overton was doubly anxious to make a start, having so much at stake.

The general declared two days would be quite sufficient to make all his preparations, for he believed in being adequately armed and equipped for any emergency.

It was a moonlight night when they set out, and as usual San Jose was given up to music and merry making.

Our two fortune hunters waited until near the noon of night, when the hot time in the old town had in a measure subsided, and then, suitably disguised so as to conceal their exalted personality from curious eyes, quitted the capital, where the electric lights still glowed and announced the presence of modern institutions.

When the two men left San Jose and plunged into the interior they did not know their movements had been closely watched, and that immediate pursuit was given, yet such was the case.

Evidently others there were who suspected Barrajo's wonderful plans for fortune's favors and meant to take a bid in the same quarter. Perhaps it would grow interesting before the end was reached, especially since the two adventurers carried plenty of arms and were grimly resolved to fight for the prize if it came to that point.

Barrajo soon left the main trail, and they were now traversing what had once been a path through the primeval forest, but was so overgrown with swinging vines that the keen machete of the general was kept swinging most of the time in order to hack out a passage.

Which would naturally make it an easy matter for those who followed to keep upon their trail.

Our two adventurers traveled all day, and at sunset camped for very necessary rest and refreshment. After a hasty meal, only carrying their arms and a pick and shovel between them, to be used in emergencies, they advanced in the direction Barrajo had marked out.

His reasoning was sound.

If Jack doubted it at first, he was presently convinced that the general had built wisely.

"Madre de Dios! Look, Senor Jack!" suddenly exclaimed the dictator, starting back, and pointing to some object beyond.

The white moonlight sifted through the tangled masses of tropical verdure above, and at that particular moment fell full upon what appeared to be a human form, bent partly over in a devotional attitude, and facing the rising moon.

Jack was startled at first, but, seeing no motion to the figure, which was partly covered by the wild undergrowth, he realized that it was a rude statue, carved to represent a sun-worshiper and placed there hundreds of years ago by those who fled from the Spanish reign of terror to the north.

They approached closer, and marveled to find this image apparently of silver.

STORYETTES.

Once during a heated debate between Senator Joseph B. Foraker, of Ohio, and Senator Joseph W. Bailey, of Texas, the question of law in Texas and law in Ohio came up. The passage became warm. Foraker, by way of a parting shot, told Bailey that if he would come to Ohio he would learn a great deal of law that he did not know. "If there is so very much law to be learned in Ohio," remarked Bailey, "I must advise the senator to spend all his spare time there. He needs it."

Thomas A. Edison is deaf, but, like many whose hearing is defective, he sometimes understands what is said when it is least expected. There were visitors one day at his laboratory, to whom, as usual, he was polite, although busy, and he patiently answered many questions unnecessarily shouted at him. Finally one of the visitors, the humorist of the party, said to another: "I bet he'd hear if we ask him to take a drink." "Yes," said Edison, looking directly at the man, and smiling, "I would; but no, thank you, not today."

Some years ago a Philadelphia preacher inaugurated in his Sunday school the practice of having the children quote some scriptural text as they dropped their pennies into the contribution box. One the first Sunday in question, a little shaver walked up, and said: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," and in dropped his penny. "Charity shall cover a multitude of sins," and in dropped the next. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," quoted the third, and so on. Just then, up walked a little fellow with the unmistakable remnants of molasses candy on his chubby face, and, as he dropped his cent, he bawled out, "A fool and his money are soon parted."

Superior quality and extra quantity must win. This is why Defiance Starch is taking the place of all others.

Recent explanations in Egypt have unearthed the consecutive order of seventeen kings, thus establishing a firm foundation for the investigation of Egyptian history.

If you have not yet tried Defiance Starch, just ask your dealer what others say about it.

Idleness is the incubator of a good many small sins.

Many School Children Are Sickly.
Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for Children, used by Mother Gray, a nurse in Children's Home, New York, cure Feverishness Headache, Stomach Troubles, Teething Disorders and Destroy Worms. At all druggists, 25c. Sample mailed free. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Butter is now packed in a manner that permits of its carriage from Australia to Europe without losing its freshness. A box is formed of six sheets or ordinary window glass, and the edges are sealed with gum paper. This box is then inclosed in plaster of paris one-quarter of an inch thick, this being again covered with special paper. The plaster is a bad conductor of heat, so the temperature inside the bix remains the same. Boxes are now made to hold 200 pounds of butter, and the cost of packing is 1d a pound.

The New York Times tells of a New York woman who had a slight cold. She was advised by a faith healer to consult one of the cult, but she declined to accept the suggestion. Later the cold disappeared, but in its place came a bill for $5 with the information that by absent treatment she had been cured by a healer she had never seen. The bill was ignored, but it was followed by others, in quick succession, and, finally, from a truly American distaste for a row, it was paid.

FREE
A NEW CURE FOR KIDNEY AND BLADDER
Diseases, Rheumatism, etc.

Disorders of the Kidneys and Bladder cause Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Gravel, Pain in the Back, Bladder Disorders, difficult or too frequent passing water, Dropsy, etc. For these diseases a Positive Specific Cure is found in a new botanical discovery, the wonderful Kava-Kava Shrub, called by botanists, the piper methysticum, from the Ganges River, East India. It has the extraordinary record of 1,200 hospital cures in 30 days. It acts directly on the Kidneys, and cures by draining out of the Blood the poisonous Uric Acid, Lithates, etc., which cause the disease.

Rev. John H. Watson, testifies in the New York World, that it has saved him from the edge of the grave when dying of Kidney disease and terrible suffering when passing water. Mr. James Thomas, Esq., of the Board of Review Bureau of Pensions, Washington, D. C., writes: Was cured of a usually fatal Kidney Trouble after many physicians had failed and he had given up all hope of recovery. Hon. R. C. Wood, a prominent attorey of Lowell, Ind., was cured of Chronic Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder Disease of ten years standing by Alkavis. Many ladies including Mrs. E. R. Dinsmore, South Deerfield, Mass., and Mrs. James Young, Kent, Ohio, also testify to its wonderful curative power in Kidney and allied disorders peculiar to womanhood.

That you may judge the value of this Great Discovery for yourself, we will send you One Large Case by mail Free, only asking that when cured yourself you will recommend it to others. It is a Sure Specific and can not fail. Address, The Church Kidney Cure Company, 406 Fourth Ave., New York.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, March 22, 1902.

Attorney General Mullan has rendered an opinion to the auditor of state on the question whether a state bank organized prior to the enactment of section 1863 of the code, which desired to renew its corporate existence, had to recall such stock which was issued in shares of $50 each and reissue in shares of $100 each. The attorney general holds such reissue was not necessary and that the provisions of section 1863 of the code requiring $100 shares of state banks applied only to banks organized after it became a law.

The house committee on appropriations has decided to recommend for passage a substitute to the bill providing $60,000 for a state arsenal and adjutant general's building. The substitute provides the appropriation shall not be available unless it comes out of the money that it expected from the federal government to pay interest on the war bonds and war warrants. The proposition is to erect this building on the grounds at Eleventh street and Capitol avenue, just east of the state house. The committee felt the bill was meritorious and, inasmuch as the department has saved nearly this amount in the last few years, that it was due to the guard that the appropriation be made. There were large savings made by the department during the Spanish war. These reverted later to the general fund.

Senator Harper has introduced a bill providing an apropriation of $10,000 for the purchase of paintings for the state historical bilding. The paintings will include portraits of Governors Gear, Sherman, Larrabee, Boies, Jackson, Drake and Shaw.

Congressman Hull received the Polk county delegation to the congressional convention by a vote of 137 to 104. Judge Prouty made an address withdrawing from the contest, but adding that he would again be a candidate in 1904.

The Moore bill to allow $1,000 annually to the Iowa State Poultry association was recommended for passage, also the bill to allow $1,000 annually to the Iowa State Dairy association.

The house committee on agriculture held a session and decided to recommend for passage the bill to permit the Des Moines Street Railway company to enter the state fair grounds. This bill is desired by the state department of agriculture, which wants the company to run a line from north of the Grand avenue entrance to the grounds to the amphitheater. This committee killed the bill providing for three assistants for the state dairy commissioner.

Dr. Chappell, local forecast official of the government weather bureau service, has inauguarted a new scheme for the dissemination of weather forecasts. He has had made a large number of small weather signal flags and staffs which he will issue to rural mail delivery messengers with the request that they display them upon their wagons while going over their routes.

The senate committee on pardons by a vote of 4 to 3 decided to report to to the senate against pardoning Wesley Elkins, who is confined at Anamosa, for murdering his father and mother. The question was discussed at great length and three members of the committee were strongly in favor of pardoning him. It is understood that the house committee will report the case out without any recommendation at all.

The house committee on appropriations has recommended for passage a bill appropriating $150,000 to the St. Louis exposition. The committee is not a unit in favor of this, and it is said quite as many favor a quarter of a million as there are that favor a less sum. The committee voted down a proposition to appropriate $100,000 to the exposition. The senate committee has recommended $75,000. The committee also voted to appropriate $100,000 for the erection of the east wing of the historical building. There is a string tied to this, however, in a provision that the appropriation shall not be available unless the state receives the claims from the government for interest on the war bonds and war warrants, and that the money shall be taken out secondary to the $60,000 that is to come therefrom for an arsenal and adjutant general's building. The executive council is authorized to buy so much land as needful, which is supposed to be the land lying between the present west wing and Twelfth street. It is presupposed that a main building shall in the future be built between the two wings. The original amount asked to complete the building was $300,000. It is estimated the main building, which future assemblies are expected to take care of, would cost $200,000. The committee killed the Secor pure food bill, which carried an appropriation of $10,000. The committee recommended for passage the bills that have been indorsed by the senate committee on appropriations, appropriating $7,000 to the Benedict home of Des Moines, the Dubuque Rescue home and the Women's and Babies' home of Sioux City.

Casey—"Did ye hear about poor Flannery?" Cassidy—"Sorra the word." Casey—"Shure, the big stamp hammer in the foundry dropped on his chist an' killed him." Cassidy—"Well, Oi'm not surprised for he always had a wake chist."

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

The people of Iowa should take advantage of the warm weather of spring, summer and fall, when the smallpox epidemic will naturally subside, and stamp out the last vestiges of the disease.

The monthly report of the federal health authorities at Washington, showing over twenty-two thousand cases and over six hundred deaths from smallpox in the United States in February, should serve as a warning in Iowa as well as elsewhere. The disease in this state has thus far been of mild form, and few deaths have resulted, but a slight change of climate might develop a malignant and deadly type of the malady.

Other Iowa cities should follow the example of Des Moines, which has so successfully grappled with the disease, and put it under control. Quarantine, vaccination and general sanitation should be brought to bear in conquering the epidemic.—Des Moines News.

For The Complexion.

The Comvlexion always suffers from biliousnes or constipation. Unless the bowels are kept open the impurities from the body appear in the form of unsightly eruptions. DeWitt's Little Early Risers keep the liver and bowels in healthy codition and remove the cause of such troubles. C. E. Hooper, Albany, Ga., says: "I took DeWitt's Little Early Risers for biliousnoss they were just what I needed. I am feeling better now than in years." Never gripe or distress. Safe thorough and gentle. The very best pills. J. L. Harr.

A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmer Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

Prospective Investors

Should look up information regarding lands along and contiguous to the line of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Ry., before buying. ## CONGRESS.

Washington, March 18.—Senate.—For three hours today the senate had under consideration the bill providing for the protection of the president of the United States and for the punishment by United States courts of those who commit assaults on him. Bacon, of Georgia, opposed the bill, and Hoar, of Massachusetts, and Mason, of Illinois, supported it. Bacon's argument was along the lines of his speech delivered ten days ago. Hoar's speech was largely legal and constitutional. He maintained the right of the government to protect itself against assaults upon its sovereignty through the president. Mason made an attack upon anarchy and its methods, and incidentally sharply criticised an amendment to the bill offered by Bacon. He denounced it as opening the door to special pleading for the benefit of assassins of the president. This drew Bacon's fire. He considered Mason's criticism a personal reflection on himself and resented it with heat. An explanation by the Illinois senator cleared the atmosphere. Earlier in the day a lively debate was precipitated by the effort of Rawlins, of Utah, to have printed as a document some Philippine correspondence. Eventually the matter was ordered printed, as requested. Thirty-nine private pension bills were passed and the calendar cleared.

House.—The general debate on the river and harbor appropriation bill in the house was enlivened today by Hepburn, of Iowa, who made his annual onslaught on the measure. Contrary to his usual custom, Mr. Hepburn found several things in the bill to commend, although some of his criticisms were quite severe. The other speakers today were Ball, of Texas, and Lawrence, of Massachusetts, both members of the committee, and White, of Kentucky, Thompson and Burnett, of Alabama, who spoke in favor of improvements of interest to their districts.

Washington, March 19.—During the entire session of the senate today the bill providing for the protection of the president of the United States was under consideration. Spooner, of Wisconsin, contended that the government had an absolute and inherent right to protect itself against assaults made either upon itself or upon any of its officers. He maintained that an assault on the president was in the very nature of things an assault on the government, for there never was a time when the president was not in the exercise of the duties of his office. His argument was largely legal and constitutional, and throughout was forceful and entertaining and instructive. Hoar, in charge of the measure, elucidated some arguments he had made previously, and Teller, of Colorado, and Bailey, of Texas, spoke briefly upon the bill. The Texas senator said he could not support the measure as it stands, because he could conceive of an assault made upon the president as a person and not as an official of the government. The assault, in that event, ought to be punished precisely as if he had assaulted any other citizen.

House.—The house today made fair progress with the river and harbor bill. After the close of a general debate, twenty-seven of the 116 pages of the bill were disposed of. No amendments were adopted. The general debate today was featureless.

Washington, March 20.—Senate.—Throughout today's session of the senate, the bill providing for the protection of the president of the United States was under discussion. Just before adjournment an agreement was reached to vote on the measure and pending amendments at 4 o'clock tomorrow. The speakers today were Pettus, of Alabama; Hawley, of Connecticut, and Nelson, of Minnesota, in support of the bill, and Rawlins, of Utah; McCumber, of North Dakota; Mallory, of Florida; Carmack, of Mississippi, in opposition to it. The speeches in the main were a reinforcement of arguments that have been advanced heretofore, few new points being raised. The principal point made by the opposition to the measure was that federal officials ought to be treated in the courts precisely as any other citizen. Three substitutes for the bill are pending and will be pressed when the voting begins tomorrow. Soon after the senate convened, Aldrich, chairman of the committee on finance, reported the bill to repeal war revenue taxes.

House.—The house today made very slow progress on the river and harbor bill, disposing of only thirty pages and leaving fifty pages still to be considered. The river and harbor committee again today succeeded in defeating every amendment offered. Bellamy, of North Carolina, during the day took occasion to denounce the Crumpacker proposition to investigate southern election laws as designed to stir up sectional strife. He appealed to the conservative republicans to defeat the resolution. At the opening of the session Hull, of Iowa, reported the army appropriation bill.

Washington, March 21.—Senate.—Two important measures were passed by the senate today, the bill for the repeal of the war revenue taxes and that for the protection of the president of the United States. The revenue bill was passed without division and after only one short speech. Tillman embraced the opportunity afforded by the bill's consideration to protest against the repeal of the duty of 10 cents a pound upon tea. The bill for the protection of the president was under discussion during the greater part of the session. Patterson, of Colorado, made an extended speech in opposition to it and Fairbanks supported it. All amendments to the measure were rejected and it was passed by a vote of 52 to 15. The bill provides that any person within the United States who shall willfully and maliciously kill the president or any officer on whom the duties of president may devolve, or any sovereign of a foreign country, or shall attempt to kill any of the persons named, shall suffer death; that any person who shall aid, abet, advise or counsel the killing of any of the persons named, or shall conspire to accomplish their death, shall be imprisoned not exceeding twenty years; that any person who shall threaten to kill or advise or counsel another to kill the president or any official on whom the duties of president may devolve, shall be imprisoned not exceeding ten years; that any person who shall willfully aid in the escape of any person guilty of any of the offenses mentioned shall be punished as a principal. The secretary of war is directed to detail from the regular army a guard of officers and men to protect the president, "without any unnecessary display," and the secretary is authorized to make regulations as to the dress, arms and equipment of such guard.

House.—The house today passed the river and harbor bill, which has been under consideration throughout the week. Although several minor amendments were adopted, not a single dollar was added to the measure, and as passed it carries exactly what it did when it came from the committee, $60,688,267, including authorizations. Sulzer, of New York, attempted to force a record vote on the final passage of the bill, but only three members, Smith of Iowa, Fitzgerald of New York, and Cochran of Missouri, supported him.

Washington, March 24.—House—When the house met a joint resolution was adopted to allow a monument to be erected on the public grounds at Charlotte, N. C., to the memory of Lieut. Wm. E. Shipp, of the Tenth cavalry, who was killed in the charge up San Juan hill. Among other bills passed was one to authorize the secretary of war to loan tents for the use of Knights of Pythias encampment to be held at San Francisco. Mr. Powers, of Maine, then called up the contested election case of N. B. Spears vs. John L. Burnett, from the Seventh district of Alabama. The report was unanimously in favor of Mr. Burnett, the sitting member, who is a democrat, and it was adopted.

PRESIDENT MAY RETIRE MILES.

He Makes the Statement to Numerous Senators.

Washington, March 22.—The statements made by General Miles before the senate committee on military affairs were discussed by the president with a number of his callers. There is little doubt that these statements will ultimately lead to General Miles' retirement by the president. In discussing the matter with his callers, among whom were senators and representatives, the president took the position that the lieutenant general of the army should entertain toward his superior the same respect that he would expect and demand from his subordinates.

At the cabinet meeting yesterday the publications relating to the statement of General Miles before the senate committee were brought up and consideration of them was postponed until all the facts in the matter became known. It is known that whatever ideas the president had in respect to the treatment to be accorded General Miles his future action will be somewhate influenced by the fact that General Miles' statement before the senate committee has been represented to him as being private. The president proposes to read the testimony before the committee and to consult with different members of the committee on military affairs before finally announcing what he proposes to do. It is significant that long after the cabinet meeting adjourned Secretary Root and Attorney General Knox were closeted with the president. The president is known to have stated that he is tired of the friction in the army and in the event that it is decided that General Miles' statement was a privileged one, he will at no distant day take action looking to his retirement.

READY TO REDEEM PLEDGES.

Cuban Independence Will Come in the Near Future.

Washington, March 24.—General Wood, military governor of Cuba, has arrived here and is the guest of President Roosevelt. The main object of his visit to Washington at this time is to arrange with the president and the secretary of war for transfer of the active control of the affairs in Cuba to the Cuban republic. Soon after his arrival, General Wood went to the war department and had a long talk with Secretary Root regarding the condition of affairs in Cuba. Subsesequently the two officials went to the White House and had a conference with the president. The principal arrangements for the military evacuation of the island will be made quickly. General Woods plans require that he shall leave here not later than next Tuesday night on his way back to Havana to carry into execution the programme fixed by the administration for the formal transfer of government affairs. He will return to Cuba by way of New York in order that he may meet and consult fully with President-elect Palma upon the joint programme of action. President Palma will be inaugurated May 1, and American control in the island will terminate on that date. Owing to the short time intervening and the extent and importance of the work involved, it will be necessary to act promptly.

JOHN DILLON SUSPENDED

IRISH NATIONALISTS ATTACK CHAMBERLAIN.

Chamberlain Retorted to Dillon's Remark That Dillon Seemed to Know Traitors.

London, March 21.—One of the liveliest scenes witnessed in the house of commons since the palmiest days of the Irish Nationalists, ended yesterday with the suspension of John Dillon. During the discussion of the South African affairs, the Liberal leader, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, vigorously protested against the government's conduct in uttering "malignant slanders" in calling the liberals "pro-Boers." The slanders, Sir Henry said, were used for party purposes. The government which had been going from blunder to blunder, claimed immunity from criticism and it would follow, "the precedent of the evil days of the American war." The speaker proceeded to give a bitter, detailed criticism of the government's treatment of the Boers and its miscalculations, declaring that the honor and interests of the country were just as dear to the liberals as to the most supercilious defender of the governments policy, and the libertls would continue to protest in the name of the righteous and generous traditions of the nation against the methods of the government.

The colonial secretary, Mr. Chamberlain, in the course of an equally incisive reply, said that he desired to deliberately accuse Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman of losing no opportunity for slandering his countrymen, the soldiers and the government. Consequently the "malignant slanders" had come from the other side.

The speaker, Wm. Court Gulley, here intervened and declared that the term "malignant slander" was unparlimentary. Both Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Mr. Chamberlain withdrew their words amid cheers.

Mr. Chamberlain proceeding, referred to the Boers who are fighting on the British side. John Dillon interjected: "They are traitors," on which Mr. Chamberlain retorted: "The honorable gentleman is a good judge of traitors."

A scene of great confusion ensued. When order was partially restored Mr. Dilon demanded a ruling on Mr. Chamberlain's words.

The speaker said: "An honorable member spoke of soldiers serving under the British flag as traitors. I deprecated the interruption and I deprecated the retort of the other member."

Mr. Dillon then said: "I will tell the right honorable member that he is a damned liar."

A dead silence followed this remark. Such unparliamentary language seemed to stun the house.

The speaker invited Mr. Dillon to withdraw the expression, but the latter said: "I will not withdraw."

"Then I must name you said the speaker.

The government leader, A. J. Balfour, then said: "I beg to move that Mr. Dillon be suspended from service in the house."

The motion carried, 248 to 48.

Mr. Dillon's suspension, under the present rules, cannot exceed a week. His offense would have been much more severely dealt with had the new rules been in force.

HAGUE TREATY RATIFIED.

Was Confirmed by the Senate Without Division.

Washington, March 15.—The senate spent an hour in executive session yesterday on the convention growing out of The Hague peace conference, relating to the conduct of war on land and sea, and finally ratified the agreement without a division. The discussion turned entirely on the conduct of the war in the Philippines, and related especially to General Funston's capture of Aguinaldo.

Some of the members of the committee on foreign relations said briefly that the ratification of the treaty would place this country in accord with the highest thought of the times, and expressed the hope that the treaty would receive the unanimous support of the senate. Those who raised questions apropos of the discussion disclaimed any intention to prevent favorable action.

The countries party to the treaty are Germany, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, the United States, Mexico, France, Great Britain, Greece, Italy, Japan, Luxemberg, Montenegro, Netherlands, Persia, Portugal, Roumania, Russia, Servia, Sweden, Norway, Turkey and Bulgaria.

The provisions of the treaty are binding only on the contracting powers in case the war between two or more of them, and cease to be binding when a non-contracting power joins either of the belligerents. The most important feature of the treaty, the contents of which have been generally known, is that prohibiting the use of "dum-dum" bullets.

Prince Henry at Plymouth.

Plymouth, Eng., March 18.—The Deutschland arrived here yesterday and proceeded for Cherburg and Hamburg. Prince Henry, who was browned, hardylooking and completely rested after his visit to the United States, spent most of his time on the bridge with the captain or first officer of the steamer.

Get Botha's Brother-in-Law.

Pretoria, March 19.—General Bruce-Hamilton captured a small Boer laager eastward of Vryheid, Southwestern Transvaal. Four Boers were killed, six were wounded and seventeen made prisoners. General Botha's brother-in-law, General Emmett, was among the Boers captured.

DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Pe-ru-na is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy ---I am as Well as Ever."

HON. DAN. A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy."---

DAN. A. GROSVENOR.

In a recent letter he says:

"I consider Peruna really more meritorious than I did when I wrote you last. I receive numerous letters from acquaintances all over the country asking me if my certificate is genuine. I invariably answer, yes."---Dan. A. Grosvenor.

A Congressman's Letter.

Hon. H. W. Ogden, Congressman from Louisiana, in a letter written at Washington, D. C., says the following of Peruna, the national catarrh remedy:

"I can conscientiously recommend your Peruna as a fine tonic and all around good medicine to those who are in need of a catarrh remedy. It has been commended to me by people who have used it, as a remedy particularly effective in the cure of catarrh. For those who need a good catarrh medicine I know of nothing better."—H. W. Ogden.

Treat Catarrh in Spring.

The spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systemic catarrh remedy Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

A Very Strong Letter.

La Farge, Wis. Wm. T. Payne of this place has written a rather startling letter to the papers. He says:

"I was in great pain across my back for four weeks, and was taking medicine from a doctor all the time, but it did not do me any good.

"I bought a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and had not taken more than four or five doses before I noticed that they were doing me good.

"They helped me right along, and I kept on using them till I had used four boxes when the pain left me altogether. One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills has done me more good than five dollars worth of doctor's medicine.

"This remedy has certainly worked wonders in my case, and I feel it my duty to give it the credit due."

Big Industries Built up on Small Articles.

Few people realize the wants and requirements of the eighty millions of people in the United States. Who would think that it requires over a million dollars capital to carry on the package dye business in this country, and that there are twelve different factories in the United States that manufacture package dye?

One of the largest package dye factories in the world is that of the Putnam Fadeless Dye Co., Unionville, Mo. In this factory alone over three million packages are put up every year. When you know that each package colors from 3 to 6 pounds of goods, or that the output of Putnam Fadeless Dyes alone will color from 9 to 18 million pounds and that it would require more than 800 cars to haul this amount of dyed goods, you will realize the magnitude of this seemingly small business.

Effects of a big feast are almost as bad as effects of a big drunk.

Nurses' Experience.

Medical men say that a good nurse in a difficult case is better than medicine, but when we can get a good nurse and good medicine, the patient stands a much better chance of recovery. The few words of advice given below by nurse Eliza King, are well worthy the attention of all readers:

"I have constantly used St. Jacobs Oil in the various situations I have occupied as nurse, and have invariably found it excellent in all cases requiring outward application, such as sprains, bruises, rheumatic affections, neuralgia, etc. In cases of pleurisy it is an excellent remedy—well rubbed in. I can strongly recommend it after several years' use and experience. It should be in every household."

Sister CAROLINA, St. Andrew's Hospital, writes: "I have found St. Jacobs Oil a most efficacious remedy in gout; also in sprains and bruises. Indeed, we cannot say too much in its praise, and our doctor is ordering it constantly."

MONEY IN SKATING RINKS.

Four Successful Ones, Paying Large Dividends to Stockholders.

Roller skating rinks, once the most popular resorts of young folks, have been run at a loss for several years, but there is money in real ice skating rinks. There are four in successful operation and they yield satisfactory dividends to their stockholders. One is in Manhattan, one in Brooklyn, one in St. Louis and one in Pittsburg.

Preparation of the floor is the most expensive item. The ice is formed on a floor of special felt-covered boards laid in prepared asphalt. Underneath, in a filling of ground cork, run the pipes conveying the refrigerating brine.

The pipes are usually laid only three inches apart. Though the buildings can be heated by steam to a temperature of 40 [illegible] or thereabouts the surface c[illegible]n be kept hard at all time[illegible]ty brine underneath. [illegible]oke without

The combination of wheat and flour with milk and butter is more clearly marked in Minnesota than in any other state. New York and Illinois are important dairy states; but the value of the wheat crop in New York is less than one-third the value of its oat crop, and less than one-eighth the value of the hay crop, wheat being now one of the minor agricultural products of New York, once the chief wheat state.

Illinois raises a fair amount of wheat but the corn crop, which is of very much more importance, yields in a year $8 to every dollar received from the product of wheat.

Delivering Coal in London.

A proof of the conservative ways of the English people is the manner in which coals for the household fires are distributed and stored.

Instead of the American coal cart, which is loaded in less than five minutes from an elevated coal bin, the American visiting London finds an ordinary wagon made to carry about a dozen large bags of coal, which are filled one by one at an expense of much time and labor, and then lifted into the venicle like so many milk cans.

When an American coal cart reaches the house where its load is to be dumped the cart is backed up against the side of the pavement, the chute is drawn out like the barrel of a telescope, and the end inserted in the coalhole, in a few minutes the entire load, with the rush of water falling over a small cataract, runs down into a heap on the floor of the coal cellar.

In London, on the other hand each bag of coal has to be taken separately from the wagon and emptied as near as may be in the coalhole; and when the task is at last finished the coal which has fallen on the pavement has to be laboriously shoveled into the coal cellar.—Nineteenth Century.

French Woman Barrister.

It is just a year ago since Mlle. Chauvin, the lady barrister, made her first appearance at the Paris bar. Interviewed on her experiences, she states that the fact that she is a woman seems to be forgotten by both bench and bar, and she no longer excites the slightest curiosity at the law courts. She has appeared in some fifty cases during the year, including a divorce case, when she represented the husband and obtained judgment against the unfaithful wife. She far prefers equity work, however, and never wants to enter an assize court. In the first place, she says one has to tell too many untruths there, and secondly, for her part, she resolutely refuses to accept a brief unless absolutely convinced of the justice of her client's cause.

Mlle. Chauvin looks upon the sickening leniency meted out to murderers in Paris, and especially to murderesses with disgust and stupefaction, and added that no woman need trouble to get a divorce; she only need kill her husband to obtain her freedom and become a popular idol.—Paris Correspondence London Telegraph.

Boil Milk and Water.

Milk is an admirable food, containing all the elements of nutrition in a form capable of ready assimilation. Contrary to the universal opinion, however, milk is not always well adapted to the use of the sick. A very active condition of the digestive organs is required for the proper conversion of milk, and the digestive fluids of the sick do not come up to this standard. Moreover, the facility with which milk absorbs gases and develops poisonous ptomaines must be borne in mind. It is in this way a ready source of infection, even when drawn from a healthy cow, and there is little doubt that much of the milk in use is not obtained always from healthy animals. Heat is the most satisfactory of all sterilizers, and when milk is boiled it is probably safe. The boiling also renders it more digestible. The first action of gastric juice upon raw milk is similar to that produced by heat, but it requires a very active solvent. Water is also a familiar source of disease, and all that is used for potable purposes should be previously boiled.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

Artell Haskins was a caller in Klemme last Tuesday.

John Braund has recovered from his recent illness.

Dr. Spooner was a caller here Sunday at Fred Ufford's.

Ernest Braund is on the sick list but is on the mend at this writing.

Tuesday was April Fool and the usual number of fools were on hand.

H. H. Burman and Fred Ufford were callers at the county seat Monday.

Joe Stork has a brand new lumber wagon of the most improved type.

Wm. Temby and wife, of Crystal Lake, were callers at Will Glanville's Sunday.

The farmers who were so busy seeding last week have taken a lay-off the fore part of this week.

The clerk of the weather bureau must have changed places several times last Sunday and Monday the way the weather acted.

If one wants their business done right go yourself, if not send some one else. This adage seems as true today as when first uttered or at least it looks that way to a former Ell Center-ite. It seems that he and his sweetheart had a little fall-out, and a friend offered to mend the matter, and did so in an admirable manner.

Archie Christie hurt one of his limbs, last Friday, by letting a wagon box fall, striking him on the knee and tore the ligaments loose which makes it necessary for him to walk with a crutch.

A Doctor's Bad Plight

"Two years ago, as a result of a severe cold, I lost my voice," writes Dr. M. L. Scarbrough, of Hebron, Ohio, "then began an obstinate cough. Every remedy known to me as a practicing physician for 35 years, failed, and I daily grew worse. Being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, I found quick relief, and for last ten days have felt better than for two years." Positively guaranteed for throat and lung troubles by Harr. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

The winter now is past and gone and gentle spring is here, the whiskey season's over and the bums are drinking beer. The meadow lark will soon be heard in soft and mellow notes and the farmer man will hump himself with the sowing of his oats. The robin and the bluebird will build their little nest and the dude will scare the horses with his Dolly Varden vest. The housewife now with mop and broom will clean the house full well and the man she swore to cherish will wish he was in—well, he would like to go fishing for a few days

Wants to Help Others.

"I had stomach trouble all my life" says Edw. Mehler, proprietor of the Union Bottling Works, Erie, Pa., "and tried all kinds of remedies, went to several doctors and spent considerable money trying to get a moment's peace. Finally I read of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have been taking it to my great satisfaction. I never found its equal for stomach trouble and gladly recommend it in hope that I may help other sufferers." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles. You don't have to diet. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. J. L. Harr.

Choice of Three

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, March 29, 1902.

Judge Holmes sentenced Albert Smith to twenty-five years in the penitentiary at Ft. Madison. By good behavior he can cut his sentence to thirteen years. Smith was convicted of murder in the second degree, having killed Bruce Martin. When Smith was arraigned before Judge Holmes his attorney spoke in his behalf, insisting that Smith had killed Martin with absolutely no premeditation. Smith said he hoped the judge would be "easy on him." A life sentence might have been imposed.

The house committee on public health has recommended a substitute for the bill creating a separate board of examiners for osteopaths. The substitute provides that the present board shall issue certificates to osteopaths who are graduates of incorporated colleges of osteopathy. This changes the law so as to leave no discretion with the board, which at present has the power to decide whether the colleges are "regularly conducted" or not. Under the proposed law the simple fact that they are incorporated will meet with all the requirements. Certificates are only to be issued upon examination in all subjects in which the osteopaths' course of study is the same as that of the other physicians. They will be examined in these subjects along with the applicants from other colleges of medicine. If they pass satisfactorily they will be granted certificates as osteopaths upon their showing diplomas from incorporated colleges of osteopathy. The osteopaths are understood to be fairly well satisfied with this measure, except that they would have liked to have been given a member of the board. The committee also recommended for passage the bill creating an inebriate hospital. This is the bill favored by H. H. Abrams, his plan being to have one of the wards in one of the insane hospitals of the state turned into a hospital for inebriates. The Hughes bill providing that all loaves of bread shall weigh at least one pound was recommended for passage.

The senate committee on ways and means recommended for passage the bill exempting from taxation $800 worth of property belonging to old soldiers, with the amendment that having property amounting to $5,000 should not have the exemption.

It was discovered in the house that the house had been concurring in senate amendments to house bills by a viva voce vote instead of repassing the bills by roll call. This is held to invalidate all bills so passed and those of them which have been signed by the governor will have to be repassed, resigned and republished. Four have been discovered and the journal is being carefully inspected to reform the error. The requirement of roll call is constitutional, so that the defect would be vital.

To the surprise of the coal mine operators the executive committee of the United Mine Workers reported to the miner's convention in favor of accepting the proposition made by the operators and receding from the demands made by the miners. The convention adopted the recommendation without opposition and adjourned sine die. The decision of the executive committee effectually disposes of the danger of a strike of the miners of Iowa this year. The proposition which the miners agreed to accept commits the operators to the employment of shot examiners and permits the miners to employ shot firers. The acceptance of the miners is on condition that the shot firer question shall be settled locally. The miners confidently expect the legislature to compel operators to employ shot firers, and accepted the proposition in the belief that the law will soon require the operators to do what they demanded.

The senate committee on ways and means recommended for indefinite postponement the house and senate bills revising the collateral inheritance laws.

The house committee on insurance recommended for passage a standard policy bill, drafted by the members of the committee acting under the advice of the attorney general.

The house committee on elections recommended for passage the Kerr bill, restricting the amount of money to be spent by candidates for nomination and election, and requiring them to file a schedule of the same. The Hayward bill, making a slight change in the registration laws, was recommended for indefinite postponement, and the Meservey bill, requiring registration for ... election, was referred to a ... committee and will be recommended for passage.

The house judiciary committee voted to report out the bill establishing a board of control for educational institutions with the recommendation that it be considered no further this session. A resolution was adopted, expressing the belief that the bill contained much merit, but that owing to the fact that the session was so near a close, it could not be carefully considered. It was recommended, however, that a similar bill be introduced early in the next general assembly.

AFTER WHITECHAPEL.

State Accuses Women of Violating the Mulct Law.

Des Moines, March 28.—County Attorney John McLennan, backed by the Good Citizen's League of Des Moines, has commenced a wholesale raid on the women of Whitechapel, who are said to be engaged in the sale of liquor contrary to the Iowa mulct law. Fourteen original notices were placed in the hands of Sheriff Mattern and his deputies to serve on parties in Whitechapel and other sections of the city where this lawlessness is said to exist. These notices have been served and accepted and an order of the court will issue prohibiting the defendants from selling liquors anywhere within the limits of the Ninth Judicial district of Iowa. Judge Holmes of the criminal division will issue the temporary writs.

County Attorney McLennan stated that the prosecution of Whitechapel habitues, and others known to be violating the provisions of the state liquor law, would not stop with the fourteen mentioned. The Good Citizen's League, which is behind the county attorney, is already gathering more evidence to be used in obtaining injunctions against others. Members of the league and detectives, hired for this purpose, are said to be making investigations with a view to ascertaining who is engaged in the illegal sales. As fast as this evidence is obtained it will be turned over to the county attorney, who will employ it in obtaining temporary restraining orders.

The proceedings in temporary injunction will, in all probability, lead to wholesale indictments against the women of Whitechapel and in other sections of the city where it has been discovered violations of the liquor law have been practiced.

Assessor French upon hearing of the action commenced for the girls of Whitechapel district assessed the owners of the property in which these cases are conducted with quarterly mulct assessments of $150. There are twenty of these property holders in all.

OFFERED A COMPROMISE.

Molsberry Suggests Bill to Meet Objections of Governor.

Des Moines, March 31.—Senator Molsberry introduced a bill in the senate, Saturday, which, it is commonly understood, solves the difficulties of the situation presented by the veto of of the executive of the "merger" measure.

The bill is in the form of an amendment of or substitutee for section 2049 of the code, and while called a substitute, it actually amends the present law in two particulars, which will be elucidated. The present law, section 2049, is as follows:

"Any railway corporation organized under the laws of the state may mortgage its property or franchise in whole or in part to secure bonds issued by it to pay or refund its indebtedness, to improve or develope its property, or for the purpose of effecting the object of its incorporation, to be issued in such amounts, run for such length of time, be payable within or without this state, and bear such rate of interest not to exceed the legal rate in the state at the time of issue as the company issuing the same shall determine."

Senator Molesberry's compromise bill proposed to re-enact this section in the following language:

"Any railway corporation organized under the laws of the state may, notwithstanding the provisions of section 1611 of the code, incur indebtedness, or liability, by an issue of bonds, or otherwise, and may mortgage its property and franchise, in whole or in part, to secure the same, in order to pay or refund its indebtedness, to improve or develop its property, or for the purpose of effecting the object of its incorporation, and any issue of bonds to be in such amounts, run for such lengths of time, be payable within or without this state, and bear such rate of interest, not to exceed the legal rate in the state at the time of issue, as the company issuing same shall determine."

It will be understood that section 1611 referred to is the one which provides that corporations shall not issue bonds in excess of two-thirds of the amount of their capital stock.

PARDON FOR ELKINS.

Senate Committee on Pardons Reports Three Resolutions.

Des Moines, March 31.—Senator Whipple, of the committee on pardons, reported three pardon resolutions—for Joseph McCreary, of Mills county; Gearge Stanley, of Story county; and J. W. Elkins of Clayton county. The latter case was reported without recommendation; four members of the committee opposing the pardon and three favoring it. The resolution provides for a parole under drastic conditions for ten years, to be followed by a full pardon. The full pardon of McCreary and Stanley is recommended. The resolution for parole and pardon of Elkins is as follows:

"That the governor be authorized and that we hereby recommend that he grant to John Wesley Elkins a parole under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, and which said conditions shall contain the following: That he shall in all respects conduct himself honorably, avoid evil associations, obey the laws and abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors for a period of ten years, and if at the end of said period he has not violated any of the conditions of his parole he shall be entitled to his final discharge and restored to the rights of citizenship."

VETOES "MERGER" BILL

GOVERNOR CUMMINS RETURNS THE BILL TO THE SENATE.

The Governor Says the Act is Class Legislation and Unconstitutional.

Des Moines, March 28.—Governor Cummins yesterday announced his veto of the Molsberry bill, better known as the "merger measure." The bill removed the limit of indebtedness per mile that may be contracted by railways running through Iowa.

It has been persistently claimed by those opposing the bill that it was introduced and pushed through by the Burlington railway's lobbyists for the purpose of enabling that corporation to take over the Nortnern Securities company's stock in case the latter loses its case in the federal courts.

A hush fell upon the senate when, shortly after ten, the message from the governor was announced. It was felt at once that it was a veto upon the much discussed Molsberry bill. On motion of Porter the message was read and proved to be the return of the bill without the governor's approval.

The message pointed out that the bill was unconstitutional in that it created a class legislation opposing the principle that all laws should be general and of uniform application but ... it were not contrary to the constitution, he could not give it his approval anyway.

Corporate power to issue stock and incur indebtedness needs restraint rather than greater freedom. Not a state had been found that conferred upon railways the unlimited power to incur indebtedness, and to take off such limitation in this state was to confer a license which had no parallel.

The measure is unconstitutional for the reason that it favored one class of corporations, namely railways, over other corporations and that it discriminates in favor of the railways operating lines both without and within state limits by removing the limitation of indebtedness as to them while leaving the old law in force as against lines wholly within the state. The real application would not be to enable the two or three roads to improve their property but to overcome real or imaginary difficulties in the purchase of stock by certain roads, which he specified as the Burlington, and other lines associated with it in the Northern Securities company.

BOARD OF CONTROL HEARD.

Argue Successfully for Liberal Appropriations.

Des Moines, March 28.—A joint conference of the entire membership of the general assembly was held last evening in the house chamber for the purpose of hearing members of the board of control in regard to the omnibus bill recommending appropriations for state charitable institutions. Senator Ball was made chairman. The three members of the board, Chairman Cownie, and Judges Kinne and Robinson, were present. They went over the ground in about the same manner as argued in the biennial report to the legislature.

The object of this joint session was for the purpose of relieving the appropriations committee of the responsibility of making extraordinary appropriations, which perhaps may result in an increased tax levy. The appropriation committees desire that whatever honor or stigma which may be attached to the voting of such appropriations should be be borne by the whole legislature instead of by the minority comprising such committees. Throughout the entire session last night few expressions were heard which would indicate any great desire on the part of the legislators to reduce the amount of appropriations recommended by the committees. It is generally believed that the omnibus bill will suffer few changes so far as the aggregate appropriation is concerned.

IOWA MAN IS THE CHAMPION.

Won the Sportsman's Review Trophy in Live Bird Shooting.

Kansas City, March 28.—Fred Gilbert, of Spirit Lake Iowa, won the fifty bird shooting match for the Sportsmen's Review trophy, and thus takes absolute possession of that cup. The contestants were Gilbert and Elliott tied on 47 out of 50, Crosby losing four birds. In the shoot-off at ten birds, Elliott lost his first, second and sixth birds, Gilbert killing ten straight

Boys Body Found.

Glenwood, March 31.—The body of Ralph Helms, who ran away from the institution for feeble minded March 17, was found in a field several miles south of here. The two lads who ran away from the institution with him returned the same day badly frozen, and it is supposed he was frozen to death. He was sent to the institution from Chariton, where his only relative, an uncle, lives. He was fifteen years old.

Reward for Murderer.

Missouri Valley, March 31.—It has been decided that a reward of $750 will be offered for the apprehension of the slayer of J. E. Brainfield, who was murdered and robbed of about $3,000 near this city on the night of March 1. Governor Cummins signified a willingness to give $250 for the state if Monona and Harrison counties will each give a like amount, which the officials of the county have decided to do.

Iowa Girl Poisoned.

Milford, March 31.—Ethyl Hunt, the 12-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Hunt, was poisoned by eating highly colored candy and in spite of all that two physicians could do, died in great agony.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, March 25.—Senate.—The senate passed a bill providing for the reorganization of the Iowa supreme court. It increases the salaries of the judges from $4,000 to $6,000; it prohibits them doing work for compensation other than that received from the state; it requires them to be in continuous session for nine and a half months in the year; it provides that they shall take the submission of only as many cases at one sitting as they are able to determine and finally decide within one month. The law is to go into effect January 1, 1904. The bill will require the residence of the supreme court judges in Des Moines. The senate defeated the Crossley bill to give the state board of educational examiners power to issue life diplomas and state certificates to teachers who do not pass examinations, but who are graduates of accepted and approved courses of pedagogy in the colleges of the state. The bill was designed to do away with the biennial cry for more normal schools. It did not receive a constitutional majority, the vote being 23 to 21.

House.—The house by a vote of 67 to 16, 17 members being absent, adopted a resolution in favor of the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. The joint resolution by Temple amending the constitution so as to increase the number of members of the house of representatives from 100 to 108, was passed. The question of creating a department of insurance was brought up and the bill was referred to the committee on appropriations after a contest, the result of which leads the friends of the department to believe that the proposition will be defeated.

Des Moines, March 26.—Senate.—The senate passed the house bill appropriating $150,000 for monuments to Iowa soldiers at Vicksburg Military park. Eloquent speeches were made by Senators Blanchard, Healy, Courtright, Harriman, Young, Crossley, Tallman, Ball and others. The vote was unanimous and the chamber was filled by veterans of the war, who cheered the speakers. Lewis introduced a resolution for final adjournment on April 9. The senate inclines to the belief that adjournment may be accomplished next week. The bill by Senator Young of Washington, to appropriate $35,000 for monuments to the Iowa soldiers at Chattanooga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge, was passed, as was also the bill appropriating the balance of the Shiloh appropriation (about $2,500) for dedicatory expenses for the Shiloh monuments.

House.—The house passed the bill increasing the salary of the governor to $5,000 per year, but defeated the clause increasing the salary of the governor's secretary to $1,800. The following bills were also passed: Increasing the annual appropriation for the state board of health from $5,000 to $7,000 per year; increasing the salary of the secretary from $1,200 to $1,500 per year; appropriating $5,000 per year for the establishment of a bacteriological department, $1,500 to be salary of the bacteriologist; providing that in counties of 36,000 the county attorney may appoint a deputy at a salary to be fixed by the board of supervisors, but not to exceed $1,000; in counties of less than 36,000 deputies may be employed at a reasonable compensation to be fixed by the board of supervisors.

Des Moines, March 27.—Senate.—Governor Cummins submitted his veto of the Molsberry bill, removing the limit of bonded indebtedness of railroads. The senate passed the Anderson road bill. It preserves the township scheme of disbursing the road tax, but requires the tax to be collected in cash. It is one of the most important measures considered by this general assembly. It makes the township road tax 3 mills and the county road tax 1 mill. The house concurrent resolution endorsing the Lacey swamp land bill was passed.

House.—The house passed the tax ferret bill to limit the collection of back taxes to a period of five years. It required the ferrets to be residents of the county where employed, for at least eighteen months, but this was changed to require residence in the state only. The bill providing for the establishment of an inebriate's ward in the state hospitals was passed. It will enable the courts to commit men addicted to excessive use of intoxicants, narcotics and drugs to this ward, instead of the insane hospitals. The house defeated a resolution to adjourn April 5. A sifting committee resolution and one to prohibit introduction of bills except by unanimous consent were introduced.

Des Moines, March 28.—Senate.—The senate passed the compulsory education bill, 35 to 5; Senators Arthaud, Ball, Crawford, Hogue and Young of Lee voting against it. The bill was amended so as to take it out of the power of the teacher or school authorities to have children sent to the industrial (reform) schools until of age for mere habitual truancy and without the consent of the parents. An amendment was adopted giving boards of directors the right to hire truant officers, but not compelling them to do so. The bill as finally adopted provides that all children between 7 an 14 years of age shall attend school at least twelve weeks a year. Parents or guardians who have control of children and do not observe the law shall be fined from $3 to $20 for each offense. Moffat's resolution to adjourn April 5, was rejected. Trewin moved to postpone consideration of the governor's veto of the Molsberry so-called merger bill until Tuesday at 2 p. m., and the motion carried, 28 to 18. Healy's bill to give constructing railroads the right to condemn more than 100 feet for depot and right of way purposes with consent of the railroad commission, was passed. The senate voted not to recede from its amendment to the interurban trolley bill requiring these roads to pay damages for rights of way.

House.—The house voted to indefinitely postpone the senate's railway taxation bill, providing for the assessment of railroad properties in Iowa on a basis of the value of their stocks and bonds. The vote was 61 to 30. The house voted to concur in the senate amendments to the Anderson road bill and it will now become a law with the signature of the governor. It requires the payment of road taxes in cash and means the improvement of roads in Iowa. The house also concurred in the senate amendment to the compulsory education bill, taking it out of the power of the teachers of the state to have children sent to the reform schools for truancy alone. The house refused to reconsider the vote on the Crossley primary bill by a vote of 42 to 40. English called up the motion to reconsider. It was explained that the bill had been changed so as to make it applicable only to the counties desiring it. Among other bills passed were these: Permitting the Des Moines City Railway Company to construct a line inside the state fair grounds; authorizing the attorney general to defend an ex-treasurer of state in any actions brought against him for the recovery of fees; providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate the methods of registration of titles and report to the next general assembly; to encourage the planting of trees by the remission of taxes on the land on which the trees are planted; providing for the inspection and supervision of schools for the training of teachers for the common schools and providing that fifteen schools of the state maintaining a course in pedagogy and approved by the board of educational examiners may receive $500 each from the state each year; providing that Iowa insurance companies shall only pay taxes on business done in this state and further providing that reinsured risks shall not be taxed to the companies reinsuring them.

Des Moines, March 29.—Senate.—The bill relative to interest on state funds was indefinitely postponed. The bill fathered by Secretary Davison, of the executive council, to prevent the publication by the state societies of scientific pamphlets, such as the treaties on Iowa grasses by the State Agricultural college, etc., was passed. The Classen bill to amend the law of the last assembly so that the pension money of members of the Home at Marshalltown required to be deposited with the commandant on account of the infraction of the rules, may be paid out for other purposes than "the necessary wants of the members," as at present, and readjusting the payment of pension money to the families of members, was passed. The bill to give the adjutant-quartermaster and surgeon at the soldier's home authority to occupy their houses and get fuel, water and lights without charge, in addition to their salaries, was passed. Mardis' bill for the construction of fire escapes on all buildings of a public character—factories, halls, hotels, etc., was passed. It is one of the most important measures suggested in this session of the legislature. The senate bill to protect the state treasurer from liability as an individual on account of suits brought to recover from him as treasurer of state funds collected by him and turned into the treasury under color of law, as amended by the house, was passed.

House.—The Des Moines viaduct bill was passed without opposition. There was a small attendance and important measures were not taken up.

TWENTY-FOUR DROWNED.

Great Loss of Life in The Tennessee Floods.

Nashville, March 31.—As additional reports reach here the enormity of the damage from the floods of Friday and the night before in middle Tennessee continues to grow. It is known that twenty-four lives have been lost. Property losses, the railroads being the heaviest losers, are estimated at $2,500,000. Stories from near-by points tell of rising waters and people being driven from their homes, with many narrow escapes from death. At McMinnville the number of drowned is given as five; at Lewisburg four; at Pulaski ten; at Mount Pleasant one; at Harriman three. In most instances the victims were negroes or laborers and their names are not given. At Petersburg, in Lincoln County, the public square was flooded and a whole negro settlement washed away. One man is reported drowned. Two flour mills were swept away. The damage is very great throughout the country.

NO PEACE WITHOUT KRUGER.

The Boer Delegates at The Hague Must Participate in Negotiations.

London, March 29.—Reports from Brussels and the Hague continue to reveal the anxiety of the Boer delegates to have it understood that peace cannot be made without their knowledge and consent. The dispatches are contradictory, but, bellicose as are the declarations attributed to Dr. Leyds, it may be safely assumed that Mr. Kruger has known about Schalkburger's intentions for several months and that he has sanctioned the direct appeal to Steyn and DeWet. The Dutch ministers at The Hague unmistakably are hopeful that peace will be made. They are reported to have warned Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds that better terms could be made before than after the coronation, but there is no method of confirming this rumor.

Omaha is to build a $5,000 smallpox hospital.

A Remarkable Story of Love, Gold and Adventure.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Copyright, by STREET & SMITH, New York.

CHAPTER XII (Continued.)

Jack's hand trembled as he touched the half-bowed and supplicating sentinel that in all these decades, while the world was moving on, making wonderful history, had remained here in the dense jungle, guarding well the secret of those strange people of Aztec times.

Jack estimated the value of the statue at some thousands of pounds in London, even at the present depreciated price of silver.

But they were after higher game, and could well afford to scornfully cast this base bullion aside.

It was not long before the descending pick struck metal, and presently Jack, shovel in hand, had cleared a slab that had a dull lustre not unlike bronze.

Barrajo danced what, in another quarter of the world, might have been termed an Irish jig or a Scottish hornpipe.

"Por Dios! It is just as the document relates. The old Indian did not deceive me. Come, lift the trap with me, Senor Jack. See, stone steps lead down to the ruins of the old Aztec temple. Oh! I tell you, my president, we are the luckiest men on the face of the earth, this night, since we have but to stretch out our hands to clutch fortune."

The invitation to descend, given by Barrajo, as the two fortune hunters surveyed the ancient stone steps leading to some mysterious subterranean depository of the Montezumas was a most welcome sound to Overton.

They had come upon the expedition fully prepared for all emergencies, and the gloomy depths of the yawning pit below had no terrors for such brave hearts, so, taking pick and spade, they began to descend.

At the bottom of the stairway they came to a long slab, forming a lintel over the top of a door. Upon digging the doorway was uncovered and was found to be blocked by a huge metate or native millstone. Carved across its entire surface were inscriptions in the hieroglyphics of a civilized race.

As soon as the doorway had been cut through the two adventurous treasure hunters entered the chamber of the temple-tomb. Mural paintings, representing female figures draped in shrouds and in attitudes of prayer, were on the walls. Niches in the crypt contained a number of skulls, and other bones comprising parts of skeletons were scattered about. These were all painted a bright red. Red, it may be remarked, was the mourning color of the Aztecs.

There were numbers of idols in the cave, doubtless looked upon as exceedingly chaste in these olden times, but their supreme ugliness gave Jack a rude shock when his artistic eye first fell upon them.

However their faults, while many from this point of view, could be readily condoned when the fact was taken into consideration that each and every one of the little monsters seemed to have been fashioned from crude metal, and even Overton's inexperienced eye was able to tell that it was gold unalloyed.

This was glorious—still, it was only a beginning.

With trembling fingers they picked up many of the less weighty images and vases.

By degrees the two men managed to recover their wits and calm down, when they set about a rough estimate of the value of their find.

Overton was fain to agree with the general when the latter exultantly exclaimed that in all probability never before in the history of the world, from the days of King Solomon down to the present time, had such a vast treasure been heaped up in one pile.

It was like a dream—Overton in his wildest moods, when fancy ran away with reason, had never imagined so marvelous a thing.

Finally Barrajo said: "Remember our sacred compact, Senor Jack—an equal division if we both live; should misfortune overtake us while we are in the act of removing the treasure, the one who survives is entitled to all, after he has settled a few bequests we have taken the pains to write jointly. Is this so understood?"

"It is in the bond general; and may heaven deal with me as I deal with you."

They solemnly shook hands as if to again ratify the bargain.

Barrajo and Jack had as yet no suspicion that they were followed from San Juan, and, eager to begin operations, the two comrades had each seized upon several images that were most handy and began to lug the unresisting captives toward the exit.

Barrajo ascended the steps first and Jack handed up the booty, raising the temple images one by one, while the general piled them outside on the grass beside the overthrown silver sentry.

Jack had handed up the last of their burden, and, still gasping for breath, crawled up the steps himself, anxious to again breathe the pure atmosphere without, after having his eyes and nose and mouth clogged with the fine dust of ages.

Just as he reached the top a hand clutched his shoulder, and Barrajo's husky voice whispered into his ear:

"Hush! Do not move—caramba! I could swear I saw a figure flit through yonder stretch of bright moonlight."

"Ah! that means——"

"We have been followed."

"In spite of our great caution."

Barrajo muttered a few pet phrases as though in this opening of the safety valve he could allow the surplus steam to escape.

"There are some very sly dogs in this world, senor, and we have our share of them in San Jose. Yes, despite the care exercised by one whose long experience made him capable of doing everything possible to throw pursuers off the track, we have been followed."

"There can be no doubt of their intentions," said Overton between his teeth, as he allowed a hand to steal toward his weapons, for the Anglo-Saxon spirit was aroused within him.

"None at all. They want this treasure, and if we hope to win we must fight for it," came the stern reply.

BOOK TWO

The Modern Argonauts.

CHAPTER XIII.

Dearly Won.

Evidences that the general had spoken the truth multiplied quickly, for presently they heard signals, and even caught a glimpse of dark figures flitting from tree to tree.

Perhaps it was the first time on record where white men made a rude breastworks of gold, but lying behind the heap of gold images and vases that Barrajo had deposited upon the ground they awaited an opportunity to cut loose among the persistent shadows that had followed from San Juan.

It was Barrajo who found the first chance, and right well the old soldier improved it.

At least one thing was settled—the imprecations in Spanish that followed the report of his gun announced beyond any possibility of mistake that these dusky, flitting shadows were not the spirits of ancient Aztec priests, but genuine, bonafide adventurers of to-day.

If more evidence were needed they had it when spiteful flashes of fire punctured the dark spaces under the trees, and the rattle of firearms followed.

Some of the bullets whistled over their heads, while others flattened against the novel defense behind which they crouched.

"Five!" muttered the old soldier when the scattering volley had come to an end without doing any damage.

They had quite a little circus for some time, firing back and forth, guided more by the flash of each other's guns than anything else.

When the enemy began to flank their position Jack knew the case was growing desperate, and would require heroic treatment if they hoped to come out at the large end of the horn.

"We must move on their works, general," he declared, when a leaden messenger had sung past his ear, coming from the rear.

They crawled away, keeping almost flat upon the ground and without interruption reached the spot for which they aimed, where at the proper time they could pour a hot and deadly fire into the ranks of the San Jose adventurers as they rushed forward in closing upon their silenced enemies.

All this happened just as Barrajo, who knew the habits and temperaments of his fellows full well, expected, and the fusilade which they opened on the advancing figures sent at least a couple of them to grass before they realized the clever nature of the stratagem played upon them.

The fight, being again open, raged along the whole line.

It was evidently destined to be a little war of extermination—one side or the other must be wiped out.

After further desultory firing Jack heard the awful thud which a bullet makes when it strikes a human being, and caught the husky maledictions that burned his comrade's tongue.

"You are hit," he exclaimed in dismay.

"Yes, and badly, too, I fear. Try to stanch the blood, hombre, as best you can. Your hand trembles—come, bear up; it is but the luck of a soldier, after all. Many years I have mocked the Grim Reaper and laughed in his face—perhaps he has me now. At least, hombre, I shall be avenged. See, our three remaining enemies have come together yonder, by the gnarled oak—you can count the flashes when they fire. It is a glorious opportunity to try the virtues of these experimental bombs, one that may never come again. The secret must die with them."

Jack had just turned his head moodily aside, ostensibly to look for enemies in their rear, but in reality to hide his emotion, when a sudden shout electrified him.

As he faced about he was horrified to see his sorely wounded companion upon his feet and hurrying with uncertain steps toward the spot from whence the last volley had come.

It was too late to stay him, for already the mad general was a quarter of the way over the intervening ground.

His cry had drawn out shots from those in ambush—Jack could see the fire run the gamut of three guns, and at that distance he trembled for his devoted comrade.

As he turned to look for Barrajo he discovered that his worst fears were realized—the old hero had gone down, struck again by a merciless ball.

Then a sudden fury seemed to possess Overton—such a feeling as may make a giant of a stripling—it was the desire for revenge burning in his soul and tingling to the very tips of his fingers, under the impulse of which a man may do the most astounding feats, such as might be worthy of old time heroes.

In that second of time he had sworn an oath to slay those three desperate adventurers or die himself in the attempt.

He had even scrambled to his feet with this stern resolution on his mind, and was in the act of rushing forward to hurl himself upon the ambushed foe, when he discovered that Barrajo was once more rising.

Jack had a pretty good idea as to what was upon Barrajo's mind, so that he was not at all surprised to see him draw back his arm and make ready to cast a projectile.

Overton unconsciously came to a halt and held his breath when he discovered that the general had actually made the cast.

He had no time to speculate upon the result.

There was a blinding flash just in the spot where the trio of adventurers had concealed themselves, a most terrific concussion that actually threw Jack from his feet, and then a deathly silence.

Overton, only a trifle bruised, managed to gain his feet and rush forward.

Where the San Jose treasure seekers had lain hidden the utmost havoc had been done, and Jack knew no human being could have been within twenty feet of that exploding bomb and escaped with his life.

It was a most terrible and overwhelming catastrophe.

He remembered poor, brave Barrajo, hero of a score of battles, such as they are in Central American republics.

It was no trouble finding him.

The general had half raised himself to a sitting position, and was eagerly looking toward the scene of desolation his terrible little hand grenade had wrought.

"It is—victory?" he gasped, as Jack bent over him, and there was a tremor to the old soldier's weak voice that told of the ruling passion strong in death.

"I have no reason to believe a single man of their number has been left alive," Jack returned.

The old warrior feebly waved his arm above his head—Jack would never as long as he lived forget the tragic scene under the whispering gnarled oak.

"Then I am satisfied. It is sweet for a soldier to die when the field has been won."

"But is it so bad as that, my poor friend? May I not be able to save you? I have some rude knowledge of surgery, and Heaven knows I could spare no effort in your behalf."

There was real agony in Jack's voice and the dying man was deeply affected by it.

"Useless, Senor Jack; quite useless. My sands of life are almost run; my race at its end. I have been wounded many times, but never like this. In less than ten minutes I shall be dead; believe me."

"Good heavens! you give me pain, Barrajo. If it were my brother I could not feel more unconsolable."

"Ah, I believe you, senor. We have been good comrades, we two; is it not so?" And we made a sacred compact; you remember it, Senor Jack?" weakly.

"Yes."

CECIL RHODES DIES.

NOTED PROMOTER IS DEAD AT CAPE TOWN.

Health Almost Completely Broken Down During Last Two Years.

Cape Town, March 27.—Cecil Rhodes is dead. Mr. Rhodes died peacefully at 5:57 p. m. yesterday. He slept during the afternoon, but his breathing became more difficult and his strength perceptibly diminished until he passed away.

London, March 27.—The death of Cecil Rhodes came as no great surprise to those few who saw anything of him during his last visit to London during the winter. Whether it was due to his experiences during the long siege of Kimberley, or the accumulated anxieties regarding the war in South Africa, with an accompanying change of public feeling in England towards him there is now doubt he was almost completely broken down within the last two years.

Even his appearance changed. His once finely chiselled face had become bloated and his always huge frame filled out until he became so stout as to make walking a matter of great difficulty.

He was frequently attacked with severe heart troubles, during which he exhibited the stoicism which has marked his extraordinary career.

Nor did he allow his bodily ailments to interfere with business. Among his associates in the city he never mentioned them, nor did he permit them to be mentioned to him. Up to the last Mr. Rhodes kept a firm grip on all those vast South African interests created and controlled by him. Except that he was more irritable and more dictatorial there was no outward change in his method of handling men, millions and empires.

CUBANS TO BE FREE.

DATE FIXED FOR TURNING OVER OF ISLANDS IS MAY 20.

All but the Smallest Details of the Arrangements Have Been Completed

Washington, March 26.—Secretary Root yesterday made public his order to General Wood directing him to turn over the control and government of Cuba to its people on May 20 next. The order requires the Cuban government to assume all treaty obligations and directs General Wood to continue a small artillery force to avoid leaving the island entirely defenseless until the Cuban government shall have opportunity to organize its own forces.

General Wood also is directed to convene the Cuban congress before May 20. He also is directed to consult with President-elect Palma and substitute such persons as he shall desire for those now holding official positions in Cuba.

The order issued by General Miles and General Corbin to carry out the directions given, so far as relates to the return of the United States troops from Cuba, provides that all the troops 800 men of the coast artillery are to be brought to the United States as rapidly as transportation facilities will permit, between now and May 20.

The order also directs the discontinuance of the entire military department of Cuba and places the territory to be temporarily retained by the United States in the department of the east, commanded by Major General Brooke.

General Wood and all the staff officers on duty in Cuba are ordered to report to the adjutant general at Washington for instructions as to their future assignment of duty.

General Wood will leave here today for Havana in order to carry into execution the plans for the transfer of the government.

It is understood that President-elect Palma will not go to Havana until the early part of May.

Secretary Root has requested Secretary Hay to arrange for diplomatic representation of the United States in Cuba. Provision for consular service will also be made.

HANNA IS NOT A CANDIDATE.

Denies That He Has Presidential Aspirations.

Tomah, Wis., March 29.—Senator Hanna has written a letter to C. W. Croty of this city, stating that he is in no sense a candidae for the presidency in 1904, and requesting his friends to discourage any movement to that end.

Mr. Croty wrote to the senator some days ago, and has received the following autograph reply:

"United States Senate, Washington, D. C., March 26, 1902.—C. W. Croty, Tomah, Wis.—My Dear Sir: I have just received your letter of the 19th instant, and wish to assure you of my thorough appreciation of the high compliment paid me in your suggestion in reference to the nomination for 1904. I am grateful for such friendship and confidence, but will say in reply that I am not in any sense a candidate and trust my friends will discourage any movement looking toward that end.

"Thanking you for your courtesy, I remain truly yours,

"M. A. Hanna."

Fire broke out in Talbott's clothing store at Morning Sun in the big brick building owned jointly by Houston & McEllingny and D. H. Morrison. The losses were: Talbott clothing stock, $7,000, insurance $5,000; D. H. Morrison, $4,000 insurance. The fire burned for three hours and was kept from spreading with difficulty.

Peculiar to Itself.

This applies to St. Jacobs Oil used for fifty years. It contains ingredients that are unknown to any one but the manufacturers and their trusted employees. Its pain killing properties are marvellous, as testified to by the thousands of once crippled human beings now made well and free from pain by its use. St Jacobs Oil has a record of cures greater than all other medicines. Its sales are larger than those of any other proprietary medicine and ten times greater than all other embrocations, oils and liniments combined, simply because it has been proved to be the best.

Weak and Sickly Children

Who, perhaps, have inherited a weak digestion, continually subject to stomach troubles, loss of flesh and general weakness, can be made healthy and strong by the use of Vogeler's Curative Compound. Every doctor who is at all up to date will say that Vogeler's Curative Compound will make the blood pure and rich, bring colour to the cheeks, and put on flesh where health demands it. Children who have been weak and sickly since birth should be treated with small doses of Vogeler's Curative Compound, from two to five drops, twice daily, most satisfactory results will follow. It is the best of all medicines, because it is made from the formula of a great living physician.

Sample bottle free on application to the proprietors, St. Jacobs Oil, Ltd., Baltimore, Md.

Walter Dean, Sr., once hired an artist to paint his portrait, with the stipulation that the picture would not be accepted and paid for unless it looked like himself. When the portrait was completed it was sent to Mr. Dean, who did not recognize himself, and absolutely refused to pay the painter. The painter sued and Joe Strong, the artist, was called in to give an expert opinion. "You see the portrait of Mr. Dean?" the lawyer asked. "No," said Mr. Strong, "I do not." "There it is," said the lawyer, pointing to the big canvas. "I don't call that a portrait; I call that a map of Mr. Dean," said Mr. Strong.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER CURE.

Mailed to all Sufferers from Disorders of the Kidneys and Bladder, Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Gravel, Pain in the Back, Dropsy, etc.

The following letter from Hon. I. A. Hopkins, Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, Ellsworth, Kan., tells how Alkavis cured after he made up his mind that he had but a short time to live.

Gentlemen:—I believe and know that I owe my life to Alkavis. I had been troubled with Kidney and Bladder Trouble for years. My limbs were swollen with Rheumatism so that I could hardly walk. I had to get up every hour of the night to urinate. I passed great quantities of blood on account of hemorrhage of the Kidneys and Bladder. I tried and had been trying everything in the shape of Medicine for Kidney Trouble that I could think of or that the Doctors recommended, but nothing helped me. I made up my mind that I had only a short time to live. I sent to you for three bottles of Alkavis; began to take it, and before I had taken it one week began to get better. My Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism were soon gone and I am in good health now. I have recommended Alkavis to a great many people and all have been benefited by its use.

Gratefully yours, I. A. HOPKINS."

Mrs. Ida A. Francis, of Mooresville, Ind., writes: "She had been bothered with Kidney and Bladder Trouble ever since she was six years old; did not get any rest day or night, and had to be up fifteen times a night at times. Was also troubled with Rheumatism, Female Complaint and Irregular Menses, also symptoms of Dropsy. Tried many physicians but received little benefit. Two years ago took Alkavis and was completely cured and states she will answer any letter that comes to hand concerning the wonderful medicine." Mrs. Mary Fox, Seymour, Iowa; Miss Viola Dearing, Petersburg, Ind.; Mrs. Jas. Young, Kent, Ohio; and many other ladies join in testifying to the wonderful curative powers of Alkavis in various forms of Kidney and allied diseases, and in other disorders peculiar to womanhood.

That you may judge of the value of this Great Discovery for yourself, we will send you one Large Case by mail Free, only asking that when cured yourself you will recommend it to others. It is a Sure Specific and can not fail. Address, The Church Kidney Cure Company, No. 408 Fourth Avenue, New York.

A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmer Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

Prospective Investors

Should look up information regarding lands along and contiguous to the line of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Ry., before buying. Professional and business men of all kinds should acquaint themselves with the many opportunities offered at the new towns along this railway. On the first and third Tuesdays of March, April and May, round trip tickets, at very low rates, will be on sale to points in the following territory: Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, British Columbia, Canadian Northwest, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indian Territory, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Manitoba, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Mississippi, Montana, New Mexico, Nebraska, North Dakota, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin, Northern Michigan and Wyoming. Full information regarding rates, time of trains, etc., will be cheerfully given upon application to any representative of this company.

TO THE FARMER AND HIS WIFE.

The TIMES has arranged with the Journal of Agriculture, St. Louis, Mo., so that subscribers may receive that valuable paper a whole year for 50 cents, which is just half of the regular price. It is generally conceded that the Journal of Agriculture is one of the finest and most influential farm and household papers in the United States, and that it holds a secure position among the leading lights of the agricultural world. It was established in 1866 (36 years ago) is published weekly and contains 16 large pages, Numbered among its contributors are men whose articles on agricultural matters are accepted as authority. Every issue contains valuable pointers on agriculture, horticulture, poultry, live stock, dairy, bees, etc., besides fiction, poetry, humor and miscellaneous matter. Once a month a beautiful 16-page Magazine, with cover of special design, is issued by the Journal, which appeals especially to the ladies owing to the stories, fashion notes and other fine reading matter contained therein.

The special price of 50 cents hardly pays postage and is only made to introduce the Journal into the homes of our readers. All those who wish to take advantage of this offer will please send 50 cents (in stamps if desired) to the editor of the KLEMME TIMES, Klemme, Iowa, who will arrange at once for a year's subscription in their favor to the Journal of Agriculture. Mention this offer and write name and full address plainly.

CUMMINS' "MERGER" VETO

GOVERNOR REFUSES APPROVAL OF THE MOLSBERRY BILL.

Text of the Governor's Message to the Senate.

Text of the Veto Message.

To the Senate of the Twenty-ninth General Assembly:

I return herewith senate file No. 138, a bill for an act to amend section 1611 of the code, relating to the authorized indebtedness of certain corporations, to your honorable body, without my approval; and in compliance with my duty under the constitution, I respectfully submit my objections to the proposed amendment.

First. I believe the bill to be repugnant to section 6, article 1, and section 30, article 3, of the constitution of the state of Iowa. The former provides that "all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation; the general assembly shall not grant to any citizen or class of citizens, privileges or immunities, which upon the same terms shall not equally belong to all citizens." The latter, insofar as the question here involved is concerned, provides that "In all the cases above enumerated, and in all other cases where a general law can be made applicable, all laws shall be general and of uniform operation throughout the state."

A brief analysis of the bill in connection with the existing law of the state will indicate clearly the point of repugnance. It has been the general law of this state, at least since the code of 1851, that the indebtedness of a corporation organized under the laws of this state is limited to two-thirds of its capital stock. Various exceptions have, from time to time been engrafted upon the general statute, which will be noticed hereafter. The bill under examination removes a certain class of corporations removes from any limitation or restriction respecting the amount of indebtedness that may be lawfully created. The class of corporation thus removed is described in the bill as follows: "Any railroad corporation owning or operating a railroad or railroads in this and any other state."

Holds it to Be Unconstitutional.

The language so used divides, primarily, railway corporations into two classes: first, those corporations which own or operate a line or lines of railway lying wholly within the state; second, those which own or operate a line or lines of railway lying partly within the state and partly without the state. The railway companies constituting the former class, and there are many in the state of Iowa, remain under the restrictions, whatever they are, of the statute. The railway companies of the latter class, and at this time they are few in number, are invested by the bill with additional privileges and powers in that they are permitted to incur indebtedness without limitation. It is, therefore, palpable that a sharp discrimination between the two classes of railway companies is proposed; and the inquiry is, has the general assembly constitutional power to create the discrimination? This subject is one which has often engaged the attention of the supreme court of this state, as well as the supreme court of the United States, and the law respecting it is perfectly familiar. The right of the general assembly, under our constitution, to classify men, municipalities, and corporations, and to impose upon all men, municipalities, and corporations of one class a law that does not apply to other classes, has often been recognized and sustained. It has, however, been constantly declared by the courts that the classification must describe natural conditions and grow out of differences which exist in the very nature of things. The classification cannot be the mere arbitrary will of the lawmaking power. To illustrate, we have a statute imposing the railway companies a liability to an employe, engaged in the hazards of the operation of a railroad, for the negligence of co-employes; and it has been held constitutional although it does not apply to other corporations or employes. Suppose, however, that the legislature had attempted to declare that the railway companies owning lines of railway running east and west should be liable to employes for the negligence of co-employes, and that the railway companies owning and operating lines of railway running north and south should not be so liable. The unconstitutionality of such a measure would be plainly apparent.

Gives a Forcible Illustration.

Again, we have a statute requiring railway companies to use automatic couplers. What would be thought of the validity of the law if this obligation were imposed only upon railway companies "owning or operating a railroad or railroads in this and any other state?" These instances might easily be multiplied indefinitely. We have scores of enactments either conferring powers or imposing duties upon railway companies, and I invite your attention to them to show how futile it is to prescribe a classification respecting the right to incur indebtedness upon the basis that one class is wholly within the state and the other partly outside. The mere circumstance that a portion of a line of railway extends into an adjoining state creates no difference in condition as compared with a line of railway wholly within the state. It is impossible to impute a reason for permitting a railway company that has gone beyond the state to incur indebtedness without limit, that does not apply with equal force to a railway company that has remained within the state. If it is wise to withdraw the safeguards which have heretofore been recognized as to the companies with a line outside the state, it is equally wise to give the advantage, if it be one, to the companies whose lines do not pass beyond the borders of the state. I cannot but regard the classification as arbitrary and groundless, and I am, therefore, constrained to the opinion that the proposed law would be a violation of the constitution.

Another Case of Rank Discrimination.

There is, however, still another classification in the bill that is even less reasonable. It not only segregates railroad corporations which extend beyond the state from all other railroad corporations, but it limits the privileges conferred by the proposed amendment to "railroad corporations owning or operating a railroad or railroads in this state and any other state"; that is to say, before any such company could acquire the benefits of the bill, it must actually own or operate a line both within and without the state. If a railway corporation were organized under the laws of the state for the purpose of constructing a line of railway from Des Moines to Chicago, it would not be within the provisions of the proposed statute, for the reason that it would neither own or operate a line. The very purpose of all the enlargements which have hitherto been made has been to encourage the building of railways; but this bill declares that a line must be already built before the company owning it would have the right to incur indebtedness without limit. I very respectfully submit that such a classification can find no warrant in our constitution and must fall when tested by the authority which controls both the general assembly and the executive.

Would Not Favor it Anyway.

If, however, the bill were in harmony with the constitution, I would be unable to give it my approval, for the reason that it is so radical a departure from the policy which has controlled the state in its relation to corporations for more than a half century, and its effect would, in my judgment, be so subversive of the best interests of the people, that it well deserves further consideration by the general assembly.

A review of the development of the law upon the subject is necessary to a fair understanding of the results of the bill. Section 676 of the code of 1851, relating to corporations for pecuniary profit, provided, among other things, "Such articles of incorporation must fix the highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which the corporation is at any one time to be subjected, which must in no case, except in that of the risks of insurance companies, exceed two-thirds of its capital stock."

Constitutional Limitation Is Absolute.

It will be observed that the limitation upon all corporations is absolute, with the single exception of the risks of insurance companies. This unlimited exception did not long continue, for shortly thereafter laws were passed looking to the examination of the affairs of insurance companies, and restricting the liability upon such risks to the assests of the corporation. Without pursuing in detail the history of these changes, it is sufficient to say that at the present time the first exception to the general rule is stated in section 1611 of the code of 1897, in these words: "Except risks of insurance companies and liabilities of banks not in excess of their available assets, not including their capital." So that insurance companies and banks are limited to their available assets, exclusive of their capital, and the limitation is carefully enforced by periodical examinations made by an officer of the state.

In the progress of time it became necessary to make another exception to provide for the construction of railways, and thereupon railway companies were given the right to issue bonds to an amount not exceeding $16,000 per mile of single track, standard gauge, railway, and $8,000 per mile of single track, narrow gauge railway. But this relief from the general rule has three restrictions. First, the indebtedness must be evidenced by bonds; second, the bonds must not exceed $16,000 per mile, and, third, and most important of all, the bonds must be issued in the location, construction and equipment of the railways.

At a still later period it became necessary to make provision for such loan and companies as were issuing debentures or bonds, and the provision made for them was that they might issue bonds or debentures without regard to the amount of their capital stock, provided, however, that such bonds or debentures are secured by a first mortgage upon real estate of at least double the value of the bonds or debentures. It will thus be seen that the state still imposes a rigid restriction upon loan and trust companies with respect to their indebtedness.

Legislature Knew What it Was Doing.

At a still later time the Twenty-fifth General Assembly enacted a law which is now section 2049 of the code, in which railway companies are given the right to mortgage their property and franchises to secure the payment of bonds issued by them. Whether this statute repealed the limit of $16,000 per mile thereto existing, I do not enquire; but I call your attention to the fact that the limitation still continued in that power conferred was a power to mortgage railway property to secure the payment of bonds issued by the railway companies for certain purposes, and that the bonds were to be issued for the purposes recited in the statue. When you consider that section 1611 as it now appears, and section 2049, to which reference has just been made, were contemporaneously enacted by the adoption of the code of 1897, it may be assumed at least the Twenty-sixth General Assembly believed that there was room for the operation of both.

Insurance Companies Alone Excepted.

The conclusion to be drawn from the foregoing review of the legislation of the state upon the question is that no corporation, save insurance companies, and that only for a brief period, has ever been given the right to incur indebtedness without limit and without regard to the amount of its capital stock or the extent of its property. It has not only been the policy of the state of Iowa, but of substantially every state in the union, to restrict in some manner and some degree the liabilities of its corporations. I have examined the constitutions and statutes of many of the states, and I have not as yet found a state that has conferred upon its corporations the unlimited right to incur indebtedness. Under the policy to which I have referred, Iowa has done well. Her railroad systems are many and extensive. They have been successfully constructed and profitably operated, and, so far as I know, it has never before been suggested that the legislature of the state was not liberal in its grants of corporate power for lawful purposes. The bill which I am examining proposes to take off, for the first time, every limitation, and confer upon a class of railway companies a privilege which, within the limits of my investigation, has no parallel in modern legislation.

Cites the Burlington as an Example.

I beg to refer more specifically to the companies to which this extraordinary license would apply. As I am informed, there were, prior to the 16th day of October, 1901, two railway companies organized under the laws of this state, owning or operating lines of railway in this and another state. They were the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Railway company, and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway company. The former was a complete single track railway, and I am not advised that it is proposing any betterments that cannot be paid for from the earnings of the company. The latter owns and operates an extensive system, beginning at Chicago, Illinois, passing through or into the states of Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma Territory, Indian Territory, Texas and Colorado. This great system has been constructed to a high point of efficiency under the law as it is; and I have not been able to ascertain that it has been hampered or embarrassed in its work by any provision of the Iowa statutes, nor has it been made known to me that it proposes to issue additional bonds or incur additional indebtedness. On the contrary, I have been led to believe that the improvements which from time to time it is adding to its property are made from its earnings. I am, therefore, of the opinion that there is no necessity for the bill under consideration in order to enable either of these systems to be operated more economically or more safely. If there were such necessity it is manifest that the proper and natural amendment to the statute would be to enlarge the rights of all railway companies organized under the laws of this state to issue bonds for the improvement or the betterment of railways, instead of wholly removing every limit and safeguard respecting the creation of indebtedness. In view of these conditions, which are well known and are a part of the history of the state, I cannot resist the belief that the real application of the proposed amendment would not be to enable the two or three railway companies to which it would apply to improve their properties for their own profit and for the advantage of the people, but that its only substantial effect would be to overcome real or imaginary difficulties growing out of the purchase of the stock of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad company by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railroad companies.

Burlington System Reincorporates.

Prior to October last the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad company owned and operated a vast system of railway lines, a part of which was in the state of Iowa. The company itself was organized under the laws of the state of Illinois, and under such laws it had built up one of the largest, as well as one of the best railway systems in the United States. It had, in large measure, constructed a double track from Chicago to the Missouri river. For many years it had been in the enjoyment of all the privileges which a foreign corporation exercises in our state, and insofar as the mere operation of its lines of railway is concerned, it is difficult to perceive any reason that would lead its managers to abandon the old corporation and organize a new one in our state. Nevertheless it did so, and on the 16th day of October, 1901, there was filed in the recorder's office of Des Moines county articles of incorporation of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway company, with an authorized capital stock of $100,000,000, and the right to begin business when $10,000 of the capital stock had been subscribed. It took to itself practically all the powers which can be conferred upon a railway corporation in this state, and especially the power to purchase and become the owner of the system of railway lines which had heretofore been owned and operated by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad company.

Motive for the Big "Merger."

It is not difficult, if inquiry be made, to find the motive for the organization of this company. The old company, which had been prosperous, could not, either by reason of the laws of Illinois, or by reason of what had occurred in the purchase of its stock by the two Minnesota companies, create the volume of indebtedness which those who were interested desired to create. It was, therefore, necessary to add another corporation, and Iowa was chosen for its domicile. It is a matter of common knowledge that the new company, with an insiginficant amount of capital stock actually taken, has leased the entire system of the old company. It must be true that it is without substantial assets, save the lease, and with the rental attached to the lease its value, if anything, is purely speculative. In this situation it seeks the power to incur indebtedness without limit. It is one thing to grant to railway companies the right to borrow the money needed to aid in the construction and equipment of their lines of railway, and quite another to grant to railway companies to incur unlimited obligations without respect to the amount of their capital stock or the worth of their property. I cannot bring myself to believe that any species of special legislation is consistent with the public welfare or necessary to the legitimate development of railway property; on the contrary it is my belief that corporate power to issue stock and incur indebtedness needs restriction rather than expansion.

To the wise judgment of the general assembly I submit these objections for such consideration as the constitution requires, and I trust that it is not inappropriate that I express my disappointment, and that with the utmost deference, my sincere regret, and that nothing but a sense of duty could have induced me to withhold my approval of a measure which, by a majority of the members of both houses of the legislature, was deemed wise and submitted,

Beyond His Expectation.

An eastern manufacturer, who was recently being compelled to go away on a business trip about the time an interesting domestic event was expected, left orders for the nurse to wire him the results according to the following formula: If a boy, "Gentleman's agreement arrived." If a girl, "Lady's slipper arrived." The father's state of mind may be imagined when, a few minutes later, he received a telegram containing the one word: "Tandem."

Curious Polish Superstitions.

Poland has a wealth of animal superstitions. The goat is there considered the best harbinger of luck, while the wolf, crow and pigeon are looked upon as unlucky. The skin of a cat worn on the chest is alleged to cure consumption. "To cure cataract in the eye take a black cock, make him look at the sun, look at it yourself, then throw the cock on the ground, jump on a fence and crow three times."

Canadian Fish in Tasmania.

The Canadian fisheries department has recently sent a consignment of salmon to be placed in some of the Tasmanian streams. It is hoped that the same signal success will follow from this experiment as was experienced with the eggs of Canadian trout which have been sent to Tasmania, and from which fish scaling over ten pounds have frequently been caught.

Debt of Greater New York.

Prior to the consolidation the net funded debt of the city of New York—Manhattan and the Bronx—was $138,000,000, of Brooklyn $75,000,000, of Richmond $3,000,000, and of Queen borough $8,000,000, a total of $224,000,000. The present debt of the greater city is $294,000,000, an increase of $70,000,000 in four years. Paris owes $400,000,000.

Campaign Literature Wasted.

More than 30,000 letters from New York city reached the dead letter office in Washington within a month. Every letter contained a circular giving the person addressed advice as to how he should vote. All the letters were dated prior to the late election, and the campaign literature contained is about equally divided as to parties.

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a general curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues, and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh.

If one were to make a list of the different names that have been applied to catarrh in different locations and organs, the result would be astonishing. We have often published a partial list of these names, and the surprise caused by the first publication of it to all people, both professionals and non-professional, was amusing. And yet we have never enumerated all of the diseases which are classed as catarrh. It must be confessed, however, to see even this partial list drawn up in battle array is rather appalling. If the reader desires to see this list, together with a short exposition of each one, send for our free catarrh book. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

CONGRESS.

Washington, March 25.—Senate.—A sharp attack on the pending oleomargarine bill was made in the senate today by Money, of Mississippi. He denounced the measure as "unconstitutional, immoral, dishonest and unjust." He said it was a proposition to tax out of existence one industry for the benefit of another, and was "protection gone mad." On behalf of the working people of the country, he appealed to the senate not to enact the bill into law, and declared if it could be voted on by secret ballot it would not receive a dozen votes in the senate. Hansbrough, of North Dakota, began an argument in support of the measure, but yielded the floor until tomorrow. A resolution offered by Mr. Platt, of Connecticut, was adopted, calling upon the secretary of the interior for information concerning treaties negotiated with Indian tribes of Oregon in 1850, and inquiring whether the United States equitably is bound to compensate the tribes for lands now in possession of the government or settlers. Forty-four private pension bills were passed.

House.—The house today, by a majority of 10, unseated Rhea, of Kentucky, a democrat, and seated in his place J. McKenzie Moss, who was formerly a democrat, but who, according to his brief, is in accord with the republican party on the dominant issues. The republican majority in the house is 43. While only two republicans, Hanbury and Vreeland, of New York, voted with the democrats, enough republicans remained away or declined to vote to reduce the majority to 10. The conclusion of the debate on the case was rather spirited, Rhea making an eloquent defense of his right to the seat. After the vote the house began consideration of the army appropriation bill, with the understanding that general debate should continue for ten hours. Scarborough, of South Carolina, discussed the southern election laws, and Gaines, of Tennessee, the Philippine situation.

Washington, March 26.—Senate.—Throughout today's session of the senate the oleomargarine bill was under discussion. The debate was interesting at all times, and some phases of it were amusing. Hansbrough, of North Dakota, concluded his speech, begun yesterday, in support of the measure, maintaining that the oleomargarine industry had been outlawed by the legislatures of many states, and that it ought to be compelled by congress to take off its mask and place its product on the market for what it really was. Stewart, of Nevada, declared that the proposed legislation was unnecessary, and that there was no more reason for taxing colored oleomargarine than for taxing colored butter. The principal speech of the day was delivered by Dolliver, of Iowa. He spoke forcefully and throughout commanded the interested attention of his colleagues and of many members of the house who had come to the senate to hear him. He scathingly denounced the oleomargarine industry, declaring that it had put itself in partnership with lawlessness and false pretenses. In the course of his speech Dolliver declared that the oleomargarine manufacturers and some of the dealers in the article were evading constantly the law of 1886, which provided that every package of oleomargarine should be stamped plainly. In proof of his statement he exhibited a package of oleomargarine which he had purchased "from a famous butter dealer" in Chicago. He said the package was marked, but it would tax any man's ingenuity to find the mark. He then handed the package to Tillman and challenged him to find the mark required by law to be on the wrapper. Tillman failed to discover the imprint. Mr. Dolliver pointed it out, printed in fine type in a corner of the wrapper. The incident excited lively interest and amusement.

House.—General debate on the military appropriation bill was concluded in the house today, and consideration of the bill under the five minutes rule begun. During the debate Burleson, of Texas, renewed the attack on Secretary Hay on account of the allegations regarding the Boer relief funds subscribed in Illinois.

Washington, March 27.—Senate.—In the senate today Harris, of Kansas and Quarles, of Wisconsin, spoke at length on the oleomargarine bill. Harris supported the measure, but urged that an amendment which he proposed placing a tax of 10 cents a pound on adulterated butter and regulating the manufacture and sale of renovated butter ought to be adopted. Quarles vigorously denounced the oleomargarine industry as at present conducted as a fraud, and insisted that in the interest, not only of the 5,000,000 dairymen, but also in the interest of the whole American people, the pending bill ought to be enacted into law. A message from the president recommending that provision be made for diplomatic and consular representatives in Cuba and announcing formally that the island would be turned over to Cuban government on the 20th of May next, was read and referred to the committee on foreign relations. Taking advantage of the latitude of debate afforded by the senate rules, Patterson of Colorado sharply criticised the methods by which General Funston captured Aguinaldo, and sought to show that General Funston's statement published today that he had not violated the articles of civilized warfare was not accurate.

Washington, March 28.—Senate.—The house spent today passing private pension bills. In all 215 were passed. With one exception this is the record for the number of such bills passed at a single session. The president's policy with regard to the veto of bills to remove the charge of desertion from the records of soldiers came in for considerable discussion during the day. Early in the session a number of minor bills were passed. The sundry civil appropriation bill was reported and Cannon gave notice that he would call it up on Monday.

Washington, March 31.—House—The house devoted most of today to the bill increasing the efficiency of the revenue cutter service, but did not complete its consideration. The opening argument was made by Sherman of New York. Speeches were made in its favor by Minor of Wisconsin and H. C. Smith of Michigan, and against it by Richardson of Alabama, Little of Arkansas, Cochran of Missouri, and Mann of Illinois. The Miles correspondence called for by the Burleson resolution was laid before the house, but only the letter of transmittal was read.

He stated the matter was one that had so engrossed public attention that it was worthy of more consideration than the votes taken would indicate the members were willing to give. He referred to the fact that the railroads are not paying their just and equitable proportion of taxes, and that this fact had been under discussion during the last campaign. He urged that whatever the outcome of the vote about to be taken, it would be one giving adequate opportunity for a fair consideration of the bill. ## ONE THOUSAND CHINESE KILLED

Victims of Riots Caused by Attempt to Collect Idemnity Taxes.

Peking, March 31.—Chinese officials say that a thousand people have been killed in riots at Ta Ming Fu, the southernmost prefecture of the province of Chi Li. This, perhaps, is exaggerated, but the loss of life was undoubtedly great. The riots were due to attempts of local officials to collect indemnities for the Catholics, as arranged between the officials and the priests.

Soldiers have been dispatched to quell the disturbances and a taotai has been sent to adjust the differences. The officials warn the missionaries to keep out of the disturbed districts. Such resistence to the payment of missionary claims is to be expected in localities where the population is poor and large sums are levied.

Bright's Disease Cured.

Sullivan, Ill., March 31st, Mrs. Kitty F. Seaney was very ill for months and notwithstanding the best possible medical attendance she got no better. The doctors said she had Bright's Disease, and gave her little or no hope of ever being well again.

She suffered great pain in her back, which nothing seemed able to relieve, till at last encouraged by the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills have attained in the community as a cure for Kidney Diseases, she began to use them.

The result was a surprise both to Mrs. Seaney and the physicians, for soon after the treatment was commenced her kidneys threw off large quantities of dark diseased matter and she improved rapidly. She used in all ten boxes, and has completely recovered good health without pain or symptoms of the Bright's Disease.

It is recorded that Innocent the Fourth and Thomas Aquinas were standing together as the bags of treasure were being carried in through the gates of the Lateran. "You see," observed the Pope with a smile, "the day is past when the church could say, 'silver and gold have I none.'" "Yes, holy father," was the saint's reply, "and the day is past when the church could say to the lame man, 'Rise and walk.'"

Mrs. Sophie Binns, President Young People's Christian Temperance Union, Fruitvale, Bal., Cured of Congestion and Inflammation of the Ovaries by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Eighteen months ago I was a pretty sick woman. I had felt for some months that I gradually grew weaker, but finally I had such severe pains I could hardly stand it. I had taken cold during menstruation and this developed into congestion of the ovaries and inflammation, and I could not bear to walk or stand on my feet. The doctor recommended an operation which I would not hear of. One of my friends advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I gave it a trial. Can you imagine my feeling when within two months I felt considerably better, my general health was improved, and my pains had entirely disappeared. I kept taking it six weeks more and am now enjoying the best of health, thanks to you. Yours truly, MRS. SOPHIE BINNS."

SHORT SERMONS.

Hard tasks make hardy men.

A dauntless heart is a soldier's best equipment.

God helps those who are not afraid to help themselves.

The greatest secret of courage is an implicit faith in God.

None of life's prizes are for the young man who is on a hunt for "a soft snap."

Character is the best possession, and it comes by way of hardness endured and obstacles overcome.

They are more precious to God and best understand the preciousness of God who set out on hard missions for him.

There is nothing that so gives skill to the hand and confidence to the mind as a difficult undertaking diligently prosecuted to success.

Heaven and earth alike have no regard for the coward, and if courage were not especially well pleasing to the Lord, the Bible would not be so filled with exhortations to "be strong."

Every land of promise has its hill countries and its giants and its fortified cities. They alone deserve to enter who are unafraid, and who covet an opportunity to win an inheritance by their own prowess and the help of God.

CONFESSIONS OF A LAWYER.

If you don't charge a client enough he will make you come after the fee. Charge him a trifle to much and he will come to your office and settle.

How often when a young man starts out in a profession he is told that there is "plenty of room ot the top," and generally by people who have never been there.

The less a lawyer charges the harder it is to collect the fee. The client goes on the theory that you are not much good, and it's human nature to hate to pay for a poor article.

Whenever anyone wants to hire me to do something for him I feel as though I had the right to refuse. But if he wants me to do it for accommodation I never know just how to get out of it.

The law furnishes more and better opportunities for getting into politics and the penitentiary than any other profession. But for a short, sure road to wealth it lacks considerable of keeping up a reputation.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR.

Being a bachelor day in and day out is what makes a lot of them break their good resolutions.

You can never make a woman understand that it isn't cold-blooded for her husband to insure her life.

A man likes to have his children look like him, but a woman would a darned sight rather have them handsomer.—New York Press.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.
F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

"Two years ago, as a result of a severe cold. I lost my voice," writes Dr. M. L. Scarbrough, of Hebron, Ohio. "then began an obstinate cough. Every remedy known to me as a practicing physician for 35 years, failed, and I daily grew worse. Being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, I found quick relief, and for last ten days have felt better than for two years." Positively guaranteed for throat and lung troubles by Harr. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

Garner

From Special Correspondent.

H. N. Brockway has been in the Twin Cities of Minnesota a few days on business.

A large number of Presbyterian ministers have been here a portion of this week, attending a general meeting for church work of that denomination.

Miss Katherine VanEpps was the guest of her friend, Miss Sylvia Sage, two or three days last week, en route back to her school work at Nora Springs, from visiting her relatives at Crystal Lake.

Dr. Hoag has been very fortunate in recovering from the blood poisoning which at one time nearly caused him to lose his arm, if not his life. His many friends rijoice at his recovery.

Miss Lillie Matthews is attending to the confectionary department of the Stork bakery and restaurant, until smallpox abates enough in her school district, so that she can resume her teaching in German township.

E. C. Abbey is reported as having suffered severely from his attack of smallpox, and after being liberated from quarantine it is said went to Chicago, for further treatment, to remove the evidences of the malady from his face.

Wields a Sharp Ax.

Millions marvel at the multitude of maladies cut off by Dr. King's New Life Pills–the most distressing too. Stomach, Liver and Bowel troubles, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice Biliousness, fever, malaria, all fall before these wonder workers. 25c at Harr's drug store.

Goodell

From the Globe.

John Zook, formerly of Klemme, is building a room in which to store his household goods, and will make our town his headquarters for the summer.

Charley Stockwell departed, Saturday, for Sioux City, where he will find employment in a packing house. If he likes the work his family will move there in a few weeks.

At the town election on last Monday, the following officers were elected: Mayor, F. Schulz; Councilmen, John Ahrenkiel and Wm. Nelson; Clerk, J. E. Savogue; Assessor, G. J. Hall; treasurer, F. G. Church.

J. T. Roylan was here last Friday and Saturday looking over the R. F. D. routes and only established one route, that being the one east of town. The roads west of town were in bad condition and he thought it not wise to establish a route in that direction until the roads were put in better condition.

In ordering two new battleships Chile has demonstrated that she is not so chilly.

The Chinese General Ma has been defeated by the rebels. Now give General Pa a chance.

The New York man who shot his son's wife for making a poor omelet was evidently a bad egg.

The $3,000,000 hotel to be erected right opposite the Yale campus will be quite a gorgeous new haven.

The New York farmer who caused a bull to gore his wife to death has made Nero seem more human than ever.

Mrs. Daisy Gentleman of Chicago has sued for a divorce. She sets up the claim that he is merely a "gent."

Mrs. Astor has discovered that she is now in the same class with the favorite parrot that talked too much.

The death is announced of the leading medical expert in the treatment of diseases of the heart—from heart disease.

Prince Henry wishes to come back incognito, perhaps for the purpose of discovering if we really eat $100 dinners every day.

A movement is on foot to admit men to membership in women's clubs. Thus man is gradually rising to equality with the other sex.

It still remains a fact that few things are surer in this world than death and taxes—barring war taxes. They are more or less intemittent.

But the parents of that Indianapolis baby that has been named "Prince Henry" needn't think the whole country is going to kotow to it.

The first railroad locomotive was capable of going twelve miles an hour, and its speed was felicitously compared to that of a rocket.

A Kansas man theorizes that Eve was tempted by a man instead of a serpent. But why revive the old scandal at all? Think of the family name!

A Brooklyn minister has started in to prove himself entirely different from other ministers by asking that his salary be reduced from $10,000 to $8,000 a year.

Although authorized by its congress to do so, the government of Chile will not issue any more paper money at present. Is the printing press out of repair?

After all what does the courting of American favor by European powers mean but a recognition of the silent, steady and irresistible growth of republican ideas?

The 10-year-old caddie who is suing a New York minister for $5,000 says that the minister hit him on the head with a golf ball on the links last summer. A minister playing golf should exercise self-restraint in many ways.

The west is fast losing its individuality. The Arapahoe bucks are preparing to celebrate Easter in "tan shoes and long frock coats, silk hats and red ties," which combinations were once affected by eastern aldermen, and the squaws are buying "silk and satin and hat decorations," as their sisters hereabout are. Fashion makes the whole world kin.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, April 1.—Senate.—Representative Larrabee of Fayette county introduced in the house and got passed by practically unanimous vote a bill enacting that section of the senate taxing bill which the house killed last week, requiring the executive council to publish its proceedings during the meetings at which it determines the railroad assessment. When messaged to the senate it was taken up immediately and Senator Lewis, reputed author of the original measure, moved to amend the Larrabee bill by adding to it the sections of the original bill requiring the railroads to report the numoer and value of their stocks and bonds, and authorizing the council to summon railroad men as witnesses under oath and punish railroads for falsifying reports. Senator Moffit moved to add the section of the original bill requiring the council to assess the roads on a basis of the value of their stocks and bonds and explain their reasons for deviating therefrom in assessing them. In this form the bill was laid over until Wednesday for consideration. The senate by a vote of 36 to 0, refused to pass the Molsberry bill over the governor's veto. The senate passed the bill taking the control of the osteopathic practitioners from the state board of medical examiners, Senators Mardis, Tallman and Trewin only voting against it. It is supported by the physicians of the state and is designed to settle the contention that has existed for years between the medical schools and the osteopaths. The senate passed the Hayward bill to require telephone and telegraph companies to file plats of their lines with the county auditors of the state.

House.—Among bills passed were the following: Requiring the construction of fire escapes to all hotels, tenements, hospitals, manufactories, warehouses, three or more stories in height, to all public school buildings, seminaries and colleges more than two stories in height, and to all theaters; providing that cities of 10,000 may employ a police matron; increasing the support fund for the boys' industrial school at Eldora from $9 to $11 per month, per capita; providing that one telephone company shall not erect its poles on more than one side of the highway and that all telephone poles shall be placed on the outside lines of such roads; empowering the trustees of any township to condemn land in order to secure gravel for roads; providing that a voter may register on election day if he has moved from one precinct to another in the same county after the last registration day; providing that any corporation organized under the laws of any state or territory outside of Iowa, which shall establish an office in this state for the sale of stocks, shall file with the secretary of state a certified copy of its articles of incorporation, accompanied by a resolution authorizing the services of process to be made on the auditor of state in any suit brought against it.

Des Moines, April 3.—Senate.—The senate spent the entire day on debate on the resolution to pardon John Wesley Elkins, who at the age of 12 years, in 1889, murdered his father and mother. The pardon was voted, 27 to 20. Senator W. P. Whipple, of Vinton, carried the resolution through and made one of the most eloquent speeches heard in this session of the assembly. At an evening session the senate passed a bill preventing the receivers of insurance companies from beginning suits on notes given for insurance in any county except that in which the defendant resides. Hayward moved that the Larrabee railroad taxation bill be returned to the house as requested by that body. The motion was carried unanimously. Senator Blanchard introduced a joint resolution for the relief of the widows and orphans of the victims of Lost Creek mine disaster in February. It carries an appropriation of $2,500.

House.—Immediately after convening a motion was made to reconsider the vote by which the Larrabee railroad taxation bill was passed. The motion was carried without opposition. The house spent the day on the pardon cases before it, voting pardons to six members serving life sentences. The house voted pardons to Joseph McCreary of Mills county, Otto Otten of Pocahontas county, John Balley of Webster county, Theodore Bushick of Mills county, George Stanley of Story county, and William Young of Woodbury county. The senate pardons committee has recommended pardons for Stanley and McCreary only. The house passed the bill providing for a board of examiners to examine all stationary engineers and issue certificates to them. The board of examiners is to consist of five members, one of whom shall be chief examiner. No engineer is to be permitted to operate an engine without a certificate. Bills were passed as follows: Changing the time for the meeting of school boards from September to August; providing that when a dispute arises over the location of a pest house, the matter shall be referred to the president of the state board of health, who shall appoint a committee to locate the pest house, after two days' notice to the parties interested; empowering any member of the board of supervisors to employ labor to repair any break in the levee and also empowering boards of supervisors to establish roads upon levees; providing that when gifts are made to cities for libraries the library board may compel the city council to fulfill the conditions on which the gift was accepted.

Des Moines, April 3.—Senate.—The Hubbard "merger" bill providing that any railway corporation organized under the laws of the state, and owning and operating a line of railroad in this state may acquire railroads in all other states, provided they are not competing and are connecting, was passed. The Molsberry bill was made unfinished business. The senate voted to authorize the people to vote taxes in aid of railroads to the extent of 5 mills on the dollar once in each ten years. Heretofore a community voting a tax for this purpose was estopped from again voting it. The design of the change in the law is to permit aid to be voted to interurban trolley lines. The senate passed the house bill to raise the salary of the governor from $4,100 to $6,000. The bill to create a barbers' commission to examine and license barbers was killed. The bill of Senator Ball to permit liens to be filed against state property was defeated. The bill to exempt from taxation $800 of the property of every soldier not worth to exceed $5,000 was passed. County attorneys in counties of over 35,000 inhabitants were given the right to select their own assistants. A resolution providing for final adjournment April 9, was passed, but a motion to reconsider was filed. The salary of county superintendents was fixed at $1,250 a year, instead of $4 a day.

House.—The house Thursday afternoon by a vote of 47 to 46 refused to recommend the conditional pardon of J. Wesley Elkins, now serving a life sentence at Anamosa for the murder of his father and stepmother. The senate had voted to grant the pardon. -- motion to reconsider has been filed in the house already, signed by Messrs. Jenks and Teachout. The house devoted the whole day to the case, although the time of each speaker, with the exception of the leader on each side, was limited, several had their time extended by vote of the house. The house adopted the report of the conference committee appointed to consider the senate amendments to the Hamann interurban bill. The amendments provide that a trolley line entering a city may haul such freight as it can carry in baggage or combination cars. This may be done without condemning the street and paying abutting damages as the senate amendments provided.

Des Moines, April 4.—Senate.—Resolutions in honor of United States Senator John H. Gear were adopted by the houses of the legislature. The Molsberry bill relating to bonded indebtedness of railroads and removing the statutory limit was put over until Tuesday morning next. The bill to require coal mine operators to employ shot examiners was passed. An effort to include shot firers was lost. The senate passed a bill to restrict the operation of associations not corporations which are engaged in tontine building and loan busness, by requiring them to deposit $50,000 in approved securities with the auditor of state. The senate agreed to the amendments on the interurban bill, so that these lines may enter cities as street car companies without paying damages to owners of property abutting on the streets used by their tracks so long as passenger and combination baggage cars are used. When freight cars are handled the lines shall be regarded as railroads. The house bill creating an opticians' commission of five members to examine and issue certificates to opticians was passed.

House.—The house reconsidered its action on the Elkins pardon resolution, and voted in favor of parole, 48 to 35. The house passed senate bills giving the State Agricultural college and the State university each one-fifth of a mill tax for five years for building purposes, and both houses passed a bill giving the State Normal school one-tenth of a mill for building purposes. The house passed the senate bill in recognition of the osteopathic physicians, authorizing the state board of medical examiners to issue certficates to graduates of osteopathic colleges and to others who pass examination, and authorizing the choice of an osteopathic physician to become a member of the state board of health and state board of medical examiners. The bill making an appropriation of $3,000 and providing for a woman's reformatory at Anamosa was passed.

Des Moines, April 5.—Senate.—The legislature completed its work of voting tax levies in aid of the educational institutions, giving the State University two-tenths of a mill, the State College of Agriculture two-tenths and the State Normal School one-tenth for five years. These levies will yield $275,000 a year to these institutions, or $1,375,000 for the period designated. The proceeds go into buildings. An effort to reconsider the vote by which the Normal School levy was voted in the senate was defeated. The senate passed the house bill giving the board of control the power to visit and inspect homes for friendless children and empowering judges to commit children to these homes upon showing that their parents are unfit to care for them or if they are homeless. The bill to make guilty of larceny a farm tenant who sells the grain he grows without notifying the buyer that the landlord has a lien thereon for rent was passed. The senate passed a bill to limit the speed of automobiles to twenty miles an hour, and requiring them to carry lights. The senate concurred in the house resolution for the pardon of William Young, of Woodbury county, Joseph McCreary of Mills county, and George Stanley of Story county, serving life sentences for murder. This makes four murderers pardoned by this legislature. The other house recommendations were postponed.

House—The house passed the senate bill for the reorganization of the supreme court. It increases the salaries of the supreme judges from $4,000 to $6,00 a year and requires them to be in continuous session in the city of Des Moines for nine and one-half months each year. The house refused to take up the Hubbard bill, S. F. 117, providing that Iowa railroad companies may require other companies in any state in the Union, and fixed its consideration as a special order for 10 a. m. Tuesday. H. F. 333, by Mattes, amending the present mulct law, came up and after being amended slightly passed by a margin of three votes. The bill provides that no name shall be withdrawn from a petition after it has been filed with the county auditor, and also that irregularities or discrepancies between the ordinary signature of a voter and the way his name appears upon the poll book shall not be a bar to the name being counted in the petition.

CONGRESS.

Washington, April 1.—Senate.—An agreement was reached by the senate today to vote on the pending oleomargarine bill before adjournment next Thursday. Debate on the measure was continued throughout today's session. Heitfeld, of Idaho, opposed the bill because he believed that it proposed to drive the oleomargarine industry to the wall. He strongly advocated the adoption of the substitute offered, as he said that would eliminate the possibility of fraud as certainly as the pending measure would, and would do no injustice to anybody. Gallinger, of New Hampshire, advocated the bill, because it was a protest against fraud and against an industry "which depended for its success upon duplicity and dishonesty." Spooner, of Wisconsin, made an extended legal and constitutional argument in support of the measure. He said such a tax as it imposed, in his opinion, was in the interest of the whole people. Bailey, of Texas, began an argument in opposition to the bill, but had not concluded when the senate adjourned.

House.—The house today made rapid progress with the sundry civil appropriation bill, completing 93 of the 139 pages of the bill. Efforts to amend the bill were successfully resisted as a rule by Cannon, the chairman of the appropriations committee, who was personally in charge of the measure. The proceedings were without incident.

Washington, April 2.—Senate.—Discussion of the oleomargarine bill in the senate today was enlivened by two or three bright colloquies between senators. Bailey, of Texas, concluded his speech begun yesterday in opposition to the measure, occupying most of the time devoted by the senate today to the bill's consideration. His argument was brilliant and at times eloquent, and attracted the careful attention of senators on both sides of the chamber and of the occupants of the crowded galleries. He was followed by Depew, of New York, in a bright and witty speech in support of the measure. Depew matched his wit with that of Bailey on the subject of the American girl, and the sallies of the two senators were greeted with shouts of laughter, both on the floor and in the galleries. The Texan's keen reference to the recent marriage of Depew was most happily fenced by the New York senator in his reference to the love and admiration excited in woman by "the youth and beauty" of Mr. Bailey.

House.—The house today passed the sundry civil appropriation bill. This is the eighth of the regular annual supply bills which has passed at this session. Only a few unimportant amendments were attached to it. After it was disposed of, debate on the revenue cutter bill was resumed. Messrs. Sulzer, of New York, Bellamy, of North Carolina, Ryan, of New York, Lessler, of New York, and Goldfogle, of New York, spoke for the measure, and Messrs. Loud, of California, and Crumpacker, of Indiana, against it.

Washington, April 3.—Senate.—At the conclusion of a lively debate today the senate passed the oleomargarine bill by a vote of 29 to 31. The discussion was largely in the nature of a reinforcement of arguments previously advanced. Spooner, of Wisconsin, made the principal speech, maintaining that congress had ample authority to enact the proposed legislation because it was in the interest of the people. In an earnest protest against the measure Vest, of Missouri, held that congress was invading the powers of the states. Scott, of West Virginia, moved to recommit the measure to the committee, holding that it was unsatisfactory to any senator and ought to be perfected. The motion was defeated, 35 to 37. A substitute for the bill offered by Money, on behalf of the minority of the committee on agriculture, was rejected, 29 to 39.

House.—The senate bill to promote the efficiency of the revenue cutter service passed the house by a vote of 135 to 49. The opponents of the measure fought it to the last ditch. At the very end they attempted to filibuster, but were swept aside by the overwhelming majority in favor of the measure.

Washington, April 4.—Senate.—The senate today began consideration of the Chinese exclusion bill, Mitchell, of Oregon, making the opening speech. He pointed out forcefully the necessity for the exclusion of Chinese laborers, and carefully and elaborately analyzed the bill. He said that it had been constructed on the basis of existing law, in the light of experience and of the decisions of the courts. While its provisions were drastic, the bill, he said, in some respects was more liberal than the Geary act. The Indian appropriation bill was under consideraton for a time, but was not completed.

House.—The house today began consideration of the Chinese exclusion bill. No opponents of the general principle of exclusion appeared, but members were divided in their support of the two bills presented. Hitt of Illinois, Perkns of New York, and Adams of Pennsylvania supported the majority bill, and Clark of Missouri, Kahn of California, and Naphen of Massachusetts spoke for the minority substitute.

Washington, April 5.—Senate—After passing the Indian appropriation bill today, the senate considered the Chinese exclusion measure for nearly three hours. The principal speech of the session was made by Mr. Fairbanks of Indiana, in support of the bill. He analyzed its provisions and demonstrated that they were not in contravention of our treaty with China, and discussed at length the right of congress to enact exclusion legislation. He maintained that it was a cardinal principle of this government to protect its labor against such low priced labor as would come to the United States from China.

House—The Chinese exclusion bill was under consideration in the house throughout the day, general debate being closed. Without exception the speeches were favorable to rigid exclusion and expressed the feeling of repugnance to the Chinese. Mr. Kahn, of California, the author of the bill, was gratified during the day at reaching an understanding by which most of the amendments proposed by the Pacific coast people will be accepted by the committee. This probably will lead to the withdrawal of the minority bill and the passage of the majority measure. The only amendment at issue is on the sailor clause, and this by agreement is to be submitted to a vote.

BIG BRITISH LOSSES.

HEAVY LOSSES OCCURRED IN RECENT ENGAGEMENTS.

Both at Hart's River and Baschmanskop the Losses Were Great.

Pretoria, April 7.—The British losses in the neighborhood of Hart's River, in the southwestern extremity of the Transvaal, on March 31, were 3 officers and 24 men killed and 16 officers and 131 men wounded. The action occurred at Doornbalt farm, a few miles south of the scene of General Delarey's defeat of General Methuen. The Boers, who were commanded by Generals Kemp and Potgiler, attacked with great determination, but the Canadian contingent, which was the last to arrive in South Africa from Canada, and two squadrons of Yeomanry under Colonel Cookson, and the artillery and mounted rifles under Colonel Kier, presented such a stout front that the burghers were finally forced to retreat. The casuality list shows that the Second Canadian mounted rifles had 4 officers wounded, 9 men killed and 40 men wounded.

London, April 7.—The gallantry of the Canadian troops at the engagement of the Boers near Hart's River, southwestern Transvaal, March 31, attracts unstinted praise from the British press. These printed comments form a striking contrast to the recent printed notification that the attention of Lord Roberts, the commander-in-chief, had been drawn to various cases where colonials who had been awarded commissions were treated as inferiors by the regular officers and otherwise made to feel that they were only members of the mess by sufrance. Lord Roberts, it was semi-officially announced, was making an investigation and was intending to inflict the most serious penalties on any British officer found guilty of such conduct. Privately, and in letters to the press, many colonial officers have frequently complained that "they are good enough at the front but are not wanted at a Capetown hotel or a London drawing room."

London, April 7.—The South African casuality list issued shows that the losses sustained by the Second Dragoon guards in their sharp rear-guard action with the Boers near Baschmanskop, during the evening of March 31, were severe. Two officers were killed and five were wounded and eighteen men were killed and fifty-eight wounded.

ST. LOUIS CORRUPTIONISTS.

A Sensational Report is Made by the Grand Jury.

St. Louis, April 7.—Most sensational charges are made by the February grand jury, which has been investigating bribery and official corruption in the municipal assembly, in its final report to Judge O'Niel Ryan in the criminal court. These indictments, already made public, were returned:

Bribery—Robert N. Snyder.

Attempted bribery—Edward Butler, John H. Becker.

Perjury—George J. Kobusch.

The report declares that the people of St. Louis have but a vague conception of the extent to which corruption and venality have for the past ten years existed among their sworn officers and public servants. It finds the true condition of affairs to be almost too appalling for belief. A tribute is paid to Joseph W. Folk, the circuit attorney, under whose leadership the investigation is being made.

GRAND AMERICAN HANDICAP.

H. C. Hirschy Was the Last Man to Hold Out.

Kansas City, April 7.—H. C. Hirschy, with a handicap of 29 yards, won the great American handicap and thus became the champion wing shot of America. The last man to stand up with him in the shoot-off out of the fourteen men who had clean scores yesterday was C. G. Spencer, of St. Louis, also a 20-yard man, who finally failed to kill his fifty-third bird, a towering outgoer. Spencer will receive second money, R. O. Heikes, of Dayton, Ohio, third; J. D. Pollard, Chicago, fourth, and J. L. Owen of Cushing, Okla., fifth.

"If one falls the other takes all, binding himself to carry out those small favors that are on the list. Senor Jack, my brave friend, everything is yours. I brought you power, now riches beyond the maddest dream of any human being on earth. Your future lies before you. In good time, when it pleases you, return again to London, there to punish and reward. But, amigo, sometimes when perhaps surrounded by happy scenes, let memory carry you to the lonely grave of your comrade in arms far away under southern skies, and drop a tear to Barrajo, who met a soldier's fate."

Jack was affected almost to tears, so that he could only squeeze the hand he held in his. The presence of the Dread Rider upon the White Horse is always sombre, and never more so than when by violence he snatches the life of a sturdy soldier upon the field of battle.

"One last request, Senor Jack. Promise that you will some day send a force of men hither to remove my poor bones to the consecrated ground of San Jose cemetery. It will give me satisfaction in the last minutes of my life."

"I swear it," declared Jack stoutly.

The general pressed his hand.

He was growing fainter; his eyes assumed a far-away stare; again his mind wandered to earlier scenes in his tempestuous life, and he gave orders to his army; called upon the enemy to surrender, uttered endearing phrases to some lovely woman, whose face haunted him at this the closing hour of his career; and then addressed waiting spirits, whom he seemed to see hovering near. Who dares to say it was only imagination? Then came the death rattle, the rigor that stiffened his stout frame, and all was over.

As Overton knelt there above all that was mortal of his genial old friend, mentally renewing the vow he had taken with the general, it seemed as though the scroll of time were unrolled, and once again he looked back to the hour of his awful humiliation and despair, when the woman he loved betrayed him for gold, and gave herself for life into the keeping of his rival, whose foot had pressed the ladder of fame and fortune.

"It is Destiny," he said solemnly. "I pleaded with high Heaven to grant this one request. The wonderful opportunity has come, and now—to my work!"

BOOK THREE.

The Modern Monte Cristo.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Marquis of Montezuma.

It was lovely June, and London sheltered at least a million and a half of visitors within her gates, for the greatest jubilee the world has ever known was in progress, to celebrate the ending of sixty years' reign on the part of the beloved sovereign, Victoria.

Among the millions who gazed upon the marvelous spectacle, none occupied a more commanding position than a gentleman of distinguished appearance, who seemed to control several of the best windows in the second floor of a famous hotel in front of which the procession moved.

His manner seemed cold and repressed, as though his heart were not in this scene. Indeed, at times he appeared gloomy, as might a man bowed down with heavy cares.

Among those who speculated with regard to the identity of this mysterious guest of the fashionable hotel were a couple of gentlemen seated at the window of an office further down the street.

One of these was no other than Captain Maurice Livermore, the famous traveler. His companion was a club man, who pretended to do a little business for the looks of the thing, which accounted for the office in the Strand.

"Come, tell me who that fellow over yonder may be? He seems to lord it like a prince of the blood. From what part of the world does he hail?" asked the captain.

"Some weeks ago," said his companion, "he burst in upon London like a comet, and in two days the talk of the town was nothing but Don Juan de Overton, or, as some have called him, the Marquis of Montezuma.

"His wealth is affirmed to be without limit, and in this day that is an assertion which can be said of few men; but Don Juan spends money like water, and his extravagances have cast poor Barney Barnato quite in the shade, while even Dumas' Monte Cristo is hardly in the swim.

"It has even been given on strong authority that he has a personal fortune of over twenty million pounds sterling."

The captain raised his hands to express surprise.

"Jove! Have you met the Marquis?"

"Well, I have had that pleasure," complacently.

"Then some day when the opportunity arises, make me acquainted with this remarkable Spanish-American nabob, this modern Croesus, whose touch is gold, like that of mythical Midas."

"Willingly. You like to study man, and in him you will find a puzzle worthy of your metal."

"Well, find a chance to bring me into touch with this American nabob. I never saw an American—yes, there was one, but he hardly counts—with whom I was not able to get upon familiar and intimate terms on short notice. Somehow they seem to like me. I notice you have a marine glass on the wall among those yacht prizes and burgees. Would you mind handing it over? I would like to have a closer survey of this man. Why, bless my soul, the windows are empty, nor can I see any sign of him in the apartment. Your marquis has made a move at last, Langford."

When the marquis left the hotel he was gradually pushing along, when among the slow moving vehicles he noticed a hansom containing two ladies, one of them young, the other middle-aged.

The marquis stood there, unmindful of the good-natured shoves of the crowd, seeing nothing but the charming countenance of the younger lady.

"At last!" were the only words that came from between his white teeth, as the vehicle passed on.

Then, with a cynical smile upon his face he once more joined the onward surge of the crowd.

Half an hour later he shook himself free from the rolling billows, and entered a narrow court, by means of which he was enabled to reach a street leading to the poorer regions.

Suddenly he paused before a house, a shabby looking affair, where a dirty little paper in the windows announced that apartments were to be let.

Some Quixotic notion seemed to possess him, for he gave a quick look up and down the street, laughed a little harshly, as though in judgment upon his contemplated action, and then boldly sounded his knuckles upon the door.

A frowsy woman opened it.

"You have rooms for hire, madam?" asked the marquis, in the best of English.

She was rather appalled at the appearance of such a "howling swell," as she was inclined to consider a fashionably dressed gentleman, and very humbly answered that it was true, though surely none to suit his lordship.

"I am not so certain of that," he replied quickly, "for I am looking to find a sky parlor for a friend of mine, a painter, who will furnish it at his convenience."

The woman's face grew brighter.

If it was an attic the gentleman was looking for, she did have one vacant; it had even been occupied for a season by an artist, who was pleased to say the light was exceptionally good.

She led the way to the attic and the marquis followed.

From object to object he glanced, and upon the yawning aperture, yclept a fireplace, his gaze seemed to linger longest.

With a calm voice he inquired the price of the attic, and upon being told immediately paid three months' rent in advance.

Then he seemed desirous of being rid of her presence, and expressed a desire to be left alone for half an hour.

So the woman went below to relate fairy stories of the Prince Bountiful whom she had unwittingly entertained, and boast of the new artist lodger who was to occupy one of the attic rooms.

And the stranger in London stood there in that upper chamber, motionless, evidently overcome by memories that crowded upon his mind.

As he stood, musing on the strange and remarkable vicissitudes of fortune, he heard a footstep dragging wearily up the stairs, and thinking it was the landlady, he did not move. Then a door was closed, and he heard a key turn in the lock.

Some person had entered the adjoining room, probably a counterpart of the one he occupied. Yes, there could be no doubt about it since he now caught voices.

Unconsciously the marquis listened. Evidently something had given him a great shock, for his attitude betrayed this, as he stood there, with one hand half raised, his head bent sideways, and evidently intent upon hearing what was said beyond the thin partition, while to himself he was muttering:

"Marvelous, indeed—the hand of fate. After two weeks of searching through half of London, and now to discover her by chance—to occupy the adjoining room. Ah! this is kind, indeed; but one of the many favors with which I have been blessed by an indulgent fortune."

As he listened, he discovered to his dismay that there was a sound of low weeping in the next room.

He heard a window lowered, which struck him as singular, as the air was very close on this balmy Jubilee day.

"Is there no escape, dearest?" said a voice that seemed half muffled by the bed clothes, and yet one knew instinctively that it belonged to an aged woman.

"None, whatever, Aunty. We have endured everything that mortal can on earth. There is nothing left for us but this one resort," came in a low, quavering voice that somehow caused intense emotion to pass over the marquis' face, possibly because the speaker was a woman and in trouble.

"Then God forgive us!" said the cracked voice, very reverently.

"Hush, Aunty, dear; say no more, or you will unnerve me just when I have keyed myself up to the desperate pitch. Happiness was never meant for me; doomed to always sup with poverty. Kiss me again, Aunty. Soon I will come and lie at your side, where your arms can enfold me; dearest arms that have so many times crushed me to a loving heart."

The marquis was strongly shaken—for a man whose untold millions were the wonder and marvel of Lombard street, to be thus brought face to face with the direst poverty, was a rude shock.

Suddenly he became aware of the fact that some noxious gas came to his attention. He sniffed at the charged air suspiciously, and decided on the instant that it was the fumes of smoldering charcoal. Then the dreadful significance of what he had heard, the prayer for pity and forgiveness, the gradually dying murmur of voices—good heavens! It meant the desperate, poverty-stricken wretch's last fling at outrageous fortune, the sole relief from gnawing hunger and corroding care—it meant suicide—while he lingered and planned those whom he would have helped might have crossed the grim divide that bordered the shadowy land of death!

CHAPTER XV.

The Turning of the Tide.

Whatever may have been the mystery of his past life, the marquis demonstrated the fact beyond all peradventure that he was a man of action, able to meet an emergency as it arose and overwhelm it.

One leap and he was outside the door of his attic room—another took him to that of the adjacent chamber, from whence had come the murmur of voices.

He tried to open this, but was baffled—then he remembered, having heard the key turned in the lock after the entrance of the dejected miniature painter.

He threw his full weight forward, in such a manner that the impact was something tremendous.

There was a crash, and the door flew back.

Into the chamber darted the marquis, holding his breath, for the deadly fumes of the wretched little charcoal stove were almost suffocating.

His first move was to throw up the window, thus allowing a current of pure air, at least as good as this section of London could boast, to sweep through the chamber, a draught being formed by the open door.

Next he picked up the pitcher of water standing on the box and dashing it over the smoldering charcoal, effectually wound up its miserable part of the tragedy.

To the bed he hastened.

The women lay there wan and motionless—indeed, his first thought was that he had come to the rescue too late, and that death had already claimed his victims.

Picking up the younger one in his strong arms, this resolute man of action bore her to the window, and laid his burden down where the incoming current of air would fall upon her face.

Then he went back for her older companion.

Her eyes were open, though she seemed to be speechless—evidently she had partially covered her head with the bed clothes and thus in a measure escaped the full result of the smothering sensation.

Again he hurried to the side of the form at the window, bending oh, so eagerly over her, and scanning her pinched face for signs of returning animation.

The flutter of an eyelid, a low sigh, a slight movement of a hand—these were enough to tell him the joyful tidings, and when he had assured himself of this fact, a faint, but fervent "thank God" came from the bearded lips of the man.

Trying to be a good fellow has sent many a man to a bad ending.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, April 5, 1902.

The petition in the much-talked-of case of the state of Iowa against Lafe Young, ex-state binder, to recover overcharges it is claimed were made by him and collected during his term of office, has been filed by Attorney General Mullan in the district court. The case was filed for the May term, when it is expected it will come up for trial. The petition is a very ordinary legal document. It recites the fact that defendant was formerly state binder, tells what his duties as such were, and then goes on to allege that during 1899 and 1900 Young overcharged for certain work performed to the amount of $4,632.73, and drew the money, and for this amount the state asks for judgment.

The only bills of any importance that have passed the legislature this session have originated in the house. The most important of these measures is the Anderson road bill which completely revolutionizes the system of road management in the state, taking the matter out of the hands of the local road supervisors and placing it in the hands of the township board of trustees, who are required to employ a superintendent of roads in each township. Under the present system each township is divided up into several districts and the work on the road is performed in a desultory manner without any system, the result being that a great deal of it is wasted. Under the plan which this bill provides the work will all be done by contract, and for this purpose all of the taxes will be paid in cash, with the single exception of the poll tax, and the great majority of it will probably be paid in cash. The people of the state do not realize the importance of this measure, although it has been given wide publicity. It will undoubtedly result in a speedy improvement of the country roads throughout the state. The work will be done in a systematic manner, and the money raised by taxation will not be wasted. There will no longer be any possibility of working out the road tax or pretending to work it out.

Another important measure which has been passed by both houses and will probably be signed by the governor is the Dunham compulsory education bill.

The negotiable instrument act, H. F. 351, which passed the house recently and is now in the hands of the senate, is now a law in this identical form in several different states, including the great commercial states, such as New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin and Ohio, and by act of congress, in the District of Columbia. Ohio has passed it this winter, and a few days ago in New Jersey the house adopted it by unanimous vote. It does not change the Iowa laws in any particular, it is said by those who back it, and the object of its adoption is not to effect changes in the law, but to codify the law on negotiable instruments and make the same accessible and certain for the business interests of the state. It has been said that it abolishes days of grace for Iowa. This is not true. The bill has the endorsement of members of the supreme court and of the lawyers generally. It will conform the practice under Iowa laws to the practice in the states surrounding this one.

The fish and game law as passed prohibits the taking of in excess of forty game fish by any one person in one day during the open season; it defines pickerel and cat fish as fish whose taking is prohibited between April 1 and May 15. It provides that the taking of fish by using lime, dynamite, drugs, etc., shall be unlawful; and also within 300 feet of a fishway; making this punishable $100 fine or imprisonment. It adds cat fish to game fish. It allows certificates to issue for taking buffalo, suckers, gars, red horse, quill beaks, etc., which prey on game fish. Turtle doves are added to the game birds whose taking is prohibited during closed seasons. The open season for squirrels is made to apply in September instead of June. The bill also exempts the game warden and his deputies from liability for destroying illegal fish and game apparatus.

Ad. White of Lynnville was found dead from the effects of drinking too much lemon essence. Death came at the end of a drunken debauch and the coroner thought inquest unnecessary. Deceased leaves large family.

H. R. Paine, an old settler of Webster county, and a prominent farmer living near Dayton, was instantly killed in a runaway accident. Mr. Paine was driving down a steep hill and the team ran away. Paine was thrown violently from the wagon seat and his neck was broken by the fall. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Henry Clay Beard, who was recently elected mayor of Mt. Ayr at the recent municipal election, is but 24 years of age, and is said to be the youngest mayor in the state of Iowa. Mayor-elect Beard is a successful young attorney, a graduate of the law department of the University of Iowa and a popular young man. His administration gives promise of a success.

A dispatch from Preston, Minn., says officers and men of the executive committee of the Minnesota and Iowa Electric Railway company met there. Arrangements were made to incorporate in the state of Iowa and to have the survey made from Chatfield, Minn, through to Decorah, Ia., as soon as practicable. Stock has been subscribed by residents of Preston to the amount of $60,000 or $70,000.

sufficient vitality, an operation for ovarian troubles. Not a very cheerful prospect, to be sure. I, however, was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash; I did so, fortunately for me. Before a month had passed I felt that my general health had improved; in three months more I was cured, and I have been in perfect health since. I did not lose an engagement or miss a meal.

"Your Vegetable Compound is certainly wonderful, and well worthy the praise your admiring friends who have been cured are ready to give you. I always speak highly of it, and you will admit I have good reason to do so."—MRS. G. BRUCE, Lansing, Mich.

Shot In His Left Leg

For all kinds of sores, burns, bruises or other wounds DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a sure cure. Skin diseases yield to it at once. Never fails in cases of piles. Cooling and healing. None genuine but DeWitt's. Beware of counterfeits. "I suffered for many years from a sore caused by a gun shot wound in my left leg," says A. S. Fuller, English, Ind. "It would not heal and gave me much trouble. I used all kinds of remedies to no purpose until I tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes completely cured me." J. L. Harr.

Oneway Settlers Rates

will be in effect from all points on the Iowa Central road to points in Minnesota and North and South Dakota on March 4, 11, 18 and 25 and April 1 and 8, 1902, at very low rates. If you contemplate making a trip it will pay you to consult the nearest local agent of the Iowa Central Road or address Geo. S. Batty, G P & T A, Marshalltown, Ia. apr8

Neglect Means Danger

Don't neglect biliousness and constipation. Your health will suffer permanently if you do. DeWitt's Little Early Risers cure such cases. M. B. Smith, Butternut, Mich., says: DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the most satisfactory pills I ever took. Never gripe or cause nausea." J L Harr

The Great Dismal Swamp

Of Virginia is a breeding ground of malaria germs. So is low, wet or marshy ground everywhere. These germs cause weakness, chills and fever aches in the bones and muscles, and may induce dangerous maladies. But Electric Bitters never fail to destroy them and cure malarial troubles. They will surely prevent typhoid. "We tried many remedies for malaria and stomach and liver troubles," writes John Charleston, of Byesville, O. "but never found anything as good as Electric Bitters. Try them. Only 50c. Harr guarantees satisfaction.

A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmer Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only. Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

Prospective Investors

Should look up information regarding lands along and contiguous to the line of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Ry., before uying. Professional and business men of all kinds should acquaint themselves with the many opportunities offered at the new towns along this railway. On the first and third Tuesdays of March, April and May, round trip tickets, at very low rates, will be on sale to points in the following territory: Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, British Columbia, Canadian Northwest, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indian Territory, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Manitoba, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Mississippi, Montana, New Mexico, Nebraska, North Dakota, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin, Northern Michigan and Wyoming. Full information regarding rates, time of trains, etc., will be cheerfully given upon application to any representative of this company.

TO THE FARMER AND HIS WIFE.

The TIMES has arranged with the Journal of Agriculture, St. Louis, Mo., so that subscribers may receive that valuable paper a whole year for 50 cents, which is just half of the regular price. It is generally conceded that the Journal of Agriculture is one of the finest and most influential farm and household papers in the United States, and that it holds a secure position among the leading lights of the agricultural world. It was established in 1866 (36 years ago) is published weekly and contains 16 large pages, Numbered among its contributors are men whose articles on agricultural matters are accepted as authority. Every issue contains valuable pointers on agriculture, horticulture, poultry, live stock, dairy, bees, etc., besides fiction, poetry, humor and miscellaneous matter. Once a month a beautiful 16-page Magazine, with cover of special design, is issued by the Journal, which appeals especially to the ladies owing to the stories, fashion notes and other fine reading matter contained therein.

The special price of 50 cents hardly pays postage and is only made to introduce the Journal into the homes of our readers. All those who wish to take advantage of this offer will please send 50 cents (in stamps if desired) to the editor of the KLEMME TIMES, Klemme, Iowa, who will arrange at once for a year's subscription in their favor to the Jonrnal of Agriculture. Mention this offer and write name and full address plainly.

ALL ABOUT SPIRIT AND OKOBOJI LAKES

SENATE DOWN ON SWINDLING.

Votes to Restrict Companies Doing an Unlawful Co-operative Business.

Des Moines, April 5.—The senate yesterday, after exposing the alleged swindling methods which have been employed by certain companies unincorporated in Iowa, but doing a co-operative business in the state, passed the bill which had been drawn by the attorney general and endorsed by the state auditor, placing these companies under strict building and loan regulations and prohibiting the existing companies from winding up their present business in this state.

Senator Griswold had charge of the bill, which was reported favorably by his committee on building and loan. In his speech in support of the bill he named the half dozen companies complained of. The list he gave includes what is known as the American Home Investment company of Des Moines, the National Tontine Savings association of Des Moines, the Mutual Co-operative Home company of Des Moines, the Provident Home Co-operative company of Kansas City, the Tontine Savings association of Minneapolis, and the Home Building company of Chicago. These companies offer homes, he explained, on the co-operative plan and secure investors by promising returns which they cannot possibly make. The Minneapolis company offers a diamond to its investors.

The bill provides that all unincorporated organizations, associations, societies, partnerships or individuals conducting a business, the purpose of which is to create a fund derived from periodical payments by members of such organizations, etc., upon contracts or otherwise, as well as from fines, forfeitures, incidental fees and payments of premiums and interest, which fund is to be loaned or advanced to members of the organization, for the purpose of enabling them to acquire the ownership or free possession of real estate, or to construct buildings, shall be deemed building and loan associations and come under the building and loan laws of the state. Sworn statements of resources and liabilities must be filed with the executive council and if such business is permitted to be carried on, securities to the amount of $50,000 must be deposited with the state auditor. The bill is lengthy, but these are the most important provisions.

GRAND OLD IOWA MAN GONE.

Death of Francis Varga, the Hungarian Patriot.

Leon, April 7.—Francis Varga, the well-known Hungarian patriot, passed away at his home here Saturday evening, aged about 85 years.

Francis Varga, judge advocate general of Louis Kossuth's provisional government in Hungary during the revolution of 1848, and Ladislaus Madarasz, for thirty years secretary of state in Hungary and fellow member with Kossuth in the trinity at the head of the provisional government of '49, have been living here on land which they secured from the United States government fifty years ago. Madarasz is now 91 years of age, and Varga was six years his junior, but both still took an active interest and participation in the affairs of their adopted country and state. Varga has attended every republican state convention in Iowa for the past half century.

As judge advocate general, Mr. Varga beheaded many Austrian soldiers and noblemen within six months and from his decree there was no appeal. As secretary of state Ladislaus Madarasz for thirty years was as prominent in Hungaria as was Blain, in his prime, in the United States, and for six months he shared with Louis Kossuth the burden of responsibility of the provisional government in Hungary.

ELKINS GETS A PARDON.

House Finally Concurred With Senate in Pardon.

Des Moines, April 5.—The house yesterday reconsidered its action of Thursday and concurred in the senate resolution granting a pardon to John Wesley Elkins, who in 1889 murdered his father and mother. The vote was 48 to 39, while the vote of Thursday was 47 to 46 against. A telegram was sent to Elkins at once. It was said in the legislature that his incarceration was illegal from the beginning, because his age was 12 years, and the courts have held that a child under 14 years cannot be held legally capable of crime. The action of the legislature was a great victory for Senator Whipple, who championed the pardon.

OVER A MILLION A MONTH.

An Iowa Daily Newspaper Breaks the Circulation Record.

Des Moines, April 7.—The Des Moines Daily News has broken the record by passing the point of a million circulation a month. Its issues in March aggregated 1,117,638, or 36,052 per day. The Daily News is now issued every day in the year, having added a large Sunday edition in January. The price of the daily and Sunday editions to mail subscribers is $1.50 per year, $1 for eight months, 80 cents for six months, 50 cents for three months and 25 cents for one month.

The other Des Moines dailies are issued but six times a week. The News now claims the largest circulation in the United States in proportion to the population of its home city.

CUMMINGS' BILL PASSES

PROVIDES FOR REORGANIZATION OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Judges Will Receive $6,000 a Year and Will Hold Practically Continuous Session.

Des Moines, April 7.—One of the important bills of the session has finished its course through the legislature. This is the Cummings bill for the reorganization of the supreme court. The house concurred in the senate amendments to this measure and thus insured its enactment into law. The bill will not go into effect until January 1, 1904. It provides for an increase of the judges' salaries from $4,000 to $6,000 per year and its effect will be practically continuous sessions of the court. It will also, not in terms, but in practice, require the judges to make their residence in Des Moines.

The bill has been pending most of the session. It was introduced in the house by Cummings and referred to the committee on compensation of public officers. It was reported out with minor amendments. The house discussed it and returned it to the same committee, where it was emasculated. It finally got through the house, but it provided merely for an increase of salaries to $5,000. The senate substituted for this bill a measure that was practically the original Cummings bill and passed it and it was this measure the house has just endorsed by concurrence in the senate amendments to the house bill.

The Cummings bill provides for three sessions of the supreme court. The first will begin on the second Tuesday in January and end the first Monday in May. The second will begin the first Tuesday after the first Monday in May and extend to the third Monday in September. The third will begin the third Tuesday after the third Monday in September and will end the third Saturday in December. Thus the bill contemplates a practically continuous term of court. Vacations are allowed, but are not to exceed thirty days except between the first Monday in July and the third Monday in September. No judge is to receive any compensation for work done in any other line than that pertaining to his office. It is expected the court under the new law will be enabled to catch up with its work. No more cases are to be submitted at one term than can be decided by the court the next term.

GOOD PRICES FOR CATTLE.

End of the Three Days' Sale of Finely Bred Stock.

Newton, April 4.—The sale of pure bred Shorthorns at the new fine stock pavilion, has closed. Carrier & Son's offering held the attention of the breeders and farmers in the forenoon, and that of George M. Woody, of Collins, Iowa, yesterday afternoon. During the entire three days' sale over 250 pure breds were sold. Mr. Woody's offering saw the climax of high prices. Many of these were imported cattle, and particularly well bred. He received a total of $21,550 for fifty-four head, or an average of over $339. The imported roan cow, Lily of the Valley, sold to F. A. Shaffer and West Bros., of Estherville, Ia., for $1,750. Twenty-eight head sold for $400 each or over. The sales this forenoon were not of the fancy Scotch breeding, but the cattle were very good, and eleven heifers averaged $300. He received $9,255 for forty-five head, or an average of $188.88. Everybody seems well pleased with the sales, and others are contemplated by breeders outside of the county.

SOIL IS IN FINE CONDITION.

Director Sage Says the Season So Far Has Been Excellent.

Des Moines, April 4.—Director Sage of the Iowa weather and crop service, is preparing to begin issuing the weekly bulletins of the service the 15th of the month, containing complete crop reports from every part of the state. "I have not known soil conditions to be any better at any time in past years than now," he says. "The ground went into the winter very dry, and every practice of the soil is soft and pulverized. We have not as much water in the ground now as usual, and some farmers have begun to complain in advance for fear of another drouth, but conditions are similar to those in the spring of 1895, when we had a fine crop year. There has been much warm weather in March and we are now more than 200 degrees ahead of the normal here in Iowa. We may have a backward April, but certainly the season has thus far been most excellent. The farmers are far ahead with their work, more plowing has been done than usual, and preparations for seeding are well advanced in every part of the state."

The only adverse weather reports came about the middle of March, but fruit was not sufficiently developed to cause any harm. Some winter wheat was injured.

Youngest Mayor in State.

Mt. Ayr, April 4.—Henry Clay Beard, who was recently elected mayor of this city at the recent municipal election, is but 24 years of age and is said to be the youngest mayor in the state of Iowa. Mayor-elect Beard is a successful young attorney, a graduate of the law department of the State University of Iowa and a popular young man. His administration gives promise of a success.

Victim of Lemon Extract.

Newton, April 4.—Ad. White of Lynnville, was found dead from the effects of drinking too much lemon essence. Death came at the end of a drunken debauch and the coroner thought an inquest unnecessary. Deceased leaves a large family.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Warming the Cow Stables.

The Irish Homestead comments on the warming of cow stables as follows:

At a meeting of the Veterinary Medical Association, Mr. Pottie, who read a paper on "How to Make the Most of a Milch Cow in Winter," laid great stress on keeping the byre comfortable and especially in regard to temperature. He has tried experiments on the point and found that a temperature of 63 deg. F. was the proper one. When the temperature was raised to 67 deg. F. the supply of milk began to decline. He also discovered that it did not take long to decrease the yield of milk by lowering the temperature, but it took a far longer time to restore the lost quantity by raising the temperature again. Mr. Pottie recommends in cold weather to stop the doors and ventilators, and thus raise the temperature from the animal heat. To my mind this system may do well for a time, but we fear the health of the animals would ultimately suffer from breathing air charged with carbonic acid gas. Although more costly, we should prefer artificially heating the byres during very cold weather to trying the experiment of doing it with foul air. On the other hand, in time of cold or stormy weather, there would be no need for keeping doors, windows or ventilators as widely open as in times of calm or heat.

Summer Soiling Crops.

However good the pastures may be, there are times when they must be supplemented with forage crops and grain rations to maintain the dairy herd in good flow of milk, and the poorer the pastures the greater the necessity. The earliest of the green forage crops is rye, and it affords a generous supply of good feed although it comes at a time when the feed supply is usually quite sufficient for the time being. The use of rye in the early spring makes it possible to hold in reserve a larger surplus of feed for midsummer. It can be sown in the corn fields after the last plowing, and in most seasons it will afford a good supply of green feed after the corn crop has been secured in the fall. This practice tends to eradicate weeds and renovate the soil. First among the soiling crops for midsummer and early autumn, I would place sorghum. Its hardiness, vigor and growth, abundant yield and adaptation to our soil, place it among the most reliable and profitable crops of the farm, regardless of drouth or other abnormal climatic conditions. Any part of the crop not needed for summer feeding in the green state can be cured in the form of excellent winter fodder.—C. F. Curtiss.

The Dairy Pasture.

The director of the Iowa Experiment Station says: The problem as our lands become more valuable will be not how to do with less grass, but how to get more of it. Pasture lands may become worn out, or what is more properly termed, "run out," quite as readily and completely as tillable lands. No part of the farm will yield better returns for careful attention and good treatment than the pasture. Some simple experiments conducted in the Iowa college farm pastures have furnished striking results in favor of pasture culture. The application of ten quarts of clover seed per acre, disced and harrowed into blue grass pasture in the early spring, increased the yield 65 per cent over pastures immediately adjoining that received no treatment. Pasture lands thus treated produce a heavier, denser growth, and better variety of grasses, and stand drouth better and the improvement extends over several seasons. This treatment should be alternated with top dressing applied preferably during the fall or winter, followed with the harrow in the spring. The best pastures are those that are never disturbed by the plow.

Keep Up the Milk Flow.

A well-known writer on dairy subjects, says: Careful breeding and inherited excellence may be set at naught by insufficient or unsuitable feed, even for a brief period. The successful dairyman will carefully provide in advance for the feed supply during every month of the entire year. Too frequent provision is made only for the winter months. The severest test sometimes comes in midsummer rather than in midwinter, when the tendency appears to be to trust to chance and let the dairy cow take the season's feed supply as it comes. The milk supply of the average creamery falls off more rapidly on pasture in "dog days" than in the midst of winter. Milk yield lost by the herd at any season of the year can never be fully regained. The entire subsequent yield during any period of lactation will be mainly governed by the extent of the decline during an unfavorable period. The dairy cow and likewise the dairy herd that makes the best yield must have no adverse periods at any time. It is the evenly sustained yield rather than the sudden spurt that determines the year's total.

Sayings by Mumford.

Professor Mumford, in some remarks made before a class in live stock, said:

You can't get the desired quality into native beef, without the help of some of the high-bred beef blood. In the Chicago market when a man says "there is a fine bunch of steers," he means they are high-bred steers. * * * A pedigree and a certificate of registry are entirely different things. Every animal has a pedigree. A certificate of registry is no guarantee of individual excellence. Why? Because every registry association in this country will accept for registry an animal whose parents have been recorded. As long as it is possible to register poor animals a pedigree will be no certificate of quality. We may have a well-bred grade animal, or we may have a very poor registered animal. It is not necessary to buy an inferior registered animal, for there are plenty of good ones. * * * The next important thing after individual excellence is prepotency. It is a well-known fact that a registered animal is more prepotent than an ordinary animal, for it has been bred along certain lines for many years. There is no place for the use of the grade bull in breeding.

A Serviceable Coop.

The coop shown in the illustration has some decided advantages over most coops. A part of the run is covered by the board roof. This gives protection from the sun on hot days and from rain in stormy days, while permitting the birds free exercise and air. It may be modified so as to be easily cleaned and to make easy the handling of the brood.

Poultry Briefs.

Fowls do not need nostrums. The habit of feeding flocks large quantities of red pepper and other spices is not one to be encouraged. Generally, too, such things are fed blindly and must often result in disarrangement of the digestive system.

The advice is given to get rid of the old roosters before the breeding season begins. It is thought better to mate young roosters with old hens to get chicks both vigorous and hardy. The young cockerel imparts the vigor and the old hen the ability to withstand adverse conditions.

The causes for soft shelled eggs may be various. Among them we may mention the lack of shell-forming material in the food, the failure of the oviduct to secrete shell material, or its inability to hold the egg till the shell is properly formed around it. The feeding of foods deficient in lime may be and probably is the principal cause of the deficiency. In a state of nature fowls lay fewer eggs than they do when brought under the care of man. Moreover, they have in a wild state access to so many different kinds of food that they are sure to get enough lime somewhere for the eggs they lay. Under artificial conditions it seems to be quite necessary for man to supply lime in addition to food, especially if that food be deficient in lime.

The fellows that have been selling the so-called "red albumen" seem to have made a pretty fair haul of "suckers." It is positively astonishing that so many people should rush off to the druggist and pay 60 cents a pound for something that has merely been mentioned in some non-agricultural paper. We have over 50 experiment stations in this country, and it is an easy matter to write them concerning a thing of this kind. Any reputable agricultural paper will also run to earth a fraud when the attention of the editor is called to it. This "red-albumen" on analysis was found to contain one-tenth of one per cent of albumen, and the rest of the mixture consisted of sand and oxidized iron (red paint). Instead of being worth 60 cents a pound, it was worth only 2 cents a pound for paint.

From a critical examination of the exterior points of an animal a fairly correct estimate can always be made of the quality of the interior or hidden points.

HIS CRAZE FOR NUMBERS.

Man Possessed by a Mania for Memorizing Them.

"I read recently," writes a correspondent, "of the habit that some men have of counting the steps in the flights of stairs they ascend and descend, of touching the iron posts they pass and so on. I have a habit similar to these that annoys me greatly.

"I make note of all sorts of numbers and remember them; they float in my brain persistently, as the tune of some popular but commonplace song will go with all of us. Thus, when I am reading a book I remember the page I leave off at—say, page 182—and all day long that page will be in my mind, and when I have finished the book I can tell you at just what pages I stopped reading at each sitting.

"When I get off a train I know the locomotive's number, and the numbers of the cars, and for hours I keep running over these numbers, as though it were of paramount importance for me to remember them, when, as a matter of fact, it is my desire to forget them at once. I can tell you the number of stairs in at least fifty flights that I occasionally use, and the number of flagstones in the walk from my house to the railroad station, and the number of iron poles in each square on Chestnut street, from Broad street down to Delaware avenue, and dear knows how many other things beside.

"My mind is nothing but a storehouse of numbers, and every day the storehouse gets a little fuller. The thing is a disease almost," concludes the correspondent, according to the Philadelphia Record, "but I can't find any cure for it."

THE STRONG MAN AND THE BABY.

Story That Will Convey a Moral Lesson to Fathers.

A chap who had been the strong man of his class as college, who held the amateur championship as a hammer thrower and had lifted 890 pounds dead weight, was wont to brag of his prowess.

"My muscles are like iron," he would say. "I am never tired. I can outrun a trolley car any reasonable distance. My lungs have an expansion of five and three-eighths inches. I'm as hard as nails, and old Mr. Rheumatism has taken my name off his visiting list."

Finally the chap married and in due time he became a father. He was proud of this and spent $5.40 in telegrams to friends and relatives, $12.50 for cigars and $18.65 for drinks.

The baby thrived and grew. At the end of four months the youngster was an old story and weighed twenty-two pounds and a few ounces. When the mother wanted the erstwhile proud father to tote the heir from the house to the trolley car the father made an awful roar.

Before walking a block perspiration poured down the old man's face and he breathed like a stalled gasoline automobile. He complained sorely.

"This kid weighs a ton," he declared.

"My dear," said his wfie, "before we were married you boasted of your strength, and even since I became your happy bride you have come home at night, or rather in the morning, with a load that would have kept you off a boulevard where heavy traffic is prohibited. Men are so unreasonable."

Moral: It is the burden you can't drop that weighs heaviest.

The Corinth of St. Paul Has Vanished.

Old Corinth, that St. Paul visited so frequently and which was one of the most important, luxurious, immoral and enterprising cities of his day, is dead and buried. Buttercups and dandelions are growing upon his grave as bright and cheerful as those that decorate the prairies of Kansas or the dooryards of New England. New Corinth, a modern town, which lies at the head of the gulf, resembles Santa Fe and other of the adobe towns of New Mexico and Arizona. It is surrounded by clay cliffs, weatherworn into fantastic shapes and the dust is quite as deep in the unpaved streets. The same lean cattle, mangy dogs and halfnaked children playing in the sunshine; the same diminutive donkeys, the modern "Greek slaves," bearing burdens that hide their bodies and leave only their legs and ears exposed; the same mud fences and adobe walls; the same bake ovens beside the cabins and women of similar features, wearing similar garments, picking the live stock out of the children's hair. Crowds of men are sitting at tables in front of the cafes drinking coffee and talking politics, and the same dilapidated vehicles that you see in the old Spanish-American settlements await the traveler's arrival at the railway station.

Claims Invention of "Old Glory."

Capt. William Driver, a Salem, Mass., skipper, is credited with the bestowal of the name "Old Glory" to the stars and stripes. It was in 1851 and the flag to which he gave the name was carried by the brig Charles Doggett all around the world and is now on exhibition at the Essex institute, Salem.

SOME WONDERFUL CROPS IN WESTERN CANADA.

The Territorial Government Reports Show Results Beyond Belief.

Regina, Assiniboia, Canada, January 10th.—At the Agricultural Statistics Branch of the Department of Agriculture for the Territories, reports are now being received from grain threshers throughout the Territories, for statistical purposes. The reports are somewhat delayed this year, owing to the extensive crop and the delay in getting it threshed. The Department of Agriculture is leading the way in a new departure, with regard to the collection of crop statistics. In the older provinces, crop estimates are based entirely on the opinion of persons interested in the grain business who ought to be, and no doubt are, well posted upon the probable yields. Still the reports are simply a matter of opinion, in which a mistake may easily be made. The Territorial Department, however, has adopted the system of returns of crops actually threshed, upon which to base their reports. The accuracy of the reports cannot, therefore, be gainsaid, for they represent a compilation of actual threshing results. In this connection, it might be mentioned that the Department is organizing a system of growing crop returns, which will be in operation next summer. The information thus obtained, with estim[illegible] acreage, will be available for b[illegible] men, banks, railway compan[illegible] other interests which have t[illegible] the future in making provi[illegible] conduct of their business.

Threw His Canes Away.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., April 7th. Mr. C. L. Smith of 309 Anne St., the Secy. of the Trades Council has written this startling statement for publication.

"I feel it my duty to make public the facts of my recent illness and recovery. I was very sick and sore, and had to walk with the aid of two canes. It was a very painful attack, but I don't know what it was. Some said it was Lumbago and others that it was Sciatica or Rheumatism.

"I was told to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, and began a treatment. After I had used one box I could walk with one cane, and after two boxes were used I could walk without any help. I kept on and three boxes cured me completely.

"I am now well and happy without a pain or an ache and I can very truly say that Dodd's Kidney Pills are worthy of my greatest praise."

Women in the Springtime Need a Tonic. Spring Fever is Spring Catarrh. Peruna Cures Catarrh.

A Beautiful Club Woman's Recovery.

Los Angeles, Cal., 539 S. Olive Street, May 5, 1901.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen:—"I suffered with pain in my right side for over eight years. Doctors said my liver was affected. My complexion was dark and yellow, I had a bad taste in my mouth, and was tired all the time. I took a great deal of medicine, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I read in the paper of Peruna, and decided to give it a trial. I felt better before the first bottle was gone, and after taking three bottles I was cured, and I have enjoyed perfect health since."

LENA HILTON.

Miss Lena Hilton, is President of the Wednesday Whist Club, of Los Angeles.

As a spring medicine Peruna is a never failing remedy. It cleanses the blood through digestion, and gives tone to the whole system by increasing the nutritive value of the food. "Spring fever," as it is sometimes called, which produces a tired out, sleepy feeling, and inability to do much mental or physical work, is the result of a sluggish digestion.

The great popularity that Peruna has is due to the fact that in all such cases it at once corrects digestive derangements and enriches the blood by purifying this very important source of that vital fluid.

Mrs. J. B. Finn, 82 East High Street Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"A few years ago I had to give up social life entirely, as my health was completely broken down. The doctor advised a complete change and rest for a year. As this was out of the question for a time, I began to look around for other means of restoring my health.

"I had often heard of Peruna as an excellent tonic, so I bought a bottle to see what it would do for me, and it certainly took hold of my system and rejuvenated it, and in less than two months I was in perfect health, and now when I feel worn out or tired a dose or two of Peruna is all that I need."

MRS. J. E. FINN.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen: — Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

Dished up to Suit all Classes by Our Special Correspondent.

Corn planting will soon be the order of the day.

Frank Meter sports a new top buggy. Girls, be ready when he drives around.

John Braund is again at Klemme scraping faces in Baumgartner's tonsorial parlor.

Frank Marshall, who went to Minnesota with Fred Heikmeyer returned home last Saturday.

Paul Quintus and Charley Stromer have each added commodious additions to their dwellings.

Geo. Ell placed a new chimney on the Ell Center school house in place of the old one that smoked so.

If the wind and dust storm on last Friday was a fair sample of Dakota, we don't have any hankering for to live there.

The Ell Center boys have organized a ball nine and we shall expect to see some hot games on the diamond this summer.

Quarterly meetings will be held at Pleasant Md next Sunday with Rev. Smylie in charge. All are cordially invited to attend.

Frank Flint, the enterprising director at Pleasant Mound, has the school house cleaned, and is as neat as a new pin for the spring term.

Jack Glanville has gone to North Dakota to live on his homestead His sister, Miss Rose, who is visiting friends near Forest City, will josn him some time in the near future.

Last Thursday was Miss Laura Flint's eighteenth birthday and her numerous friends gave her a pleasant surprise party in honor of the occasion. Tripping the light fantastic toe claimed the time until twelve, when an elegant supper was served. After all had eaten to repletion dancing was again resumed, until the hour for departing arrived. Miss Flint received some very nice presents in memory of the happy event, and all present went home feeling well repaid for their evening spent.

OBJECT TO DISTRICTS.

Representatives Declare Senatorial Districts Unconstitutional.

Des Moines, April 12.—Several of the members of the house signed a remonstrance to the senatorial apportionment bill which passed the house shortly before adjournment. They filed the remonstrance in the form of an explanation of their votes against the measure.

Those signing the remonstrance were Cowles of Kossuth, Gilchrist of Pocahontas, Carter of Sioux, Sweeley of Woodbury, Langan of Crawford, Wilson of Buena Vista, Cheney of Clay, Colclo of Carroll, Langan of Clinton, Kendall of Monroe.

They explain their votes on two grounds. First, they declare that the apportionment is unjust and unfair; second, they declare it is unconstitutional, and does not comply with the requirements of section 34 of the constitution, which provides that a reapportionment shall be made after every state and federal census and the senators shall be apportioned according to the population. No change was made in the apportionment, although the population of the northwest has increased greatly during the past few years.

The apportionment was argued at great length before the house, and in the course of his remarks Gardner Cowles declared that if the bill reenacting the present apportionment was passed the governor would be compelled to call a special session of the legislature before the next regular session, for the purpose of enacting a constitutional apportionment. Whether this means that there will be any concerted move to have such a session remains to be seen. Mr. Cowles was active throughout the session in formulating a plan of reapportionment, and together with all of the other members from the northwest, was greatly disappointed that it did not go through. There is no doubt but that the northwest is aroused over the matter, and it may come up and figure in the next state convention.

ST. LOUIS GETS $125,000.

House Finally Recedes and the Senate Appropriation Wins.

Des Moines, April 12.—The St. Louis exposition bill narrowly escaped defeat because of disagreement between the senate and house. The house insisted on $150,000 and the senate on $125,000. The conference committees spent two hours in controversy over the matter and finally the house receded and adopted the senate proposition.

Only the members of the conference committee know how nearly the St. Louis appropriation failed being made. The house had voted $150,000 and the senate $125,000. Neither body would come to the terms of the other, and on the last day a conference committee was appointed to adjust the difference. The house members of the committee met the senate members, expecting to be able to compromise the matter without much difficulty. The senators were stubborn, however, and refused to yield a dollar. The house members insisted on $150,000. The senators began to talk about making no appropriation at all and actually began to make preparations to go back to the senate and report that they could not agree. This would have ment no appropriation. It was with difficulty that the house members succeeded in persuading them to adhere to their own, the senate amendment, making the appropriation $125,000. This was finally reported and ratified by both houses. The conference committee was: for the senate, Maytag, Smith, Brooks, Wilson; for the house, Temple, Clarke, Carter, Cummings.

THREE BILLS QUESTIONED.

All Others Have Been Signed by Governor Cummins.

Des Moines, April 14.—With three exceptions, Governor Cummins has now signed all the bills that were passed by the assembly. He has still three measures before him, which he may or may not veto. The Hubbard bill has been signed. This is the merger measure to allow Iowa railroad to own and control the property and securities of the connecting lines in states not adjacent to Iowa.

The bills not yet signed by the governor are the Griswold measure to require home loan tontine concerns and all unincorporated concerns doing a similar business to come under the building and loan laws; the bill permitting stock insurance companies to write burglarly insurance and the bill that provides that notes for insurance in the hands of receivers and assignees are payable where made.

PART OF THE WAR CLAIM PAID.

Sum of $24,957.12 Turned Into the State Treasury.

Des Moines, April 14.—A warrant on the treasury of the United States, bearing the signature of L. M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, has just reached the state treasury. It called for the payment of a little matter of $24,957.12. It was sent to the executive department several days ago, in partial payment of war claims of the state of Iowa against the United States for expenditures by the state for the troops furnished for the Spanish-American war. The warrant was duly turned over to the treasury by Adjutant General Byers and the proceeds from it will go into the general revenue.

HUBBARD BILL SIGNED.

Governor Cummins Says It Is Harmless Since Amended.

Des Moines, April 14.—Governor Cummins has affixed his signature to what has been known as the Hubbard railway merger bill. This measure removes the limitation which has prevented Iowa lines from absorbing railways beyond the limits of an adjoining state and now permits extension with lines operating in any state, extending the privileges of the Iowa statute to them. It has generally been conceded that the governor would sign the bill as the defeat of the Molsberry merger bill raising the limitation of indebtedness prevents the Hubbard bill from being of any great use to the Hill-Harriman railway deal, and for the further reason that Hubbard amended his measure so as to prevent the merger of competing or parallel lines in order to meet the governor's objections.

"I have signed what is known as the Hubbard bill," said Governor Cummins to a reporter. "This bill as amended, at the instance of the author himself, is not objectionable from any point of view. Prior to this session of the general assembly a railway company organized in this state, could, under section 2038, construct or extend its railway through any state in the union, and under section 2047 could acquire and hold the stocks and bonds of any railway company without limitation in any adjoining state. Under other sections the right of consolidation of parallel and competing railway lines in this and adjoining states had long ago been granted.

"Senator Hubbard's bill as it passed for the first time recognizes and declares that Iowa is against the consolidation of parallel or competing lines; and I therefore look upon it as a distinct advance in the right direction."

IOWA WINS FROM WISCONSIN.

Fourth Annual Debate on Merits of Branch Banking Plan.

Iowa City, April 12.—The University of Iowa won the fourth annual debate with the University of Wisconsin, held here, on the question of "The desirability of amending the national banking laws so as to permit national banks to establish branches." A prize essay, written last summer by the closing speaker for Wisconsin, in which he advocated the branch banking system, played a very prominent part in the debate. Iowa quoted it in approval of her arguments. Mr. Gillett, the author, pleaded ignorance in reply, saying he had not gone to authorities, but was now convinced that he was very wrong. Spangler of Iowa replied that the authorities sat in judgment on his essay and awarded him the prize. The Iowa speakers who affirmed the branch banking system were C. T. Kemmerer of Eldridge, H. E. Spangler of Adair, and E. K. Brown of Solon. They argued that their system meant greater economy, co-operation and efficiency. The Wisconsin speakers who denied were L. George Lohr, Henry Graass and A. D. S. Gillett.

SMITH-ENGLISH BILL PASSED.

Railroad Assessment Measure Passes in the Closing Hours.

Des Moines, April 12.—During the closing hours of the legislature the Smith-English bill was passed.

The bill had been prepared, it was commonly understood, by the governor. It provided that railroads must report to the executive council a large amount of information not heretofore secured from them. They must show their earnings on business entirely in Iowa, on business originating in Iowa and ending outside, on business originating outside and ending inside of Iowa, and on business both originating and ending outside of Iowa, but passing through this state. The house passed it with some amendments, chief of which was to tack onto it section 6 of the original senate railroad taxation measure. This section provides for publicity of the executive council's actions in making the assessment, and permits any single member to demand and secure a roll call on any motion, without a second. The railroads had bitterly opposed it, and it was supposed to be dead. Its resurrection is attributed to Governor Cummins' earnest interest in its behalf. When it came up in the senate there was no serious opposition. The bill passed, and the information will have to be forthcoming in future.

Murder Case Affirmed.

Marshalltown, April 12.—The decision of the supreme court in the case of of John Gray and Pat Dunn was received here with interest and considerable satisfaction. Gray and Dunn were the two tramps who were convicted of the murder of Joseph Williams, a colored teamster, who came to the defense of two white girls of this city whom the men were abusing near the outskirts of the city. The killing of Williams was one of the most brutal crimes that ever occurred in this vicinity. He was shot down while pleading for his life and while seeking a place of safety, the tramps having taken a revolver which Williams had carried from him with which to commit the murder. By the decision of the court both men will be compelled to serve out their sentences.

Callender Postoffice Robbed.

Callender, April 11.—The postoffice at this place was entered by burglars and the safe blown open, apparently with nitro-glycerine. The burglars secured only a small amount of money and stamps, amounting in all to about $20. Entrance was effected through the rear door of the building. The safe door was found lying clear across the room from the safe. No one heard the report.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Des Moines, April 10.—Senate.—The senate concurred in the house amendments to the Hubbard bill, permitting Iowa railroads to consolidate with and acquire other roads in other states not adjacent to Iowa, and it now goes to the governor for his approval or disapproval. The educational institution appropriation bill passed by the senate carries amounts as follows: State university, $35,000 annual additional support and $145,000 general appropriation; agricultural college, $45,000 annual additional support and $45,000 general appropriation; state normal school, $19,500 annual additional support and $4,526 general appropriation. The senate voted to appropriate $250,000 for the improvement of the state capitol building. The senate passed a bill to appropriate $125,000 for the Iowa exhibit at the St. Louis exposition, but the house refused to concur, having appropriated $150,000. The senate passed the house bills for redistricting the state for members of the senate and house of representatives. No changes are made in the senatorial districts. Des Moines and Lee county each loses a member of the house, which are given to districts in northwestern Iowa. It cuts the democrats out of two members of the lower house, and against this there was a strong protest. The senate laid on the table the bills proposing changes in the tax ferret laws of the state. The senate concurred in the house bill to increase the salaries of the district judges from $2,500 to $3,500. There are fifty-three of these judges in Iowa. The bill to create a commission to superintend peddlers of eye-glasses and called a board of optometry was killed by the senate.

House.—The house committee on railroads voted unanimously to recommend the Molsberry bill relating to railroad indebtedness for indefinite postponement, it being known that Governor Cummins would veto it. The house passed the senate bil providing for shot examiners in the coal mines of Iowa, the senate having declined to endorse the house bill requiring operators to hire both shot firers and shot examiners. The house refused to pass the senate bill to make the supreme court reporter an appointive officer within control of the court. This was a big victory for B. I. Salinger. Lyman of Poweshiek offered the following resolution which was seconded by Dunham of Delaware:

"Be it resolved, by the house of representatives of the twenty-ninth general assembly, that the thanks of this body are extended to the Hon. W. L. Eaton for the very able, courteous, and satisfactory manner in which he has discharged the difficult and perplexing duties of speaker of this house. The best wishes of this body follow him during his entire career."

After short addresses by Layman, Dunham, Hughes, Dodds, Walters, Robinson, Kerr, Kendall, Carter, Fury, Kling, Wilson, Lang, Cummings, Koontz, Temple and Clarke, the resolution was adopted by a unanimous vote. The speaker then briefly addressed the house, expressing his thanks for the expressions of the house.

Des Moines, April 11.—Senate.—The twenty-ninth general assembly adjourned sine die this evening at 8:15 o'clock. Legally, it ended at noon, the clock having been stopped at 11:30 until the business of the session was completed. Most of the day was spent in speaking felicitations and in discussing the work of the session. H. F. 176, to set aside a ward in one of the state hospitals for the exclusive treatment of inebriates, was passed. The English bill requiring more specific reports to be made by the railroad companies to the executive council, was passed. The omnibus apropriation bill was passed.

House.—The joint resolution fixing the number and salaries of the employes was passed, as was also the omnibus bill making the general appropriations. After a heated debate the house passed the bill re-enacting the present senatorial apportionment. This bill was passed by the senate almost unanimously after several ineffectual efforts to secure a new apportionment. The house passed the bill authorizing the executive council to make the levy for 1902 to raise $2,300,000, for 1903 to raise $2,000,000. This will necessitate a levy of about 4.1 mills on a valuation of $560,000,000 for the year 1902. Colonel Moore of Davis introduced a bill appropriating $1,000 for the purchase of the oil painting of the late Senator Harlan for the art hall of the historical building. The bill was considered without reference and passed unanimously.

REPRIEVE CAME TOO LATE.

Flutcher Hanged Thirty-five Minutes Before It Arrived.

St. Louis, April 12.—Henry Flutcher, colored, was hanged at sunrise yesterday for the murder of Louis Roth, 16 years of age, August 27, 1900. At 6:45 a. m., just 35 minutes after the fatal drop fell, the following telegram was received by the sheriff from Governor Dockery, granting a respite of 15 days:

"Jefferson City, Mo., April 11.—Joseph F. Dickman, sheriff, St. Louis: I have granted a respite of 15 days in case of Henry Flutcher, to be hanged today. Stay execution. Answer.

(Signed.) "A. M. Dockery, "Governor."

The following reply was sent:

"St. Louis, April 11.—A. M. Dockery, Governor, Jefferson City, Mo.: Henry Flutcher executed 6:10. Telegram of respite receive 6:45.

(Signed.) "Joseph F. Dickman, "Sheriff."

A Nasty Practice.

A nasty practice is what the Chicago Inter Ocean calls the pasting of repeated layers of wall paper, one upon another, thus covering up the filth and germs of disease that may be propagated in the very absorbent and decaying mass of flour paste, paper, animal glue, colors, etc.

They give opinions of eminent health officers and sanitarians, urging that such practice should be stopped by legal enactment, and also take occasion to say that these sanitarians recommend Alabastine as a durable, pure and sanitary coating for walls.

The Inter Ocean says: "This is a very important question, and, as it costs nothing to avoid this danger why take any chances?"

How much of the alarming spread of smallpox and other diseases may be due to unsanitary wall coverings?

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A WISCONSIN PAPER ON WESTERN CANADA.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, One of the Favored Districts.

The following clipped from the correspondence columns of the Eau Claire (Wisconsin) Leader is but one of many letters of a similar character that might be published concerning Western Canada, the land of No. 1 hard wheat and the best cattle on the continent. It is a simple matter to reach the lands spoken of, the Canadian Government having agencies established at St. Paul and Duluth, Minnesota; Grafton, North Dakota; Watertown, South Dakota; Omaha, Nebraska; Kansas City, Missouri; Des Moines, Iowa; Wausau and Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Chicago, Illinois; Indianapolis, Indiana; Sault Ste. Marie and Detroit, Michigan; Toledo and Columbus, Ohio, and by writing to or calling upon any of these agents at these points full information can be secured. This is a great opportunity to secure a home free of cost or if you desire to purchase lands they can be bought now at prices much lower than will exist in a few months. But read what the correspondent referred to has to say of one particular district.

"To the Editor of the Leader—The rush of the land seekers will be to the prairie provinces of the Dominion of Canada. The allurements of a soil that yields 40 bushels of wheat to the acre are too great to be resisted and an immense migration from this country may be confidently predicted. People here laughed at first at the idea of any one leaving the United States for Canada, but the Dominion authorities knew they had a good thing and they stuck to it. Their officials evidently knew the value of printers' ink. They spared no expense in letting the people of this country know that these lands were there and that they were exactly as represented. They did more. They sent out specimens of the crops raised and samples of the grain. We have had them here at four consecutive street fairs, presided over by one of their ablest immigration officers. This gentleman spared no pains. He explained the value of the lands and the richness of the soil from morning to night to all comers.

"All this told in the long run. Several went up from here to spy out the land and like Caleb, the son of Jepunneh, and Joshua, the son of Nun, brought back a good report, and now some ten families will leave here in a few weeks for Saskatoon to settle upon farms there, and others are preparing to follow. Of course many will appear shocked at the idea of any one leaving the stars and stripes for the Union Jack, but patriotism is but a nomenclature after all, and our experience has been that in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand a man is the most patriotic where he can make the most money and do the most harm to those whom he hates."

It will entirely cure the worst forms of Female Complaints, all Ovarian troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Falling and Displacement of the Womb, and consequent Spinal Weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the Change of Life.

It has cured more cases of Backache and Leucorrhœa than any other remedy the world has ever known. It is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the Uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors.

Irregular, Suppressed or Painful Menstruation, Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Flooding, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility quickly yields to it.

Womb troubles, causing pain, weight, and backache, instantly relieved and permanently cured by its use. Under all circumstances it acts in harmony with the laws that govern the female system, and is as harmless as water.

It quickly removes that Bearing-down Feeling, extreme lassitude, "don't care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, Dizziness, Faintness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy or the "blues," and backache. These are sure indications of Female Weakness, or some derangement of the Uterus, which this medicine always cures.

Kidney Complaints and Backache of either sex the Vegetable Compound always cures.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles.

An American Nabob.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Copyright, by STREET & SMITH, New York.

He hurried over to the table, upon which he laid a couple of bank notes, and tearing a sheet of paper from his vade mecum, wrote upon it these words:

"Accept this from a friend. Hope for brighter things in the future—trust in God."

A movement on the part of Mazette warned him it was time to be gone—he only lingered long enough to pin the money and the note to the table and then walked hastily down the stairs.

Once outside the marquis walked toward the Strand with a swinging stride—he seemed to have thrown off some of the cynical moodiness that had marked his intercourse with all men since striking London.

Finally he drew up at a shop almost in the shadow of St. Clement's church, in a neighborhood famous for its literary and artistic atmosphere.

Over the door was the sign of Duval, sacred to many who had handled brush or crayon in the world's metropolis.

M. Duval saw a prospective purchaser, and of course, was all smiles. Miniatures—certainly, he always kept them in stock and had the means of reproducing any photograph at short notice.

He watched the customer separate half a dozen of the little paintings on ivory from the rest, and marveled at the ease with which he had thus picked out all the works of one brush.

"These are the only decent ones you have. Tell me how much for the lot," he said, quietly.

Mr. Duval named a price far in excess of their intrinsic value, judging that he must have been blind to their merits, and was immediately cursing himself under his breath for not having added on a third more, for the marquis carelessly threw the amount down.

"This artist pleases me, sir. I would like to have a dozen family portraits done by the same brush. For each of these I shall pay five pounds to the artist and your commission of one pound. Is that a bargain, M. Duval?"

The dealer snatched at it eagerly.

Consider it settled, then. Now, I am an expert at this work. It is evident to me the artist is a lady."

"Monsieur is quite correct," bowing low and rubbing his hands together with pleasure.

"Very good. There is no need of paper between us—a nudum factum is quite sufficient. But, my dear Monsieur Duval, remember, they must be by the same brush."

"By to-morrow, monsieur, I shall hand you in a package of family pictures which I wish to add to my collection of miniatures. I shall also leave the money here, knowing you to be an honest man, to be paid to the artist, as fast as she completes each ivory."

"Mon Dieu; it is one great pleasure. Would that there were more customers like you, m'sieur. It would then be a happiness to be in trade," said the flattered and delighted dealer in pictures.

The marquis took his leave, filled with a sensation of having started the ball rolling, nor was it until he had gone that M. Duval thought to recall the fact that he had failed to ask his princely customer's name.

BOOK THREE.

The Modern Monte Cristo.

Two weeks more sufficed to make the Marquis of Montezuma famous in London. Every day new accounts of astonishing features connected with his life appeared in the papers.

Naturally the Marquis was the most sought after man in all London.

Bushels of invitations poured in upon him over which his secretaries were busy all day, their labor being usually a polite note, declining the honor on account of pressing engagements.

The Marquis accepted a few invitations, and these generally took him to the clubs, though the season was so late few notables could be met with there.

Captain Livermore had forced the Hon. Prentice Lar ford to keep his word—he had early made the acquaintance of the American Midas, and they reached the friendly stage of intercourse that is marked by a game between gentlemen, but somehow, for the first time in his life, the genial captain found luck run harshly, and, instead of handling some of the wonderful wealth of the nabob, he was stripped of all the ready cash he had at hand.

Certain of retrieving his fortunes, he played time after time. Finally he staked his all on a last chance. Evil fortune followed him to the very end—he was compelled to drink the dregs, for he had lost.

Then, looking up into the face of his opponent, he saw a sparkle in the eyes of the Marquis, a glow of triumph that gave him a cold chill.

Where had he seen that same look before? Cudgel his brain as he would, he could not remember. "I am done for to-night, Marquis; you have won all I possess; your luck is prodigious," he said, as he rose.

"Ah! indeed, you are kind to say so, captain; but I assure you it was not always the case. The demon of misfortune has had his little fling at my door, even as he now knocks at yours, but you see I lived through it, and my hour has come. Shall we enjoy any further social play, captain? I assure you, it is a rare pleasure for me to engage in this little pastime with a gentleman of your skill and attainments."

"I hope to see you again if I am able to scrape any part of my resources together. If not, Marquis, you can be satisfied that I am down to bed rock. I never yield while I have a single weapon left in my hand," he said, grimly.

"I can well believe that, captain," and, returning Livermore's stiff bow, he watched the soldier saunter among the other club members, chatting with this one and laughing at some sally as though nothing had occurred to disturb his equanimity.

The Marquis frowned.

He knew this man was absolutely ruined, and yet his victory had been robbed of half its sweetness because he had failed to quench that indomitable soldier spirit that refused to knuckle under at misfortune's call.

That afternoon he attended a garden party at Lady Catherwood's palatial home. Here he was, as usual, the lion of the occasion, and his hostess was kept busy introducing him. Finally they approached a single figure, standing under a royal palm that had been brought from the famous Catherwood conservatory for the occasion—the figure of a young woman.

Her back was toward those who advanced, but he could catch the queenly poise of her proud head. If her face did not disappoint the anticipation aroused by this first glance, she must be a fit subject for an artist's dream.

"My dear, I have succeeded in rescuing the Marquis, and bring him a captive in my train to pay his respects to my guest and kinswoman," said Lady Catherwood, blandly.

The queenly figure turned, and in so doing came under the soft light of a nearby lantern.

Thus the Marquis found himself face to face with a spectre of the past—again in memory he could see this gloriously beautiful creature gracefully gliding about in the dance, while mandolins and guitars struck weird chords that served as time to her flying feet; again he could see the gay sash tied in a knot that ornamented one plump shoulder, while a shining knife fastened by a scarlet ribbon, decorated the other, the cold, cruel blade nestling against her heaving bosom as she thus invited her hot-blooded admirers to meet in mortal combat, for the guest of Lady Catherwood was no other than Senorita Juanita, the belle of Gautarica.

CHAPTER XVI.

From Over the Sea.

The Marquis of Montezuma bowed low. His face was as calm and unruffled as the summer sky; not even for an instant did he betray the slightest emotion, and yet the surprise must have inwardly staggered him.

The presence of Dona Juanita here, in England—did it portend disaster to his long-cherished plans?

As for the haughty daughter of the dons, she was affable enough, and smiled while extending a dainty hand which he was compelled to accept.

Lady Catherwood had scurried away to look after some necessary details connected with her duties as hostess, for one cannot entertain and enjoy themselves at the same time.

A silence fell upon the two.

The senorita was looking at her companion under half-closed lids, and he awaited what he knew was coming—awaited it with that calmness natural to security.

"Senor Jack, between you and me, there is no need of this coldness, this secrecy. Surely you could not believe me so blind that I did not recognize you at the first glance," said the girl, suddenly laying a hand on his arm.

"I realized that and I have been simply waiting until you might see fit to speak. You see I admit all you say—I am free to confess it," was the cool reply he made.

"Ah, Senor Jack, you are a sphinx—I can make nothing of you. Let me commence upon another tack. You have declared yourself incapable of affection, yet I have known you to lean upon one man with such confidence that I am sure he occupied a place in your heart."

The Marquis showed signs of emotion at last—his wonderful reserve had been pierced.

"Yes," he replied, sadly.

"To this day General Barrajo has not been seen in Gautarica," she continued.

"Poor Pedro—faithful friend," he muttered.

"You alone know his fate, Senor Jack."

"Yes, but all the world shall soon know it, for I have had its feats of arms blazoned upon a stone just about to be sent over. It will be set up in San Jose Cemetery, where his body has lain these two years."

"Is it possible—his death then is a mystery—it was connected with your own adventures?"

"True, Senorita. Together we sought a treasure, shoulder to shoulder we met those who would have robbed us of our prize. We conquered, but Barrajo fell, bleeding in every vein. Our written compact gave the survivor all. His dying wish was that his body should be removed to consecrated ground. There he has lain under a stone marked only 'Don Pedro, who gave his life in battle for a Friend.' It shall be so no longer—all Gautarica shall ring with the valor of his last deed, and crowd to his grave to do the brave old hero honor."

The Marquis for once had been thrown off his guard by the revival of these never-to-be-forgotten scenes, and as memory again brought the heroism of Barrajo before him his face lighted up with an enthusiasm it had not been allowed to disclose, lo, these many days.

And Dona Juanita, seeing the transitory change, surveyed him with kindling eyes.

"Ah! Senor Jack, such satisfaction is sweet to the heart of those who have loved and been thrown aside. I sympathize with you, and nothing would give me greater pleasure than to be allowed a share in your plans—to make your interests my own. Perhaps a woman's wit might help you to secure a quick and terrible revenge."

"You mean well, Dona Juanita; I thank you for the interest shown in my welfare, but whatever my plans may be, they must concern me alone. I could not permit any one to join me in their prosecution, least of all you, whom I have known and respected in other days. So I beg that you will forget what you said, and let us hold intercourse as friends who have met after long separation."

One look she gave him; it was like the glowering stare of a tigress about to leap; then her mood suddenly changed, and she laughed in a mellow way that had no trace of anger in it—in times past this peculiarity had been very manifest in her disposition—the sudden change of front such as marks the consummate actress and the dangerous woman.

"Just as you say, Marquis, but I have a rarely obstinate nature, and, having set my mind on any object it is hard to balk me. Here comes my delightful hostess and kinswoman. At some later date I trust to see you again, when we may chat over scenes in the misty past."

He nodded assent.

The Marquis was glad when my lady dragged him away to another part of the garden to meet others of her fair guests; but he understood what hidden meaning lay beneath the words which the black-eyed Spanish beauty floated after him, and which would arise many times to haunt him:

"Au revoir, Marquis; I always keep my word!"

The opportunity had come at length.

A few hasty words from his hostess and the Marquis found himself face to face with the woman whose falseness to her vows had sent him, a smooth-faced young man, an exile from England five years before.

He had prepared for the meeting, and not by the quiver of an eyelid did he betray himself.

Fedora was as lovely and charming as ever, more matronly, perhaps, but showing no sign of the passage of time.

Several times the Marquis knew his companion was looking at him intently, thinking herself unobserved.

Perhaps some faint memory was struggling for existence in her mind, some floating straw at which she clutched in vain.

Sooner or later doubtless she would awaken to the discovery of his identity, but when that time came the Marquis believed he would have so aroused the old passion that must, during these years, have lain dormant in her heart, that she would even give up a ruined husband, a wretched home, and flee with him.

[To The Pe-ru-na Medicine Co , of Columbus, O.]

"Pe-ru-na is All You Claim For It."

Congressman D. F. Wilber, of Oneonta, N. Y., writes:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen---"Persuaded by a friend I have tried your remedy and I have almost fully recovered after the use of a few bottles. I am fully convinced that Peruna is all you claim for it, and I cheerfully recommend your medicine to all who are afflicted with catarrhal trouble."---DAVID F. WILBER.

Peruna a Preventive and Cure for Colds.

Mr. C. F. Given, Sussex, N. B., Vice President of "The Past-time Boating Club, writes:

"Whenever the cold weather sets in I have for years past been very sure to catch a severe cold which was hard to throw off, and which would leave after-effects on my constitution the most of the winter.

"Last winter I was advised to try Peruna, and within five days the cold was broken up and in five days more I was a well man. I recommended it to several of my friends and all speak the highest praise for it. There is nothing like Peruna for catarrhal afflictions. It is well nigh infallible as a cure, and I gladly endorse it.---C. F. Given.

Gave New Life and Strength.

Mr. Edward Laws, Crown Point, Ind., writes the following:

"I must tell you what a grand help Peruna has been to me. For over two years I suffered with catarrh of the lungs and throat, and although I doctored for it, nothing brought me relief until I tried Peruna. One bottle helped me greatly, and three more effected a complete cure, while at the same time it gave such new life and strength to my whole body that I feel like a new man and ten years younger.

"I hope that my testimonial may induce others who are similarly afflicted to try Peruna."—Edward Laws.

A Prominent Singer Saved From Loss of Voice.

Mr. Julius Weisslitz, 176 Seneca street, Buffalo, N. Y., is corresponding secretary of The Sangerlust, of New York; is the leading second bass of the Sangerlust, the largest German singing society of New York, and also the oldest.

In 1899 The Sangerlust celebrated its fiftieth anniversary with a large celebration in New York City. The following is his testimony:

"About two years ago I caught a severe cold while traveling and which settled into catarrh of the bronchial tubes, and so affected my voice that I was obliged to cancel my engagements. In distress, I was advised to try Peruna, and although I had never used a patent medicine before, I sent for a bottle.

"Words but illy describe my surprise to find that within a few days I was greatly relieved, and within three weeks I was entirely recovered. I am never without it now, and take an occasional dose when I feel run down."—Julian Weisslitz.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Corwith Hustler: Now that garden making is upon us, look well to your chickens, as there is nothing more provoking than to have your garden seed dug out after you have labored hard to prepare the ground and sow it. To one family the garden products are luxuries highly prized, to another it represents almost the entire living for the summer season. In either case it is very aggravating to have the products of your labor and the necessaries of life wantonly destroyed. If you cannot prevent your chickens trespassing on your neighbor. kill them or permit him to do so without protest. Indeed why you should protest when the law declares them his while found on his premises, is unreasonable.

The American youth appears to be getting smarter all the time. A few days ago a teacher in a school not far away gave the scholars a few minutes for conundrums, and one of the youngsters put the following to the school: "If you look down a dog's throat what will you see?" No one could guess the answer and the teacher asked the questioner to explain, and he replied: "Why, the seat of his pants."—Rockford Register.

The Chicago Weekly Inter Ocean is the only weekly newspaper published in Chicago in connection with the great daily papers. It contains a judiciously selected summary of the news of the nation and world, the best stories, home, farm, women's, and other special departments, and fair, patriotic, able editorials, written from a Republican view point. It is by far the best general newspaper of the western states. The regular price for the Weekly Inter Ocean is $1.00 and for the TIMES $1.00, but subscriptions will be received at this office for the two papers in combination for one year for only $1.45

Kanawha and Goodell each have a case of small pox, and following in the footsteps of the Garner Signal and the Goodell Gimlet, the Kanawha Record says their victim caught the disease "at or near Klemme." Great Sneezers! Must Klemme take the blame for the existence of smallpox all over the United States? Bro. Ellsworth knows, if he knows anything, that his statement is absurd, to say the least. The Kanawha smallpox victim is a traveling man, and may have contracted the disease a hundred miles from here. That old gag is nearly worn out, Bro. Ellsworth. For goodness or meanness sake, scare up something original, or at least not quite so aged.

SUMMARY OF LEGISLATION OF RECENT ASSEMBLY.

Review of Work of Entire Session Published Herewith.

Des Moines, April 12.—Nearly two hundred and fifty new measures will go on the statute books as the result of the session of the twenty-ninth general assembly, which was brought to a close yesterday. Of these, about an equal number originated in the house and the senate. Following is a review of the work of the session:

APPROPRIATION BILLS PASSED.

H. F. 155, by Bealer, appropriating $150,000 for Vicksburg monuments and authorizing governor to appoint supervising commission of nine veterans of Iowa regiments that took part in Vicksburg campaign.

S. F. 161, by Garst, making per capita for support of insane hospitals $12 per month and that of Cherokee hospital not to exceed $15. The sum of $6,000 is set apart for transfer of patients to Cherokee.

S. F. 298, by Garst, for $1,620.48, to pay custodian's employes for March.

S. F. 152, by Young of Washington, for $35,000 for two monuments to Iowa troops on Missionary Ridge and one at Lookout Mountain.

S. F. 100, by Smith of Mitchell, for $4,500 for hire of extra legislative employes.

H. F. 71, by Secor, increasing from $2,500 to $4,000 annual Horticultural society appropriation.

S. F. 111, by Harriman, for $2,500 to enable railroad commission to publish 30,000 railway commissioners' maps.

S. F. 276, by Garst, for $7,000 to replace property of Tama Indians destroyed in recent fumigation of reservation.

S. F. 147, by Dowell, appropriation of $1,260.86 for inaugural expenses.

S. F. 134, by Garst, for $1,222.09 for unpaid express bills; $321.52 for unpaid claims allowed by executive council; $400 for freight and express bills of this session.

H. F. 86, by McNie, fixing support fund for institution at Vinton at $22 per capita for nine months of the year.

H. F. 188, by Jenks, making similar provision for institution at Council Bluffs.

S. F. 49, by Hobart, for $138,000 for completion and furnishing of the Cherokee hospital.

Senate file 278, by Young, of Washington, for $500 for monument at Mt. Pleasant to Charles Shepherd, a revolutionary soldier, who lies in an unmarked grave in Mills county.

H. F. 107, providing additional support for Soldiers' Home.

H. F. 352, making appropriation to Charles Gray for publishing original notice in case of Bettanier vs. Caille.

H. F. 265, fixing support to Eldora at $10 per capita.

H. F. 454, appropriating $1,000 for purchase of picture of James Harlan.

S. F. 176, by Smith of Mitchell, appropriating $250,000 for the improvement of the capitol, $62,500 to be expended annually from June 30, 1903, to June 30, 1906, and providing for a commission.

The board of control omnibus appropriation bill, carrying $716,577.50 for all extraordinary appropriations for the institutions under the board of control, with the exception of $138,000, appropriated in a separate measure for Cherokee hospital.

H. F. 447, by Hughes, appropriating $15,000 for the erection and equipment of a new laundry building at Mt. Pleasant hospital.

Bill appropriating $27,000 for stock pavilion on state fair grounds.

By Moore, to increase armory rent for guard companies from $300 to $350 and making the standing appropriation for the guard $57,350.

S. F. 21, to reimburse Greene county for care of non-resident insane patient.

H. F. 142, to reimburse F. M. Powell for $160 for money expended in securing vacation of public road at Glenwood.

Bill to appropriate for reimbursement of Mitchellville property owners $500 for over-drain of sewage.

S. F. 345, providing for payment of expenses of the state architect.

Bills appropriating a total of $11,000 for rescue homes, of which $7,000 goes to Benedict home of Des Moines and $2,000 each to Sioux City and Dubuque institutions.

H. F. 234, to appropriate $1,500 annually hereafter for the State Historical society at Iowa City and $9,500 for publication of historical documents.

The educational institutions appropriation bill carrying the following: State university $35,000 annual additional support and $145,000 general appropriation; Agricultural college $45,000 annual additional support and $45,000 general; State Normal $19,500 annual additional support and $4,526 general appropriation.

St. Louis exposition appropriation bill, carrying $125,000.

General omnibus bill carrying about $350,000 for salaries of employes.

To appropriate to pay for paving the state's share of East Walnut street adjoining Governor's Square.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED.

Two important joint resolutions passed at this session.

The Harper joint resolution provides for biennial elections. It is modeled closely after the Titus measure which, after the people had adopted the amendment, was declared invalid by the supreme court, on account of failure to print the joint resolution in full in one of legislative journals.

The Temple joint resolution contemplates amendment to the state constitution, increasing the number of members of the house of representatives to 108. The plan is to allow every county in the state at least one representative and to give two to the nine counties having the largest population.

Both of these joint resolutions if passed by the Thirtieth general assembly, will be submitted to the electors at the November election of 1904.

A number of joint resolutions relating to employes and minor matters were passed.

Concurrent resolutions were numerous, the most important being the Trewin measure favoring the Nelson-Corliss bill, intended to strengthen the interstate commerce commission and enhance its powers.

THE PARDONS RECOMMENDED.

The following persons, sentenced for life for murder, were recommended for conditional pardons: Theodore Bushick and Joseph McCrary of Mills county; William Young of Woodbury county; George Stanley of Story county; Wesley Elkins of Clayton county; Otto Otten of Pocahontas county; John Ballew of Webster county.

MINES AND MINING.

House file 12, by Kendall, requiring that members of the mine examining board shall hold certificates of competency as mine foremen and at least one member be a hoisting engineer, all of whom must have at least five years' actual experience.

House file 13, by Kendall, providing for the semi-annual examination of coal mines having an output of at least fifty tons per day.

Senate bill requiring shot examiners in coal mines.

BANKS AND BANKING.

Senate file 122, by Alexander, authorizing savings banks to receive deposits to twenty times their capital stock and surplus, an increase from the present limitation of ten times.

Senate file 187, by Alexander, authorizing banks to loan up to one-half the amount of their capital stock in a single loan when the same is secured by mortgage on real estate worth twice the amount of the loan.

LEGALIZING ACTS PASSED.

First in importance of the legalizing acts passed by the Twenty-ninth general assembly is the senate judiciary committee measure intended to legalize conveyance of real estate in cases where the husband, acting by supposed right through power of attorney, has conveyed the dower interest of the wife, or the wife that of the husband. Hundreds of transfers in Iowa are legalized by this measure.

Other legalizing measures are:

S. F. 286, by Crawford, legalizing acts of water works trustees appointed by the judges of the district court, a measure made necessary by a recent supreme court decison, and applicable to cities of the first class and special charter cities.

H. F. 283, by Campbell, legalizing copy of United States supreme court, certified record in case of Burlington & Missouri River Railroad Company, vs. Fremont county.

H. F. 187, by Hurn, to legalize proceedings of councils in cities and towns in cases where ordinances or resolutions were passed under misapprehension of the fact the mayor is a member of the council.

S. F. 40, by Courtright, to legalize publications of notices of incorporation, in cases where such notices were published by daily papers and printed in but one issue a week instead of daily, for the required period of four weeks.

Legalizing measures were also passed affecting the following localities or subjects:

Shannon City, sewer contract at Spirit Lake, town of Rudd, election held in Osceola county, election in independent district of Stanwood in Cedar county, acts of county auditor and supervisors of Lyon county, town of Schaller, town of Minden, town of Cresco and city of Cresco, election held in Dallas county, Aspen Grove Cemetery association of Burlington, town of Conway, voting of bonds by independent school district of Allerton in Wayne county, official acts of Notary N. E. Haskins, official acts of George F. and Herbert McMurtrie, levying of tax by Jefferson county supervisors, town of Sumner, organization of independent school district of Ralston, acts of council of Orleans, town of Laurens, ordinances of Swan, conveyance of real estate to the trustees of Fox River township in Davis county, town of Kinross.

Acts of town of Gravity, the town of Bondurant in Polk county, establishment of free public library at Clinton.

Acts of officials of Hillsdale.

Certain instruments in writing defectively acknowledged.

GENERAL LEGISLATION.

H. F. 331 by Edwards, requiring railroad companies to file plats of lines with county auditors to facilitate certification of assessments by taxing districts.

H. F. 35, by committee on compensation of public officers, fixing the compensation of reporters of the district court at $6 per day and 6 cents per hundred additional for transcribing their notes.

S. F. 197, by municipal code committee, conferring on state health board power to locate pest houses where communities are unable to fix the location.

H. F. 311, by Calderwood, giving each farmers' institute a delegate to the annual state agricultural convention.

H. F. 48, by Hilsinger, fixing compensation of appraisers of property on which the collateral inheritance tax is to be levied at $2 per day and five cents per mile to and from place of appraising. The same compensation applies to all other cases not covered by statute.

S. F. 218, by Blanchard, for the condemnation of a fishway through the Bonaparte dam and its erection.

H. F. 182, by Hasselquist, providing for taking private property for works of internal improvement.

S. F. 337, by Blanchard, defining the crime of sodomy.

S. F. 141, by Whipple, authorizing appointment by district court of trustees to manage, control and invest funds donated for cemetery purposes.

S. F. 299, by Young of Lee, enabling the federal government to take private property in the state for public improvements.

S. F. 163 by Hopkins, relieving retiring state treasurer from liability for taxes collected under laws later held invalid and transferring liability to his successor.

S. F. 30, by municipal code committee, making the mayor presiding officer of the council with power to vote in case of a tie, but not a member of that body; also providing the mayor shall be a member of the council in cities of the first class, with power to vote only in case of a tie.

S. F. 200, by municipal code committee, empowering cities and towns to levy a tax for renewal, extension or repair of water works.

S. F. 203, by municipal code committee, striking out limit of ten days in section 623 of the code regarding notices of publication of levies of special assessments.

S. F. 202, by municipal code committee, amending laws of Twenty-eighth general assembly to permit cities and towns to use water works fund for renewals and extensions to water works.

H. F. 376, by Furry, changing the names of the state hospitals so as to omit word "Insane," as "Mt. Pleasant State Hospital," etc.

H. F. 286, by roads and highways' committee, for consolidation of road districts and making the township the unit of road organization, also providing road taxes be in cash.

S. F. 291 by Bachman, correcting defects in law of the Twenty-eighth general assembly as to practice of veterinary medicine surgery and dentistry.

S. F. 190 by Harper, in case of adoption of biennial elections amendment, providing jurymen in 1905 shall be selected from the poll lists of 1904.

S. F. 243, by Ball, giving cities under 20,000 and towns, jurisdiction over parks beyond corporation limits and providing for the voting of taxes to purchase real estate for park purposes and to pay for park improvements.

H. F. 396 by municipal corporations committee, for a system of bookkeeping in cities and towns that shall show detailed receipts and receipts and disbursements of each fund. Receipts and vouchers must be preserved that show whether any transaction is valid. Statements of receipts and expenditures and reports showing financial condition must be published annually by cities and towns.

H. F. 170, by Dunham, compulsory education measure, applicable to children between 7 and 14 years, except children living more than two miles from any school. The law applies to the latter only in case free transportation is provided. Attendance at least twelve consecutive weeks of each school year at some public, private or parochial school or equivalent instruction from a competent teacher is required.

H. F. 275, by special committee, to enable Shiloh commission to use unexpended balance of about $7,100 of its $50,000 appropriation to prepare for dedication of monuments at Shiloh and for supervision of erection thereof.

H. F. 487, by Clarke, authorizing the executive council to sell furniture and stores for which the state has no further use.

S. F. 199 by municipal code committee, to authorize cities of first class to execute second mortgages and bonds to obtain funds to make extensions and improvements to water systems.

H. F. 96, by Buchanan, to authorize letting of water works contracts in parts in cities of the first class. Ottumwa is particularly interested in the measure, as large improvements to the water system are being prepared for there.

H. F. 400, by Langan of Clinton, a measure to enable the city of Clinton to vote additional taxes to purchase the highway bridge across the Mississippi at that place.

S. F. 267 by Brooks, to provide for the appointment of assistant surgeons for the Soldiers' Home at Marshalltown.

S. F. 268, by Brooks, to authorize township trustees to levy a tax to maintain cemeteries in adjoining townships.

S. F. 195, by Trewin, to provide the property of an insane person shall go towards supporting his family instead of to his own support.

H. F. 266, by English, bringing the road tax law into conformity with the bill passed by the Twenty-ninth general assembly that extends the time of fixing the railroad assessment by the executive council from March to July.

H. F. 111, by Larrabee, a measure in the interest of Oelwein, providing any city of 5,000 or over, may establish a superior court. The old law fixed the minimum limit at 7,000.

S. F. 70, by Molsberry, authorizing a 1 mill levy to support free public libraries.

H. F. 409, by the judiciary committee, granting by a blanket act to the United States government jurisdiction over lands in the state that may be used as sites for federal public buildings. The measure obviates the necessity of a special act in each instance.

H. F. 141, by Boysen, fixing the salaries of sheriffs and deputies. The bill provides the sheriff in counties over 45,000 shall receive $3,500 a year; in counties over 28,000 and under 45,000, $3,000 a year; in counties over 11,000 and under 28,000, $2,000 a year, to be paid in all such cases out of the fees of the office. The bill also provides if the fees of the office are not large enough to meet the salaries as given above the supervisors must pay the sheriff in counties of over 45,000 enough to bring his salary up to $3,500; in counties between 28,000 and 45,000, enough to bring the salary to $2,000; in counties between 11,000 and 28,000, up to $1,800; in counties under 11,000, up to $1,500. The chief deputy is to be paid by the sheriff out of his salary in all cases.

S. F. 28, by Blanchard, reducing from 6 per cent to 5, the interest rate on county warrants.

H. F. 105, by Cummings, to provide that judgments against the garnishee shall not be entered until the principal defendant has had five days' notice of the garnishment proceedings to be served as in the case of original notices.

H. F. 117, by Sweeley, bringing electric railways and apparatus under the provisions of section 4,807 of the code relative to malicious mischief and trespass.

S. F. 12, by Courtright, making it a misdemeanor to carry off the bottles, boxes, kegs or barrels of another.

S. F. 93, by Garst, changing the date when railway corporations shall make reports to the executive council for purposes of assessment from February 15th to April 1st and extending the date for the council to fix the railway assessment from the first Monday in March to the second Monday in July.

S. F. 239, by Hayward, providing express companies shall end their reports for purposes of assessment to the executive council instead of the auditor of state as the old law requires and requiring the council to assess express company the second Monday in July.

H. F. 67, by Mordhorst, providing that actions may be brought against the owners of river craft in any county through which the vessels pass.

H. F. 195, by Wright, changing the date of settlement of the auditor of state with the state treasurer from the first Monday in April, July and October of each year to the first day of each of these months. The annual settlement will be on the first Monday in January as under the old law.

S. F. 83, by Classen, relieving sheriffs of including fees for the lodging of prisoners in their quarterly reports to the supervisors.

S. F. 41, by Courtright, requiring notices of incorporation to be published once each week for four consecutive weeks. The old law made no provision for publication "once each week" and thus worked a hardship of these papers.

S. F. 26, by Alexander, authorizing library boards to condemn grounds for location of libraries and additional library grounds.

S. F. 196, by Trewin, requiring the county attorney to prosecute for the informant and without additional compensation, in cases of appeals from the findings of the commissioners of insanity.

S. F. 192, by Bachman, giving the state board of health power to enforce general health and quarantine regulations when local boards neglect to act. The bill is the outcome of the conflict in authority between the state board and local boards during the recent smallpox epidemic particularly in Des Moines.

S. F. 178, by Tallman, prohibiting a person feloniously causing the death of another receiving a distributing share of his victim's estate.

S. F. 204, by Crawford, making chapter 25 of the acts of the Twenty-eighth general assembly relating to the management of water works and the disbursement of water works funds, applicable to cities under special charter.

H. F. 41, by Jaeger, authorizing cities having a population of 22,000 to elect park commissioners and levy taxes for park purposes. The old law provides cities of 25,000 and over may have these powers. The bill is specially desired by Clinton.

S. F. 87, by Harriman, increasing from 250 to 350 the number of reports that may be published of the Iowa Academy of Sciences.

H. F. 47, by Hilsinger, intended to make the provisons of section 3,439 of the code as to limitations of action on judgments apply to all judgments rendered after the code of 1873 went into effect and prior to the taking effect of the code of 1897. The act allows one year after the taking effect of this measure for an action to be brought on any judgment rendered during the period, which would otherwise be barred by this bill.

H. F. 146, by Dunham, authorizing boards of supervisors to build bridges that cost over $5,000, without submitting the question to the vote of the taxpayers. It is designed to facilitate building of bridges on county lines.

S. F. by Hubbard, making taxes on property in hands of receivers a preferred claim.

S. F. 296, by Trewin, providing for the publication of 7,500 copies of the code.

S. F. 304, by Junkin, granting to the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway Co. a right of way through the land of the institution for feeble-minded at Glenwood.

S. F. 261, by Fitchpatrick, establishing the rank of commandant and instructor of military science and tactics in the state educational institutions. The rank of colonel of cadets is given the commandant.

H. F. 55, by Boysen, increasing to 21 years, the age at which girls may be committed to the industrial school at Mitchellville.

H. F. 156, by Edwards, defining the crime of kidnaping for ransom and making it punishable by life imprisonment or a term of not less than ten years.

H. F. 214, by Buchanan, making the legal weight of Hungarian and millet seed 50 pounds to the bushel, instead of 48 as the old law provides.

H. F. 130, by Fields, prohibiting fishing in the Big Sioux except with hook and line.

H. F. 31, by Buchanan, prohibiting the sale of cocaine, except on prescription for medical purpose. Registered physicians and licensed dentists may purchase it for professional use.

S. F. 1, by Trewin, providing for the compilation of the laws of the Twenty-seventh, Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth general assemblies, and for their annotation, and the code and rules of the supreme court to and including the May term, 1902, all to be published as a code supplement. A supervising committee is provided and an appropriation made therefor.

S. F. 46, by Blanchard, empowering townships, cities and towns to vote a tax not to exceed five per centum in aid of electric railroads. Trolley and electric railroads are brought within the provisions of sections 2,084 to 2,090 inclusive, but it is provided that no stock shall be issued by any such company except upon payment therefor of the full value in cash or its equivalent.

S. F. 159, by Allyn, providing for the purchase by the state of engravings, cuts and plates for state publications.

S. F. 234, by Trewin, giving Cedar Rapids and Ottumwa control of the river fronts within the corporate limits of those cities, and providing for commissions to direct improvements, such commissions to consist of three members each to be appointed by the governor upon petition of the cities.

S. F. 281, by Crawford, providing for appointment of waterworks trustees by mayors instead of district court judges. The bill has particular application to Dubuque and Sioux City.

S. F. 21, by Hubbard, making taxes levied on buildings as personal property a lien thereon.

H. F. 68, by Mordhorst, bring steamboats and other river craft under sections of the code providing the manner of bringing actions, specifying that actions may be brought upon any agent of the same wherever found.

The poor author is doubly poor when he is compelled to borrow his thoughts.

President of foreign missions—"How in the world did all these sofa cushions and fairy lamps come to be in this box for the Fiji Islanders?" Miss Hairbrain (earnestly)—"W-why! I thought with all their spears and war clubs, that if they only had a few cushions and jeweled lamps they could make such perfectly lovely cozy corners."

The other day, when the jury in a murder trial in the Louisville courts had retired to their room, the foreman said: "Gentlemen, this is a serious case we have to decide. A man's life may be forfeited by our decision. How many Christians are among us?" Nine men raised their hands. "Will one of you pray?" asked the foreman. One of the oldest jurors said he would do his best. All knelt, and a most earnest and impressive prayer was offered. Balloting was then begun. Several jurors were in favor of a life sentence, and others for terms as short as eight years. The jury finally agreed on eighteen years.

"It was a dhirty tarick annyhow,' growled Mr. Mulcahey. "Phwat's thot?" asked Mr. O'Tunder. A Catch in His Back.

Palmer, Oregon, April 14th.—W. J. Uppendahl of this place has had a great deal of trouble recently with his back. Every time he went to do the least bit of lifting he used to have what he called "a catch" in his back. He says:

"It did not have to be very hard work to give me such a severe pain that I could not move.

"I suffered quite a long time before I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I used four boxes and now I can work as hard as any one and my back is as stout and strong as it ever was.

"My wife used some of the pills too and she thinks there is nothing that beats them.

"I can positively recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone who has a pain in his back, for I know they will cure it."

Gladstone told Lord Ronald Gower, that once when he visited Rome he accidentally met Macaulay, who introduced himself to the statesman. On Macaulay's telling him that he took a daily walk in St. Peters, Gladstone asked him what most attracted him in that place. "The temperature," was was the answer.

Lost His Rheumatism By the use of a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil.

SERGEANT JEREMIAH MAHER, of Ardcath, Royal Irish Constabulary, says: "My friend, Mr. Thomas Hand, has been a great sufferer from rheumatism in the back and joints for the last four years, during which time he has employed many different methods of treatment, but obtained no relief whatever, and for the last two years has been unable to walk without a stick, and sometimes two sticks, and was in great pain constantly. I induced him to procure a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, which he applied with the most astonishing and marvellous effects. Before he had finished using the contents of the first bottle he could walk readily without the aid of a stick, and after a few applications from the second bottle he was free from pain, and has been ever since; and although fifty years of age and a farmer, he can walk and work without experiencing any pain or difficulty whatever."

CONGER MAY COME HOME.

President Contemplates Naming Rockhill to Post.

Washington, April 14.—The name of W. W. Rockhill, at present director of the bureau of American republics, is under consideration in connection with the Chinese mission, shortly to be vacated by Minister Conger. When Mr. Conger was tentatively a candidate for the republican gubernatorial nomination in Iowa, and it was expected that he would resign his mission, Mr. Rockhill had been practically selected by the late President McKinley to succeed Mr. Conger at Peking, but the change in the political programme suspended the execution of this plan.

REV. DR. TALMAGE DEAD

THE NOTED PREACHER PASSED AWAY AT WASHINGTON.

It Had Been Evident for Some Days That He Could not Recover.

Washington, April 14.—Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, the noted Presbyterian divine, died Saturday at 9 o'clock at his residence in this city. It had been evident for some days that there was no hope of recovery, and attending physicians so informed the family. The patient gradually grew weaker until life passed away so quietly that even the members of the family, many of whom were watching at the bedside, hardly knew that he had gone.

The immediate cause of death was inflammation of the brain. Dr. Talmage was in poor health when he returned from Washington for Mexico on a vacation six weeks ago. He returned suffering from influenza and laryngitis catarrhal conditions. Since his return to Washington some time ago he has been quite ill. Until Thursday, however, fears for his death were not entertained.

At Dr. Talmage's bedside, besides his wife, were these members of his family: Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage, Chicago; Mrs. Warren G. Smith, Brooklyn; Mrs. Daniel Mangam, Brooklyn; Mrs. Allen E. Donnan, Richmond; Mrs. Clarence Wycoff and Miss Talmage, Washington.

PEACE SEEMS IN SIGHT.

Boers and British Are Likely to Get Together.

London, April 14.—"Peace is within measurable distance."

That probably sums up the present crop of rumors, conjectures and deductions which has Great Britain by the ears.

"Is it peace?" meets the eye in glaring posters of afternoon newspapers and the question is echoed throughout the United Kingdom. As pointed out in these dispatches and confirmed at midnight by Mr. Balfour, the government leader of the house of commons, the reports of the definite end of a conflict of such length, involving so many lasting and intricate issues, being arrived at practically without any time being devoted to negotiations are palpably premature. It is announced that the ministers at yesterday's meeting, which lasted an hour, discussed a communication from Lord Kitchener. This is quite within reason and government circles expect several messages from Kitchener before anything definite can be announced. While Lord Kitchener's message may have been of vital importance, the Associated Press has good reasons to believe that the sudden summons of the cabinet ministers was due to a desire to decide whether or not the presentation of the budget could be postponed until the Klersdorp negotiations are settled one way or the other.

Whatever the proposalsof the chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, may be, they are bound to be greeted by storms of criticism from various quarters. Peace will not modify the crying need of additional revenue, but it would take off the sting from the additional taxation which is bound to raise a protest from every class of industry affected. In the national jubilation over the end of the war these individual protests would be lost to sight. It will be no surprise if it is announced that the budget presentation once more has been postponed, and if this does not take place parliamentary circles will regard it as one of the best omens that the government practically is assured of a successful termination of the Klerksdorp conference.

LULL BEFORE THE STORM.

A Political Crisis is Expected at Opening of Chamber of Deputies.

Brussels, April 14.—This exciting week ends with the lull before the storm. The coming week has already been dubbed "revision week," and it promises to witness important events. A general strike has been proclaimed for Monday, and Wednesday a political crisis will be reached by the opening in the chamber of deputies of the discussion of the question of the revision of the constitution on which the Belgian people are now divided. The socialist and liberal have for a long time past been seeking to force the clerical government to an issue on the question of electoral law, the modification of which will necessitate a revision of the constitution.

At the present time any elector can cast from one to three votes, according to his qaulifications. The socialists and liberals claim that working men cannot obtain more than two votes, whereas, the rich get three; and moreover, that in the rural districts, voters who are under the domination of the priests and who support the present government, are often fraudulently given three votes instead of the two to which, at the most, they are entitled.

The average man deceives himself oftener than he does others.

Health will come with all its blessings to those who know the way, and it is mainly a question of right-living, with all the term implies, but the efforts which strengthen the system, games which refresh and the foods which nourish are important, each in a way, while it is advantageous to have knowledge of the best methods of promoting freedom from unsanitary conditions. To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the agents used should be of the best quality and of known value, and the one remedy most beneficially and pleasantly, as a laxative, is—Syrup of Figs—manufactured by California Fig Syrup Co.

With a understanding of the fact that many physical ills are of a transient character promptly to the gentle action of Syrup of Figs, gladness and comfort come to one would remove the torpor and strain and congestion attendant upon a constipated condition of the system, take Syrup of Figs and enjoy freedom from the aches and pains, the colds and headaches and the depression due to inactivity of the bowels. In case of any organic trouble it is well to consult a competent physician, but when a laxative is required remember that the most permanently gratifying results will follow personal cooperation with the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs. It is for sale by all reliable druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

The excellence of Syrup of Figs comes from the beneficial effects of the plants used in the combination and also from the method of manufacture which ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product essential in a perfect family laxative. All the members of the family from the youngest to the most advanced in years may use it whenever a laxative is needed and are alike in its beneficial effects. We do not claim that Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of known value, but it possesses this great advantage over all other laxatives that it acts gently and pleasantly without disturbing natural functions, in any way, as it is free from every objectionable quality or substance. To get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine and the full name of the Co.—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package.

Railroad Notes.

One Way Colonists Rates

will be in effect at all stations of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Ry. on all days during the months of March and April.

The principal points to which these rates will apply are Denver, Salt Lake City, Helena, Butte, Spokane, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle, but there are many other points one can reach on such rates.

One-Way Settlers' Rates

will also be in effect from all points on this line to points in northwestern Minnesota and North Dakota on March 25th, April 1st and 8th.

If you are thinking of making the trip, it will pay you to inquire of nearest B. C. R. & N. agent for full information. apr 30

Speciol Low Rate to California.

During March and April the Iowa Central Road will sell oneway excursion tickets to points in California from all its stations in Iowa and Illinois at a special low rate affording a splendik opportunity to visit the Pacific Coast. Elegantly equipped tourist cars, with all the modern conveniences of travel, leave for the Coast every Tuesday in March and April carrying the tourist through without change and free from many of the discomforts and annoyances of winter travel. For full informa ion, reservations in tourist car, rates and circulars, call on your local Iowa Central agent, or address Geo. S. Batty, G P & T A, Marshalltown, Iowa.

Settlers and Homeseekers, Attention.

The Minneapolis & St. Lo is Ry. is making very low rates to all points in Minnesota, North Dakota and the Northwest, including Pacific coast. Before making arrangements elsewhere, consult M. & St. L. agents.

Before you select your route, get the cheap rates offered by the Minneapolis & St. Louis R R to all points in Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Washington and Pacific Coast. Quickest service and best accommodations. Ask M. & St. L. agents for particulars.

Saved Many a Time.

Don't neglect coughs and colds even if it is spring. Such cases often result seriously at this season just because people are careless. A dose of One Minute Cough Cure will remove all danger. Absolutely safe. Acts at once. Sure cure for coughs, colds, croup, grip, bronchitis, and other throat and lung troubles. "I have used One Minute Cough Cure several years," says Postmaster C. O. Dawson, Barr, Ill., "It is the very best cough medicine on the market. It has saved me many a severe spell of sickness and I warmly recommend it." The children's favorite. J. L. Harr.

A MOST LIBERAL OFFER

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper the Iowa Homestead, its special Farmers' Institute editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.45. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmer Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only. Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

LAND! LAND!

TO THE FARMER AND HIS WIFE.

The TIMES has arranged with the Journal of Agriculture, St. Louis, Mo., so that subscribers may receive that valuable paper a whole year for 50 cents, which is just half of the regular price. It is generall conceded that the Journal of Agriculture is one of the finest and most influential farm and household papers in the United States, and that it holds a secure position among the leading lights of the agricultural world. It was established in 1866 (36 years ago) is published weekly and contains 16 large pages. Numbered among its contributors are men whose articles on agricultural matters are accepted as authority. Every issue contains valuable pointers on agriculture, horticulture, poultry, live stock, dairy, bees, etc., besides fiction, poetry, humor and miscellaneous matter. Once a month a beautiful 16-page Magazine, with cover of special design, is issued by the Journal, which appeals especially to the ladies owing to the stories, fashion notes and other fine reading matter contained therein.

The special price of 50 cents hardly pays postage and is only made to introduce the Journal into the homes of our readers. All those who wish to take advantage of this offer will please send 50 cents (in stamps if desired) to the editor of the KLEMME TIMES, Klemme, Iowa, who will arrange at once for a year's subscription in their favor to the Journal of Agriculture. Mention this offer and write name and full address plainly.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would soon cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

DOINGS IN AND NEAR ELL CENTER

Dished up to Suit all Classes by Our Special Correspondent.

Capt. Collins visited at A. Gibbs' last week.

T. Gauley was a caller here last week a few days.

J. w. Allen and wife visited friends here Saturday.

H. H. Burman visited his parents in Garner Monday.

Henry Swarz has set out a nice grove on the Barz place.

Mr. Kuskie is building some durable fences on his farm.

The dust storms still continue to be a disagreeable feature of the weather.

Ray Burman and Charles Pomplun were over Sunday callers at Ell Center.

Messrs. Gardner and Corning have completed their tiling on the Cummings farm.

R. Nesbit, J. Carothers and Frank Marshall have been helping w. Carr, with his ditching.

Wallace Carr is making a mammoth ditch through the old Teeple place and the adjoining land on the east.

Brunnie Post was hopping around on one foot last week, caused by running a harrow tooth in his leg.

Miss Olive Braund is not recovering from her illness as fast as her friends hoped for, and it is feared that an operation will have to be performed to remove a tumor.

The windy weather has caused some of the girls to have sore lips, but some of the boys say that the prompt application of a little tulip salve will effect a speedy cure.

John Christie and w. N. Hall of Garner have been out to Harry Rice's the last fortnight making some fences and setting out trees and otherwise improving the Evergreen stock farm.

We notice that the authorities of Concord township have forbidden the dumping of rubbish along the public highways. If Ell township would do the same what a beautiful appearance they would present.

Horace Lawhorn and wife gave a grand opening ball at their home last Thursday evening, with plenty of good music furnished by Messrs. Schoper, Kuskie and Lawhorn, and all the dancing one could desire. The supper was a very imposing affair such as the Lawhorn family are noted for, and all present had a splendid time.
